B. PRODUCTION ORDERS

805. Production orders.

A judge<sup>1</sup> may, on an application made to him by an appropriate officer<sup>2</sup>, make a production order in relation to a money laundering, confiscation or civil recovery investigation<sup>3</sup> if he is satisfied that each of the requirements for the making of the order is fulfilled<sup>4</sup>. A production order is an order either requiring the person that the application for the order specifies as appearing to be in possession or control of material to produce it to an appropriate officer for him to take away, or requiring that person to give an appropriate officer access to the material, within the period stated in the order<sup>5</sup>.

A production order does not require a person to produce, or give access to, privileged material<sup>6</sup>. Nor does it require a person to produce, or give access to, excluded material<sup>7</sup>. However, it does have effect in spite of any restriction on the disclosure of information, however imposed<sup>8</sup>.

An appropriate officer may take copies of any material which is produced, or to which access is given, in compliance with a production order<sup>9</sup>. Material produced in compliance with a production order may be retained for so long as it is necessary to retain it, as opposed to copies of it, in connection with the investigation for the purposes of which the order was made<sup>10</sup>. But if an appropriate officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the material may need to be produced for the purposes of any legal proceedings, and it might otherwise be unavailable for those purposes, it may be retained until the proceedings are concluded<sup>11</sup>.

Provision may be made by Order in Council to enable equivalent orders to be made for the purposes of an external investigation<sup>12</sup>.

1 For the purposes of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 343-379, in relation to an application for the purposes of: (1) a money laundering investigation or a confiscation investigation, a judge is a judge entitled to exercise the jurisdiction of the Crown Court; (2) a civil recovery investigation, a judge is a judge of the High Court: see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 343. For the meanings of 'money laundering investigation', 'confiscation investigation' and 'civil recovery investigation' see PARA 804 notes 3-5 ante.

An application for a production order may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers: s 351(1). As to the application procedure and the grounds for making an order see PARA 806 post.

2 For the meaning of 'appropriate officer' see PARA 804 note 2 ante.

3 Where:

222 (1) an appropriate officer makes an application under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 345, 363 (customer information orders: see PARA 814 post) or s 370 (account monitoring orders: see PARA 816 post) for the purposes of a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation; or

223 (2) the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency makes an application under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 357 (disclosure orders: see PARA 812 post) for the purposes of a confiscation investigation, then, subject to the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 449 (which makes provision for members of staff of the Assets Recovery Agency to use pseudonyms), the appropriate officer or the Director of the Assets Recovery agency, as the case may be, must provide the judge with proof of his identity and, if he is an accredited financial investigator, his accreditation under s 3: CrimPR 62.3.

4 See the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 345(1). As to applications see Practice Direction--Civil Recovery Proceedings paras 8.1-13.5.

5 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 345(4), 416(2), (9). The period stated in a production order must be a period of seven days beginning with the day on which the order is made, unless it appears to the judge by whom the order is made that a longer or shorter period would be appropriate in the particular circumstances: s 345(5).

Where any of the material specified in an application for a production order consists of information contained in a computer the following provisions apply: s 349(1).

If the order is an order requiring a person to produce the material to an appropriate officer for him to take away, it has effect as an order to produce the material in a form in which it can be taken away by him and in which it is visible and legible: s 349(2).

If the order is an order requiring a person to give an appropriate officer access to the material, it has effect as an order to give him access to the material in a form in which it is visible and legible: s 349(3).

As to the enforcement in Scotland or Northern Ireland of an English or Welsh production order, and the enforcement in England and Wales of a Scottish or Northern Irish production order, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 443(1)(d), (3), (4); and the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in different parts of the United Kingdom) Order 2003, SI 2003/425.

6 Ibid s 348(1). Privileged material is any material which the person would be entitled to refuse to produce on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court: s 348(2). As to legal professional privilege see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION vol 8(1) (2003 Reissue) PARAS 452-453; CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 972; LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARAS 740-741; LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 1146.

7 Ibid s 348(3). For the meaning of 'excluded material' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 11; and PARA 875 post (definition applied by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 379).

8 Ibid s 348(4).

9 Ibid s 348(5).

10 Ibid s 348(6).

11 Ibid s 348(7).

12 An 'external investigation' is an investigation by an overseas authority into whether property has been obtained as a result of or in connection with criminal conduct, the extent or whereabouts of property obtained as a result of or in connection with criminal conduct, or whether a money laundering offence has been committed: ibid s 447(3) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 108(1), (4), 174(2), Sch 17 Pt 2). An 'overseas authority' is an authority which has responsibility in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom for making a request to an authority in another country or territory (including the United Kingdom) to prohibit dealing with relevant property, for carrying out an investigation into whether property has been obtained as a result of or in connection with criminal conduct, or for carrying out an investigation into whether a money laundering offence has been committed: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 447(11). Her Majesty may by Order in Council make provision: (1) to enable orders equivalent to those under Pt 8 (ss 341-416) to be made, and warrants equivalent to those under Pt 8 to be issued, for the purposes of an external investigation (s 445(1)(a)); and (2) creating offences in relation to external investigations which are equivalent to offences created by Pt 8 (s 445(1)(b)). Such an order may include provision corresponding to any provision of Pt 8 (subject to any specified modifications) (s 445(2)(a)), provision about the functions of the Secretary of State, the Lord Advocate, the Scottish Ministers, the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency, the Director General of the Serious Organised Crime Agency, the Director of the Serious Fraud Office, constables and officers of Revenue and Customs (s 445(2)(b) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 168, 178); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7)) and provision about evidence (including evidence required to establish whether an investigation is being carried out in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom) (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 445(2)(c)), but such an order must not provide for a disclosure order to be made for the purposes of an external investigation into whether a money laundering offence has been committed (s 445(3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the establishment of the Serious Organised Crime Agency and the appointment of the Director General of the Serious Crime Agency see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 1, Sch 1; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 430 et seq. As to officers of Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

Rules of court may make such provision as is necessary or expedient to give effect to an Order in Council made under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pt 8 (including provision about the exercise of functions of a judge conferred or imposed by the order): s 446.

806. Application.

The application for a production order must state that:

- 936 (1) a person specified in the application is subject to a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation, or that property specified in the application is subject to a civil recovery investigation<sup>1</sup>;
- 937 (2) the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation<sup>2</sup>;
- 938 (3) the order is sought in relation to material, or material of a description, specified in the application<sup>3</sup>;
- 939 (4) a person specified in the application appears to be in possession or control of the material<sup>4</sup>.

In order to exercise the power to make a production order, the judge must be satisfied that each of the requirements for its making is fulfilled<sup>5</sup>. The requirements are that there must be reasonable grounds:

- 940 (a) for suspecting that, in the case of a confiscation investigation, the person that the application for the order specifies as being subject to the investigation has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>6</sup>;
- 941 (b) for suspecting that, in the case of a civil recovery investigation, the property<sup>7</sup> that the application for the order specifies as being subject to the investigation is recoverable property<sup>8</sup> or associated property<sup>9</sup>;
- 942 (c) for suspecting that, in the case of a money laundering investigation, the person that the application for the order specifies as being subject to the investigation has committed a money laundering offence<sup>10</sup>;
- 943 (d) for believing that the person the application specifies as appearing to be in possession or control of the material so specified is in possession or control of it<sup>11</sup>;
- 944 (e) for believing that the material is likely to be of substantial value, whether or not by itself, to the investigation for the purposes of which the order is sought<sup>12</sup>;
- 945 (f) for believing that it is in the public interest for the material to be produced or for access to it to be given, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the material is obtained, and to the circumstances under which the person that the application specifies as appearing to be in possession or control of the material holds it<sup>13</sup>.

3 Ibid s 345(3)(b).

4 Ibid s 345(3)(c).

5 Ibid ss 345(1), 346(1).

6 Ibid s 346(2)(a). 'Criminal conduct' means conduct which constitutes an offence in any part of the United Kingdom, or would constitute an offence in any part of the United Kingdom if it occurred there: ss 413(1), 416(9). A person benefits from conduct if he obtains property or a pecuniary advantage as a result of or in connection with the conduct: ss 413(2), 416(9). References to property or a pecuniary advantage obtained in connection with conduct include references to property or a pecuniary advantage obtained in both that connection and some other: ss 413(3), 416(9). If a person benefits from conduct his benefit is the property or pecuniary advantage obtained as a result of or in connection with the conduct: ss 413(4), 416(9). It is immaterial whether conduct occurred before or after the passing of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, and whether property or a pecuniary advantage constituting a benefit from conduct was obtained before or after the passing of that Act: ss 413(5), 416(9). 10 Ibid s 346(2)(c). An offence under s 327, s 328 or s 329 (see PARAS 791-793 ante) is a money laundering offence: ss 415(1), 416(9). Each of the following is a money laundering offence: (1) an attempt, conspiracy or incitement to commit an offence under s 327, s 328 or s 329; and (2) aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence under s 327, s 328 or s 329: s 415(2), 416(9).

A production order<sup>1</sup> may be made in relation to material in the possession or control of an authorised government department<sup>2</sup>. An order so made may require any officer of the department, whether named in the order or not, who may for the time being be in possession or control of the material to comply with it<sup>3</sup>.

An order containing such a requirement must be served as if the proceedings were civil proceedings against the department<sup>4</sup>.

If an order contains such a requirement:

- 946 (1) the person on whom it is served must take all reasonable steps to bring it to the attention of the officer concerned<sup>5</sup>;
- 947 (2) any other officer of the department who is in receipt of the order must also take all reasonable steps to bring it to the attention of the officer concerned<sup>6</sup>.

If the order is not brought to the attention of the officer concerned within the period stated in the order<sup>7</sup> the person on whom it is served must report the reasons for the failure to:

- 948 (a) a judge entitled to exercise the jurisdiction of the Crown Court, in the case of an order made for the purposes of a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation<sup>8</sup>;
- 949 (b) a High Court judge, in the case of an order made for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation<sup>9</sup>.

809. Supplementary provisions relating to production orders and orders to grant entry.

Rules of court may make provision as to the practice and procedure to be followed in connection with proceedings relating to production orders and orders to grant entry<sup>1</sup>.

An application to discharge or vary a production order or an order to grant entry may be made to the court<sup>2</sup> by the person who applied for the order, or by any person affected by the order<sup>3</sup>. The court may discharge the order or may vary it<sup>4</sup>. If an accredited financial investigator<sup>5</sup>, a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs applies for a production order or an order to grant entry, an application to discharge or vary the order need not be made by the same accredited financial investigator, constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs<sup>6</sup>.

Production orders and orders to grant entry have effect as if they were orders of the court<sup>7</sup>.

These provisions<sup>8</sup> do not apply to orders made in England and Wales for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation<sup>9</sup>.

1 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 351(2). As to production orders and orders to grant entry see PARAS 805, 807 ante.

2 References to the court are references to: (1) the Crown Court, in relation to an order for the purposes of a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation; (2) the High Court, in relation to an order for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation: ibid s 344.

3 Ibid s 351(3). References to a person who applied for a production order or an order to grant entry must be construed accordingly: s 351(6). Where a procedural order has been made, the person required to comply with it may apply in writing to the appropriate officer of the Crown Court for the order to be discharged or varied; and on hearing such an application a circuit judge may discharge the order or make such variations to it as he thinks fit: CrimPR 56.4(1). For the meaning of 'appropriate officer' see PARA 804 note 2 ante. Where a person proposes so to make an application, he must give a copy of the application, not later than 48 hours before the making of the application, to a constable at the police station specified in the order, together with a notice indicating the time and place at which the application for discharge or variation is to be made: CrimPR 56.4(2). For these purposes, 'constable' includes a person commissioned by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs; and 'police station' includes a place for the time being occupied by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs: CrimPR 56.4(4); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7). A circuit judge may, however, direct that CrimPR 56.4(2) need not be complied with if he is satisfied that the person making the application has good reason to seek a discharge or variation of the order as soon as possible and it is not practicable to comply with CrimPR 56.4(2): see CrimPR 56.4(2). ## C. SEARCH AND SEIZURE WARRANTS

810. Search and seizure warrants.

A judge<sup>1</sup> may, on an application made to him by an appropriate officer<sup>2</sup>, issue a search and seizure warrant if he is satisfied that either of the requirements for the issuing of the warrant is fulfilled<sup>3</sup>.

The application for a search and seizure warrant must state:

- 950 (1) that a person specified in the application is subject to a confiscation investigation<sup>4</sup> or a money laundering investigation<sup>5</sup>, or that property specified in the application is subject to a civil recovery investigation<sup>6</sup>;
- 951 (2) that the warrant is sought for the purposes of the investigation<sup>7</sup>;
- 952 (3) that the warrant is sought in relation to the premises<sup>8</sup> specified in the application<sup>9</sup>;
- 953 (4) that the warrant is sought in relation to material specified in the application, or that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material falling within specified provisions<sup>10</sup> on the premises<sup>11</sup>.

A search and seizure warrant is a warrant authorising an appropriate person to enter and search the premises specified in the application for the warrant, and to seize and retain any material found there which is likely to be of substantial value, whether or not by itself, to the investigation for the purposes of which the application is made<sup>12</sup>.

An appropriate person is:

- 954 (a) a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs, if the warrant is sought for the purposes of a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation<sup>13</sup>;
- 955 (b) a named member of the staff of the Assets Recovery Agency<sup>14</sup>, if the warrant is sought for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation<sup>15</sup>.

A search and seizure warrant does not confer the right to seize privileged material<sup>16</sup> or excluded material<sup>17</sup>.

Provision may be made by Order in Council to enable equivalent warrants to be issued for the purposes of an external investigation<sup>18</sup>.

The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 356 makes further provision in respect of search and seizure warrants under s 352 sought for the purposes of civil recovery investigations: s 356(1). An application for a warrant may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers: s 356(2). A warrant may be issued subject to conditions: s 356(3). A warrant continues in force until the end of the period of one month starting with the day on which it is issued: s 356(4). A warrant authorises the person it names to require any information which is held in a computer and is accessible from the premises specified in the application for the warrant, and which the named person believes relates to any matter relevant to the investigation, to be produced in a form in which it can be taken away, and in which it is visible and legible: s 356(5). If the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency gives written authority for members of staff of the Agency to accompany the person a warrant names when executing it, and a warrant is issued, the authorised members have the same powers under it as the person it names: ss 1(1), 356(6). A warrant may include provision authorising a person who is exercising powers under it to do other things which are specified in the warrant, and need to be done in order to give effect to it: s 356(7). Copies may be taken of any material seized under a warrant: s 356(8). Material seized under a warrant may be retained for so long as it is necessary to retain it (as opposed to copies of it) in connection with the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant was issued: s 356(9). But if the Director has reasonable grounds for believing that the material may need to be produced for the purposes of any legal proceedings, and that it might otherwise be unavailable for those purposes, it may be retained until the proceedings are concluded: s 356(10).

As to the enforcement in Scotland or Northern Ireland of an English or Welsh search and seizure warrant, and the enforcement in England and Wales of a Scottish search warrant or Northern Irish search and seizure warrant, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 443(1)(e), (3), (4); and the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in different parts of the United Kingdom) Order 2003, SI 2003/425.

Requirements for the issue of a search and seizure warrant.

811. Requirements for the issue of a search and seizure warrant.

There are alternative requirements for the issue of a search and seizure warrant<sup>1</sup>.

The first alternative is that a production order<sup>2</sup> made in relation to material has not been complied with and there are reasonable grounds for believing that the material is on the premises specified in the application for the warrant<sup>3</sup>.

The second alternative requirement is satisfied if there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that:

- 956 (1) in the case of a confiscation investigation<sup>4</sup>, the person specified in the application for the warrant has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>5</sup>;
- 957 (2) in the case of a civil recovery investigation<sup>6</sup>, the property<sup>7</sup> specified in the application for the warrant is recoverable property<sup>8</sup> or associated property<sup>9</sup>;
- 958 (3) in the case of a money laundering investigation<sup>10</sup>, the person specified in the application for the warrant has committed a money laundering offence<sup>11</sup>, and either the first or second set of the following conditions apply<sup>12</sup>.

The first set of conditions is that there are reasonable grounds for believing that any material on the premises<sup>13</sup> specified in the application for the warrant is likely to be of substantial value, whether or not by itself, to the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant is sought; it is in the public interest for the material to be obtained, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the material is obtained; and it would not be appropriate to make a production order for any one or more of specified reasons<sup>14</sup>.

The second set of conditions is that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material on the premises specified in the application for the warrant and that the material falls within specified provisions<sup>15</sup>; there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is in the public interest for the material to be obtained, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the material is obtained; and that any one or more of the following requirements is met<sup>16</sup>. Those requirements are: (a) that it is not practicable to communicate with any person entitled to grant entry to the premises<sup>17</sup>; (b) that entry to the premises will not be granted unless a warrant is produced<sup>18</sup>; (c) that the investigation might be seriously prejudiced unless an appropriate person<sup>19</sup> arriving at the premises is able to secure immediate entry to them<sup>20</sup>.

- 14 Ibid s 353(3). The specified reasons are:
  - 224 (1) that it is not practicable to communicate with any person against whom the production order could be made (s 353(4)(a));
  - 225 (2) that it is not practicable to communicate with any person who would be required to comply with an order to grant entry to the premises (s 353(4)(b)); and
  - 226 (3) that the investigation might be seriously prejudiced unless an appropriate person is able to secure immediate access to the material (s 353(4)(c)).
- 15 Ie material falling within ibid s 353(6)-(8).

In the case of a confiscation investigation, material falls within s 353(6) if it cannot be identified at the time of the application but it: (1) relates to the person specified in the application, the question whether he has benefited from his criminal conduct, or any question as to the extent or whereabouts of his benefit from his criminal conduct; and (2) is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant is sought: s 353(6).

In the case of a civil recovery investigation, material falls within s 353(7) if it cannot be identified at the time of the application but it: (a) relates to the property specified in the application, the question whether it is recoverable property or associated property, the question as to who holds any such property, any question as to whether the person who appears to hold any such property holds other property which is recoverable property, or any question as to the extent or whereabouts of any such property; and (b) is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant is sought: s 353(7).

In the case of a money laundering investigation, material falls within s 353(8) if it cannot be identified at the time of the application but it: (i) relates to the person specified in the application or the question whether he has committed a money laundering offence; and (ii) is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant is sought: s 353(8).
- 16 Ibid s 353(5).
- 17 Ibid s 353(9)(a).
- 18 Ibid s 353(9)(b).
- 19 An appropriate person is: (1) a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs, if the warrant is sought for the purposes of a confiscation investigation or a money laundering investigation; (2) a member of the staff of the Assets Recovery Agency, if the warrant is sought for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation: s 353(10); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7). MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(1) MONEY LAUNDERING OFFENCES/(v) Money Laundering Investigations, Confiscation Investigations and Civil Recovery Investigations/D. DISCLOSURE ORDERS/812. Disclosure orders.

D. DISCLOSURE ORDERS

812. Disclosure orders.

A disclosure order is an order authorising the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency<sup>1</sup> to give to any person the Director considers has relevant information<sup>2</sup> notice in writing requiring him to do, with respect to any matter relevant to the investigation for the purposes of which the order is sought, any or all of the following:

- 959 (1) answer questions, either at a time specified in the notice or at once, at a place so specified;
- 960 (2) provide information specified in the notice, by a time and in a manner so specified; and
- 961 (3) produce documents<sup>3</sup>, or documents of a description, specified in the notice, either at or by a time so specified or at once, and in a manner so specified<sup>4</sup>.

A judge<sup>5</sup> may, on an application made to him by the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency, make a disclosure order if he is satisfied that each of the requirements for the making of the order is fulfilled<sup>6</sup>. No application for a disclosure order may be made in relation to a money laundering investigation<sup>7</sup>.

The application for a disclosure order must state that a person specified in the application is subject to a confiscation investigation<sup>8</sup> which is being carried out by the Director and the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation; or that property<sup>9</sup> specified in the application is subject to a civil recovery investigation<sup>10</sup> and the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation<sup>11</sup>.

The requirements for the making of a disclosure order are that:

- 962 (a) there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that, in the case of a confiscation investigation, the person specified in the application for the order has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>12</sup>; or, in the case of a civil recovery investigation, the property specified in the application for the order is recoverable property<sup>13</sup> or associated property<sup>14</sup>;
- 963 (b) there must be reasonable grounds for believing that information which may be provided in compliance with a requirement imposed under the order is likely to be of substantial value, whether or not by itself, to the investigation for the purposes of which the order is sought<sup>15</sup>;
- 964 (c) there must be reasonable grounds for believing that it is in the public interest for the information to be provided, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the information is obtained<sup>16</sup>.

With specified exceptions<sup>17</sup>, a statement made by a person in response to a requirement imposed on him under a disclosure order may not be used in evidence against him in criminal proceedings<sup>18</sup>.

An application to discharge or vary a disclosure order, other than one made for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation<sup>19</sup>, may be made to the court by the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency or any person affected by the order<sup>20</sup>. The court may discharge or vary the order<sup>21</sup>.

Provision may be made by Order in Council to enable equivalent orders to be made for the purposes of an external investigation<sup>22</sup>.

1 As to the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 430 et seq.

2 Relevant information is information, whether or not contained in a document, which the Director considers to be relevant to the investigation: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 357(5).

3 'Document' means anything in which information of any description is recorded: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 118(1); definition applied by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 379, 416(2), (9).

4 Ibid ss 1(2), 357(4). A person is not bound to comply with a requirement imposed by a notice given under a disclosure order unless evidence of authority to give the notice is produced to him: s 357(6).

A disclosure order does not confer the right to require a person to answer any privileged question, provide any privileged information or produce any privileged document, except that a lawyer may be required to provide the name and address of a client of his: s 361(1). A privileged question is a question which the person would be entitled to refuse to answer on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court: s 361(2). Privileged information is any information which the person would be entitled to refuse to provide on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court: s 361(3). Privileged material is any material which the person would be entitled to refuse to produce on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court: s 361(4). A disclosure order does not confer the right to require a person to produce excluded material: s 361(5).

A disclosure order has effect in spite of any restriction on the disclosure of information (however imposed): s 361(6).

The Director of the Assets Recovery Agency may take copies of any documents produced in compliance with a requirement to produce them which is imposed under a disclosure order: s 361(7). Documents so produced may be retained for so long as it is necessary to retain them (as opposed to a copy of them) in connection with the investigation for the purposes of which the order was made (s 361(8)); however, if the Director has reasonable grounds for believing that the documents may need to be produced for the purposes of any legal proceedings, and they might otherwise be unavailable for those purposes, they may be retained until the proceedings are concluded (s 361(9)). Rules of court may make provision as to the practice and procedure to be followed in connection with proceedings relating to disclosure orders: s 362(2).

As to the enforcement in Scotland or Northern Ireland of an English or Welsh disclosure order, and the enforcement in England and Wales of a Scottish or Northern Irish disclosure order, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 443(1)(d), (3), (4); and the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in different parts of the United Kingdom) Order 2003, SI 2003/425.

5 See PARA 805 note 1 ante. An application for a disclosure order may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 362(1).

6 Ibid s 357(1). As to applications see CrimPR 62.3; and PARA 805 note 3 ante. See also Practice Direction-- Civil Recovery Proceedings paras 8.1-12.4, 15.1-15.3.

- 15 Ibid s 358(1), (3).
- 16 Ibid s 358(1), (4).
- 17 Ibid s 360(1) does not apply:
- 227 (1) in the case of proceedings under Pt 2 (ss 6-91) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391 et seq) (s 360(2)(a));
- 228 (2) on a prosecution for an offence under s 359(1) or (3) (see PARA 813 post) (s 360(2)(b));
- 229 (3) on a prosecution for an offence under the Perjury Act 1911 s 5 (see PARA 717 ante) (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 360(2)(c)); or
- 230 (4) on a prosecution for some other offence where, in giving evidence, the person makes a statement inconsistent with the statement mentioned in s 360(1) (s 360(2)(d)).
- A statement may not be used by virtue of head (4) supra against a person unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, by him or on his behalf in the proceedings arising out of the prosecution: s 360(3).
- 18 See ibid s 360(1).
- 19 Ibid s 362(5).
- 20 Ibid s 362(3).
- 21 Ibid s 362(4).

813. Offences.

A person commits an offence if without reasonable excuse he fails to comply with a requirement imposed on him under a disclosure order<sup>1</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>2</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale or to both<sup>3</sup>.

A person commits an offence if, in purported compliance with a requirement imposed on him under a disclosure order, he: (1) makes a statement which he knows to be false or misleading in a material particular; or (2) recklessly makes a statement which is false or misleading in a material particular<sup>4</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(1) MONEY LAUNDERING OFFENCES/(v) Money Laundering Investigations, Confiscation Investigations and Civil Recovery Investigations/E. CUSTOMER INFORMATION ORDERS/814. Customer information orders.

E. CUSTOMER INFORMATION ORDERS

814. Customer information orders.

A customer information order is an order that a financial institution<sup>1</sup> covered by the application for the order must, on being required to do so by notice in writing given by an appropriate officer<sup>2</sup>, provide any such customer information<sup>3</sup> as it has relating to the person specified in the application<sup>4</sup>.

A judge<sup>5</sup> may, on an application made to him by an appropriate officer, make a customer information order if he is satisfied that each of the requirements for the making of the order is fulfilled<sup>6</sup>.

The application for a customer information order must state that a person specified in the application is subject to a confiscation investigation<sup>7</sup> or a money laundering investigation<sup>8</sup>; or that property specified in the application is subject to a civil recovery investigation<sup>9</sup> and a person specified in the application appears to hold the property<sup>10</sup>. The application must also state that the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation, and that the order is sought against the financial institution or financial institutions specified in the application<sup>11</sup>. An application for a customer information order may specify all financial institutions; a particular description, or particular descriptions, of financial institutions; or a particular financial institution or particular financial institutions<sup>12</sup>.

A financial institution which is required to provide information under a customer information order must provide the information to an appropriate officer in such manner, and at or by such time, as an appropriate officer requires<sup>13</sup>. If a financial institution on which a requirement is imposed by a notice given under a customer information order requires the production of evidence of authority to give the notice, it is not bound to comply with the requirement unless evidence of the authority has been produced to it<sup>14</sup>.

The requirements for a customer information order are as follows<sup>15</sup>.

In the case of a confiscation investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person specified in the application for the order has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>16</sup>.

In the case of a civil recovery investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the property specified in the application for the order is recoverable property<sup>17</sup> or associated property<sup>18</sup>, and that the person specified in the application holds all or some of the property<sup>19</sup>.

In the case of a money laundering investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person specified in the application for the order has committed a money laundering offence<sup>20</sup>.

In the case of any investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for believing that: (1) customer information which may be provided in compliance with the order is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to the investigation for the purposes of which the order is sought; (2) it is in the public interest for the customer information to be provided, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the information is obtained<sup>21</sup>.

With specified exceptions<sup>22</sup>, a statement made by a financial institution in response to a customer information order may not be used in evidence against it in criminal proceedings<sup>23</sup>.

An application to discharge or vary a customer information order, other than one made for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation<sup>24</sup>, may be made to the court by the person who applied for the order or by any person affected by the order<sup>25</sup>. The court may discharge<sup>26</sup> or vary the order<sup>27</sup>. If an accredited financial investigator<sup>28</sup>, a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs applies for a customer information order, an application to discharge or vary the order need not be made by the same accredited financial investigator, constable or officer<sup>29</sup>. An accredited financial investigator, a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs may not make an application for a customer information order or an application to vary such an order unless he is a senior appropriate officer<sup>30</sup> or he is authorised to do so by a senior appropriate officer<sup>31</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>32</sup> similar provisions apply where the Secretary of State receives a request from an authority in a participating country<sup>33</sup> for customer information<sup>34</sup> to be obtained in relation to a person who appears to him to be subject to an investigation in a participating country into serious criminal conduct<sup>35</sup>.

Provision may also be made by Order in Council to enable equivalent orders to be made for the purposes of an external investigation<sup>36</sup>.

1 'Financial institution' means a person carrying on a business in the regulated sector: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 416(4), (9). As to what constitutes a business in the regulated sector see PARA 797 ante; definition applied by s 416(6). However, a person who ceases to carry on a business in the regulated sector (whether by virtue of Sch 9 (see PARA 797 ante) or otherwise) is to continue to be treated as a financial institution for the purposes of any requirement under a customer information order or an account monitoring order (see PARA 816 post) to provide information which relates to a time when the person was a financial institution: s 416(5).

2 For the meaning of 'appropriate officer' see PARA 804 note 2 ante.

3 'Customer information', in relation to a person and a financial institution, is information whether the person holds, or has held, an account or accounts (whether solely or jointly with another) and (if so) information as to: (1) the matters specified in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(2) if the person is an individual; (2) the matters specified in s 364(3) if the person is a company or limited liability partnership or a similar body incorporated or otherwise established outside the United Kingdom: s 364(1). The matters referred to in head (1) supra are:

- 231 (a) the account number or numbers (s 364(2)(a));
- 232 (b) the person's full name (s 364(2)(b));
- 233 (c) his date of birth (s 364(2)(c));
- 234 (d) his most recent address and any previous addresses (s 364(2)(d));
- 235 (e) the date or dates on which he began to hold the account or accounts and, if he has ceased to hold the account or any of the accounts, the date or dates on which he did so (s 364(2)(e));
- 236 (f) such evidence of his identity as was obtained by the financial institution under or for the purposes of any legislation relating to money laundering (s 364(2)(f));
- 237 (g) the full name, date of birth and most recent address, and any previous addresses, of any person who holds, or has held, an account at the financial institution jointly with him (s 364(2)(g)); and
- 238 (h) the account number or numbers of any other account or accounts held at the financial institution to which he is a signatory and details of the person holding the other account or accounts (s 364(2)(h)).

The matters referred to in head (2) supra are:

- 239 (i) the account number or numbers or the numbers of any safe deposit box (s 364(3)(a) (amended by the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2005, SI 2005/1965, art 14(1), (4)(a));
- 240 (ii) the person's full name (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(3)(b));
- 241 (iii) a description of any business which the person carries on (s 364(3)(c));
- 242 (iv) the country or territory in which it is incorporated or otherwise established and any number allocated to it under the Companies Act 1985 (see COMPANIES) or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032, or corresponding legislation of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(3)(d));
- 243 (v) any number assigned to it for the purposes of value added tax in the United Kingdom (s 364(3)(e));
- 244 (vi) its registered office, and any previous registered offices, under the Companies Act 1985 or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032, or anything similar under corresponding legislation of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(3)(f));
- 245 (vii) its registered office, and any previous registered offices, under the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000 (see PARTNERSHIP) or anything similar under corresponding legislation of any country or territory outside Great Britain (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(3)(g));
- 246 (viii) the date or dates on which it began to hold the account or accounts and, if it has ceased to hold the account or any of the accounts, the date or dates on which it did so (s 364(3)(h));
- 247 (ix) such evidence of its identity as was obtained by the financial institution under or for the purposes of any legislation relating to money laundering (s 364(3)(i)); and
- 248 (x) the full name, date of birth and most recent address and any previous addresses of any person who is a signatory to the account or any of the accounts (s 364(3)(j)).

The Secretary of State may by order provide for information of a description specified in the order to be customer information, or no longer to be customer information: s 364(4). As to the making of orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 see PARA 789 note 7 ante.

For the above purposes, money laundering is an act which constitutes an offence under s 327 (see PARA 791 ante), s 328 (see PARA 792 ante) or s 329 (see PARA 793 ante) or the Terrorism Act 2000 s 18 (see PARA 393 ante), or which constitutes an offence specified in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 415(1A) (as added), or which would constitute an offence under such provisions if done in the United Kingdom: s 364(5) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 107(1), (2)). Each of the following is a money laundering offence under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 415(1A) (as added): (A) an offence under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 93A, s 93B or s 93C (all repealed); (B) an offence under the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 s 49, s 50 or s 51 (all repealed); (C) an offence under the Criminal Law (Consolidation) (Scotland) Act 1995 s 37 or s 38 (both repealed); and (D) an offence under the Proceeds of Crime (Northern Ireland) Order 1996, SI 1996/1299 (revoked): Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 415(1A) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 107(1), (4)).

4 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 363(5). A customer information order has effect in spite of any restriction on the disclosure of information (however imposed): s 368; Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 32(7) (not yet in force).

As from a day to be appointed, where a customer information order is requested for use abroad under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 32 (see the text and notes 32-35 infra), it is defined as an order made by a judge entitled to exercise the jurisdiction of the Crown Court that a financial institution specified in the application for the order must, on being required to do so by notice in writing given by the applicant for the order, provide any such customer information as it has relating to the person specified in the application: ss 32(4), 46(2), (5). For these purposes, 'financial institution' means a person who is carrying on business in the regulated sector and, in relation to a customer information order or an account monitoring order (see PARA 816 post), includes a person who was carrying on business in the regulated sector at a time which is the time to which any requirement for him to provide information under the order is to relate: s 46(4). 'Business in the regulated sector' is interpreted in accordance with the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Sch 9 (as amended) (see PARA 797 ante): Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 46(4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to the enforcement in Scotland or Northern Ireland of an English or Welsh customer information order, and the enforcement in England and Wales of a Scottish or Northern Irish customer information order, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 443(1)(d), (3), (4); and the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in different parts of the United Kingdom) Order 2003, SI 2003/425. Rules of court may make provision as to the practice and procedure to be followed in connection with proceedings relating to customer information orders: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 369(2). As to such rules see CrimPR 62.2, 62.3.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where a financial institution is specified in a customer information order made in any part of the United Kingdom (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 42(1) (a)), and the institution, or an employee of the institution, discloses the information that the request to obtain customer information has been received (s 42(3)(a)), the information that the investigation to which the request relates is being carried out (s 42(3)(b)), or the information that, in pursuance of the request, information has been given to the authority which made the request (s 42(3)(c)), the institution or (as the case may be) the employee is guilty of an offence (s 42(2)). An institution guilty of this offence is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine (s 42(4)(b)) and on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (s 42(4)(a)); and any other person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both (s 42(5)(b)), or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both (s 42(5)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed the maximum term of imprisonment specified under s 42(5)(a) is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 See PARA 805 note 1 ante. An application for a customer information order may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 369(1).

22 A statement by a financial institution in response to a customer information order may be used as evidence against it in criminal proceedings: (1) in the case of proceedings under ibid Pt 2 (ss 6-91) (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391 et seq); (2) on a prosecution under s 366(1) or (3) (see PARA 815 post); (3) on a prosecution for some other offence where, in giving evidence, the financial institution makes a statement inconsistent with the statement made by it in response to a customer information order: s 367(2).

A statement may not be used by virtue of head (3) supra against a financial institution unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, by or on behalf of the financial institution in the proceedings arising out of the prosecution: s 367(3).

23 Ibid s 367(1).

24 Ibid s 369(8).

25 Ibid s 369(3). Where any person other than the person who applied for the customer information order (see s 369(5), (6); and the text and note 30 infra) proposes to make an application under s 369(3) for the discharge or variation of a customer information order, he must, not later than 48 hours before the application is to be made, give a copy of the proposed application to a police officer at the police station specified in the customer information order, or where the application for the customer information order was not made by a constable, to the office of the appropriate officer who made the application, as specified in the customer information order, in either case together with a notice indicating the time and place at which the application for a discharge or variation is to be made: CrimPR 62.2(1).

26 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 369(4)(a).

27 Ibid s 369(4)(b).

28 See POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 430 et seq.

29 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 369(5); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7). References to a person who applied for a customer information order must be construed accordingly: s 369(6). As to the officers and Commissioners for Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

30 Senior appropriate officers are:

249 (1) in relation to a confiscation investigation:

11. (a) the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency (ibid s 378(2)(a));

12. (b) a police officer who is not below the rank of superintendent (s 378(2)(b));

13

13. (c) an officer of Revenue and Customs who is not below such grade as is designated by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs as equivalent to that rank (s 378(2)(c); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (7)); and

14

14. (d) an accredited financial investigator who falls within a description specified in an order made for these purposes by the Secretary of State under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 453 (s 378(2)(d));

15

250 (2) in relation to a civil recovery investigation, the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency, and only the Director (s 378(3));

251 (3) in relation to a money laundering investigation:

15. (a) a police officer who is not below the rank of superintendent (s 378(6)(a));

16

16. (b) an officer of Revenue and Customs who is not below such grade as is designated by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs as equivalent to that rank (s 378(6)(b); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (7)); and

17

17. (c) an accredited financial investigator who falls within a description specified in an order made for these purposes by the Secretary of State under s 453 (Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 378(6)(c)).

18

However, a person is not a senior appropriate officer in relation to a money laundering investigation if he is a member of staff of the Assets Recovery Agency, or a person providing services under arrangements made by the Director of that Agency: s 378(7).

31 Ibid s 369(7); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7).

32 The Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 32-34 (see the text and notes 32-35 infra; and PARA 815 post) are to be brought into force as from a day to be appointed by order made under s 94. At the date at which this volume states the no such day had been appointed.

33 For the meaning of 'country' see PARA 916 note 2 post; and for the meaning of 'participating country' see PARA 917 note 14 post. The authority referred to in the text is the authority in the participating country making the request which appears to the Secretary of State to have the function of making requests of the kind to which ibid s 32 (as amended) applies: s 32(2). See note 33 supra.

34 For the purposes of ibid s 32 (as amended), 'customer information' carries the meaning specified in note 3 supra, except that in these circumstances it does not include such evidence of the identity of the relevant individual, incorporated body or partnership (as the case may be) as was obtained by the financial institution under or for the purposes of any legislation relating to money laundering (ie information required pursuant to the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 364(2)(f), (3)(i) (see PARA 814 ante)): Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 32(6). See note 33 supra.

35 Ibid s 32(1). See notes 4, 33 supra. 'Serious criminal conduct' means conduct which constitutes an offence to which the Protocol to the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention, established by Council Act of 16 October 2001 (2001/C326/01) art 1 para 3 (request for information on bank accounts) applies or an offence specified in an order made by the Secretary of State for the purpose of giving effect to any decision of the Council of the European Union under art 1 para 6: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 46(2), (3). For the meaning of 'the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention' see PARA 916 note 4 post. In these circumstances the Secretary of State may direct a senior police officer to apply, or arrange for a constable to apply, or direct a senior officer of Revenue and Customs to apply, or arrange for an officer of Revenue and Customs to apply, for a customer information order: s 32(3); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7). The application may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 33(2)); and it may specify all financial institutions (s 33(3)(a)), a particular description, or particular descriptions, of financial institutions (s 33(3)(b)), or a particular financial institution or particular financial institutions (s 33(3)(c)). A judge may make a customer information order, on an application made to him pursuant to a direction under s 32(3) if he is satisfied that the person specified in the application is subject to an investigation in the country in question (s 33(1)(a)), the investigation concerns conduct which is serious criminal conduct (s 33(1)(b)), the conduct constitutes an offence in England and Wales or (as the case may be) Northern Ireland, or would do were it to occur there (s 33(1)(c)), and the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation (s 33(1)(d)). A financial institution which is required to provide information under a customer information order must provide the information to the applicant for the order in such manner, and at or by such time, as the applicant requires (s 32(5)); customer information obtained in pursuance of a customer information order is to be given to the Secretary of State and sent by him to the authority which made the request (s 32(6)).

The court may discharge or vary a customer information order on an application made by the person who applied for the order (s 33(4)(a)), a senior police officer (s 33(4)(b)), a constable authorised by a senior police officer to make the application (s 33(4)(c)), a senior officer of Revenue and Customs (s 33(4)(d); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7)), or an officer of Revenue and Customs authorised by a senior officer of Revenue and Customs to make the application (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 33(4)(e); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7)).

'Senior police officer' means a police officer who is not below the rank of superintendent and 'senior officer of Revenue and Customs' means an officer of Revenue and Customs who is not below the grade designated by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs as equivalent to that rank (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 46(1); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7)); and 'officer of Revenue and Customs' means an officer commissioned by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (see the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 51(1); and the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7)). As to the Commissioners for, and officers of, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

NOTE 2--Day now appointed: SI 2006/2811.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/11. MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(1) MONEY LAUNDERING OFFENCES/(v) Money Laundering Investigations, Confiscation Investigations and Civil Recovery Investigations/F. ACCOUNT MONITORING ORDERS/816. Account monitoring orders.

F. ACCOUNT MONITORING ORDERS

816. Account monitoring orders.

An account monitoring order is an order that the financial institution<sup>1</sup> specified in the application for the order must, for the period stated in the order, provide account information<sup>2</sup> of the description specified in the order to an appropriate officer<sup>3</sup> in the manner, and at or by the time or times, stated in the order<sup>4</sup>. The period stated in an account monitoring order must not exceed the period of 90 days beginning with the day on which the order is made<sup>5</sup>.

A judge<sup>6</sup> may, on an application made to him by an appropriate officer, make an account monitoring order if he is satisfied that each of the requirements for the making of the order is fulfilled<sup>7</sup>.

The application for an account monitoring order must state that a person specified in the application is subject to a confiscation investigation<sup>8</sup> or a money laundering investigation<sup>9</sup>, or that property<sup>10</sup> specified in the application is subject to a civil recovery investigation<sup>11</sup> and a person specified in the application appears to hold the property<sup>12</sup>. The application must also state that the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation, and that the order is sought against the financial institution specified in the application in relation to account information of the description so specified<sup>13</sup>. The application for an account monitoring order may specify information relating to:

- 967 (1) all accounts held by the person specified in the application for the order at the financial institution so specified<sup>14</sup>;
- 968 (2) a particular description, or particular descriptions, of accounts so held<sup>15</sup>; or
- 969 (3) a particular account, or particular accounts, so held<sup>16</sup>.

The requirements for an account monitoring order are as follows<sup>17</sup>.

In the case of a confiscation investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person specified in the application for the order has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>18</sup>.

In the case of a civil recovery investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that:

- 970 (a) the property specified in the application for the order is recoverable property or associated property<sup>19</sup>;
- 971 (b) the person specified in the application holds all or some of the property<sup>20</sup>.

In the case of a money laundering investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person specified in the application for the order has committed a money laundering offence<sup>21</sup>.

In the case of any investigation, there must be reasonable grounds for believing that account information which may be provided in compliance with the order is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to the investigation for the purposes of which the order is sought<sup>22</sup>; and that it is in the public interest for the account information to be provided, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the information is obtained<sup>23</sup>.

A statement made by a financial institution in response to an account monitoring order may not be used in evidence against it in criminal proceedings<sup>24</sup>.

An application to discharge or vary an account monitoring order may be made to the court by the person who applied for the order, or by any person affected by the order<sup>25</sup>. The court may discharge<sup>26</sup> or vary the order<sup>27</sup>. If an accredited financial investigator<sup>28</sup>, a constable or an officer of Revenue and Customs applies for an account monitoring order, an application to discharge or vary the order need not be by the same accredited financial investigator, constable or officer<sup>29</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>30</sup> similar provisions apply where the Secretary of State receives a request from an authority in a participating country<sup>31</sup> for account information<sup>32</sup> to be obtained in relation to an investigation in a participating country into criminal conduct<sup>33</sup> and where a judicial authority<sup>34</sup> or prosecuting authority<sup>35</sup> in the United Kingdom makes a request to a participating country for assistance in the provision of banking information in connection with a criminal investigation in the United Kingdom<sup>36</sup>.

Provision may also be made by Order in Council to enable equivalent orders to be made for the purposes of an external investigation<sup>37</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'financial institution' see PARA 814 notes 1, 4 ante.

2 Account information is information relating to an account or accounts held at the financial institution specified in the application by the person so specified (whether solely or jointly with another): Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 370(4); Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 35(5) (not yet in force).

3 For the meaning of 'appropriate officer' see PARA 804 note 2 ante.

4 Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 370(6). An account monitoring order has effect in spite of any restriction on the disclosure of information (however imposed): Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 374; Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 35(6) (not yet in force). Account monitoring orders have effect as if they were orders of the court: Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 375(6); Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 36(5) (not yet in force).

As from a day to be appointed, where an account monitoring order is requested for use abroad under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 35 (see the text and notes 30-36 infra), it is defined as an order made by a judge entitled to exercise the jurisdiction of the Crown Court that a financial institution specified in the application for the order must, for the period stated in the order, provide account information of the description specified in the order to the applicant in the manner, and at or by the time or times, stated in the order: ss 35(4), 46(2), (5). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. For the meaning of 'financial institution' for these purposes see PARA 814 note 4 ante.

As to the enforcement in Scotland or Northern Ireland of an English or Welsh account monitoring order, and the enforcement in England and Wales of a Scottish or Northern Irish account monitoring order, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 443(1)(d), (3), (4); and the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in different parts of the United Kingdom) Order 2003, SI 2003/425. For account monitoring orders in respect of terrorist investigations see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 494 et seq.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where a financial institution is specified in an account monitoring order made in any part of the United Kingdom (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 42(1)(a)), and the institution, or an employee of the institution, discloses the information that the request to obtain account information has been received (s 42(3)(a)), the information that the investigation to which the request relates is being carried out (s 42(3)(b)), or the information that, in pursuance of the request, information has been given to the authority which made the request (s 42(3)(c)), the institution or (as the case may be) the employee is guilty of an offence (s 42(2)). An institution guilty of this offence is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine (s 42(4)(b)), and on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (s 42(4)(a)); and any other person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both (s 42(5)(b)), and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both (s 42(5)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed the maximum term of imprisonment specified under s 42(5)(a) is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

A statement may not be used by virtue of head (3) supra against a financial institution unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, by or on behalf of the financial institution in the proceedings arising out of the prosecution: s 372(3).

25 Ibid s 375(2). Where a person other than the person who applies for the order proposes to make an application under s 375(2), he must give a copy of the proposed application, not later than 48 hours before the application is to be made: (1) to a police officer at the police station specified in the account monitoring order; or (2) where the application for the account monitoring order was not made by a constable, to the office of the appropriate officer who made the application, as specified in the account monitoring order, in either case together with a notice indicating the time and place at which the application for discharge or variation is to be made: CrimPR 62.1(2). The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 375 does not apply to orders made in England and Wales for the purpose of a civil recovery investigation: s 375(7).

30 The Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 35, 36, 43-45 (see the text and notes 32-36 infra) are to be brought into force as from a day to be appointed by order made under s 94. At the date at which this volume states the no such day had been appointed.

31 For the meaning of 'country' see PARA 916 note 2 post; and for the meaning of 'participating country' see PARA 917 note 14 post. The authority referred to in the text is the authority in the participating country making the request which appears to the Secretary of State to have the function of making requests of the kind to which the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 35 applies: s 35(2). See note 31 supra.

32 See note 2 supra.

33 Ibid s 35(1). See notes 4, 31 supra. In these circumstances the Secretary of State may direct a senior police officer to apply, or arrange for a constable to apply, or direct a senior officer of Revenue and Customs to apply, or arrange for an officer of Revenue and Customs to apply, for an account monitoring order: s 35(3); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7)). The application may be made ex parte to a judge in chambers (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 36(2)); and may specify information relating to all accounts held by the person specified in the application for the order at the financial institution so specified (s 36(3)(a)), a particular description, or particular descriptions, of accounts so held (s 36(3)(b)), or a particular account, or particular accounts, so held (s 36(3)(c)). A judge may make an account monitoring order, on an application made to him pursuant to a direction under s 35(3) if he is satisfied that there is an investigation in the country in question into criminal conduct (s 36(1)(a)) and the order is sought for the purposes of the investigation (s 36(1)(b)). Account information obtained in pursuance of an account monitoring order is to be given to the Secretary of State and sent by him to the authority which made the request (s 35(7)).

The court may discharge or vary an account monitoring order on an application made by the person who applied for the order (s 35(4)(a)), a senior police officer (s 35(4)(b)), a constable authorised by a senior police officer to make the application (s 35(4)(c)), a senior officer of Revenue and Customs (s 35(4)(d); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7)), or an officer of Revenue and Customs authorised by a senior officer of Revenue and Customs to make the application (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 35(4)(e); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7)).

For the meanings of 'senior police officer', 'senior officer of Revenue and Customs', and 'officer of Revenue and Customs' see PARA 814 note 36 ante. As to officers of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

34 Ie, in relation to England and Wales, any judge or justice of the peace: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 43(2)(a), 44(2)(a). See note 31 supra.

35 Ie, in relation to England and Wales, a prosecuting authority designated by an order made by the Secretary of State: ibid ss 43(4)(a), 44(4)(a). See note 31 supra. At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the making of orders under Pt 1 (ss 1-51) see PARA 917 note 14 post.

36 The assistance that may be so requested is any assistance in obtaining from a participating country:

252 (1) information as to whether the person in question holds any accounts at any banks situated in the participating country (ibid s 43(5)(a)), details of any such accounts (s 43(5)(b)), and details of transactions carried out in any period specified in the request in respect of any such accounts (s 43(5)(c)); and 253 (2) details of transactions to be carried out in any period specified in the request in respect of any accounts at banks situated in the participating country (s 44(5)).

For these purposes, a person 'holds an account' if either the account is in his name or it is held for his benefit (s 43(7)(a)) or he has a power of attorney in respect of the account (s 43(7)(b)). See note 31 supra.

A prosecuting authority, or a judicial authority on the application of a prosecuting authority:

254 (a) may request the first category of assistance (see head (1) supra) if it appears to it that a person is subject to an investigation in the United Kingdom into serious criminal conduct (s 43(1)(a), (3)), that the person holds, or may hold, an account at a bank which is situated in a participating country (s 43(1)(b)), and the information which the applicant seeks to obtain is likely to be of substantial value for the purposes of the investigation (s 43(1)(c)); and

- 255 (b) may request the second category of assistance (see head (2) supra) if it appears to it that the information which it (or, where the judicial authority makes the request, the applicant) seeks to obtain is relevant to an investigation in the United Kingdom into criminal conduct (s 44(1), (3)).

A request for the first category of assistance must state the grounds on which the authority making the request thinks that the person in question may hold any account at a bank which is situated in a participating country and (if possible) specify the bank or banks in question (s 43(6)(a)), state the grounds on which the authority making the request considers that the information sought to be obtained is likely to be of substantial value for the purposes of the investigation (s 43(6)(b)), and include any information which may facilitate compliance with the request (s 43(6)(c)).

A request for either category of assistance is to be sent to the Secretary of State for forwarding either to a Crown Court specified in the request and exercising jurisdiction in the place where the information is to be obtained (s 44(1)(a)) or to any authority recognised by the participating country in question as the appropriate authority for receiving requests for assistance of the kind to which these provisions apply (s 44(1)(b)), although in cases of urgency the request may be sent to a Crown Court specified in the request and exercising jurisdiction in the place where the information is to be obtained (s 44(1)(c)).

817. Evidence overseas.

A judge<sup>3</sup> on the application of the Director or a person subject to the investigation may issue a letter of request<sup>4</sup> if he thinks that there is evidence<sup>5</sup> in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom<sup>6</sup> that such a person has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>7</sup>; or of the extent or whereabouts of that person's benefit from his criminal conduct<sup>8</sup>.

The Director may issue a letter of request if he thinks that there is evidence in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom that a person subject to the investigation has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>9</sup>; or of the extent or whereabouts of that person's benefit from his criminal conduct<sup>10</sup>.

The person issuing a letter of request may send it to a court or tribunal which is specified in the letter and which exercises jurisdiction in the place where the evidence is to be obtained<sup>11</sup>; or to an authority recognised by the government of the country or territory concerned as the appropriate authority for receiving letters of request<sup>12</sup>.

Alternatively, the person issuing the letter of request may send it to the Secretary of State for forwarding to the court, tribunal or authority so mentioned<sup>13</sup>. In a case of urgency, the person issuing the letter of request may send it to the International Criminal Police Organisation<sup>14</sup>, or to any body or person competent to receive it under any provisions adopted under the Treaty on European Union<sup>15</sup>, for forwarding to the court, tribunal or authority so mentioned<sup>16</sup>.

Evidence obtained in pursuance of a letter of request must not be used by any person other than the Director or a person subject to the investigation<sup>17</sup>, or for any purpose other than that for which it is obtained<sup>18</sup>.

H. CODE OF PRACTICE

818. Code of practice.

The Secretary of State has prepared a code of practice<sup>1</sup> as to the exercise of functions under the provisions relating to production orders<sup>2</sup>, search and seizure warrants<sup>3</sup>, disclosure orders<sup>4</sup>, customer information orders<sup>5</sup> and account monitoring orders<sup>6</sup>. The code of practice applies to:

- 972 (1) the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency<sup>7</sup>;
- 973 (2) members of staff of the Agency<sup>8</sup>;
- 974 (3) accredited financial investigators<sup>9</sup>;
- 975 (4) constables<sup>10</sup>;
- 976 (5) officers of Revenue and Customs<sup>11</sup>.

Such a person must comply with the code in the exercise of any function which he has under these provisions<sup>12</sup>. If such a person fails so to comply he is not by reason only of that failure liable in any criminal or civil proceedings<sup>13</sup>. However, the code is admissible in evidence in such proceedings and a court may take account of any failure to comply with its provisions in determining any question in the proceedings<sup>14</sup>.

1 The Secretary of State was required to prepare such a code by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 377(1). The code of practice under s 377 was brought into force by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Investigations in England, Wales and Northern Ireland: Code of Practice) Order 2003, SI 2003/334. As to the preparation and bringing into operation of the code see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 377(2)-(4). The Secretary of State may amend the code: see s 377(8). The provisions of s 377(2)-(7) apply to a revised code as they apply to the code first prepared: see s 377(8). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 67(9) (see PARA 856 note 27 post) does not apply to an appropriate officer in the exercise of functions under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pt 8 Ch 2 (ss 343-379): s 377(9).

Contamination of or interference with goods with intention of causing public alarm or anxiety etc.

(2) CONTAMINATION OF OR INTERFERENCE WITH GOODS

819. Contamination of or interference with goods with intention of causing public alarm or anxiety etc.

A person who: (1) contaminates or interferes with goods<sup>1</sup>; or (2) makes it appear that goods have been contaminated or interfered with; or (3) places goods which have been contaminated or interfered with, or which appear to have been contaminated or interfered with, in a place where goods of that description are consumed, used, sold or otherwise supplied with the intention:

- 977 (a) of causing public alarm or anxiety;
- 978 (b) of causing injury to members of the public consuming or using the goods;
- 979 (c) of causing economic loss to any person by reason of the goods being shunned by members of the public; or
- 980 (d) of causing economic loss to any person by reason of steps taken to avoid any such alarm or anxiety, injury or loss, is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>4</sup>.

A person who, with any such intention as is mentioned in head (a), (c) or (d) above, threatens that he or another will do, or claims that he or another has done<sup>5</sup>, any of the acts mentioned in heads (1) to (3) above is also guilty of an offence<sup>6</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'goods' includes substances whether natural or manufactured and whether or not incorporated in or mixed with other goods: Public Order Act 1986 s 38(5).

2 Ibid s 38(1).

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 Public Order Act 1986 s 38(4). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

5 The reference in ibid s 38(2) to a person claiming that certain acts have been committed does not include a person who in good faith reports or warns that such acts have been, or appear to have been, committed: s 38(6).

6 Ibid s 38(2).

7 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). 820. Possession of articles with a view to committing an offence in relation to contamination of or interference with goods etc.

A person who is in possession<sup>1</sup> of any of the following articles:

- 981 (1) materials to be used for contaminating or interfering with goods<sup>2</sup> or making it appear that goods have been contaminated or interfered with; or
- 982 (2) goods which have been contaminated or interfered with, or which appear to have been contaminated or interfered with,

with a view to the commission of an offence of contamination of or interference with goods with the intention of causing public alarm or anxiety etc<sup>3</sup>, is guilty of an offence<sup>4</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>6</sup> Public Order Act 1986 s 38(4). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/11. MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(3) PROTECTION OF ACTIVITIES OF CERTAIN ORGANISATIONS/821. Interference with contractual relationships so as to harm animal research organisations.

(3) PROTECTION OF ACTIVITIES OF CERTAIN ORGANISATIONS

821. Interference with contractual relationships so as to harm animal research organisations.

A person ('A') commits an offence if, with the intention of harming<sup>1</sup> an animal research organisation<sup>2</sup>, he does a relevant act, or threatens that he or somebody else will do a relevant act, in circumstances in which that act or threat is intended or likely to cause a second person ('B') to take any of the following steps<sup>3</sup>. Those steps are:

- 983 (1) not to perform any contractual obligation owed by B to a third person ('C'), whether or not such non-performance amounts to a breach of contract<sup>4</sup>;
- 984 (2) to terminate any contract B has with C<sup>5</sup>; and
- 985 (3) not to enter into a contract with C<sup>6</sup>.

For these purposes, a 'relevant act' is: (a) an act amounting to a criminal offence<sup>7</sup>; or (b) a tortious act causing B to suffer loss or damage of any description<sup>8</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup> or to both<sup>11</sup>.

1 For these purposes, to 'harm' an animal research organisation means: (1) to cause the organisation to suffer loss or damage of any description; or (2) to prevent or hinder the carrying out by the organisation of any of its activities: Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 145(5).

2 For the purposes of ibid ss 145, 146 (see PARA 822 post), 'animal research organisation' means any person or organisation falling within s 148(2) or (3): s 148(1). A person or organisation falls within s 148(2) if he or it is the owner, lessee or licensee of premises constituting or including:

- 256 (1) a place specified in a licence granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 4 or s 5 (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARAS 878-879) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(2)(a));
- 257 (2) a scientific procedure establishment designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 6 (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 880) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005(s 148(2)(b)); or
- 258 (3) a breeding or supplying establishment designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 7 (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 881) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(2)(c)).

A person or organisation falls within s 148(3) if he or it employs, or engages under a contract for services, any of the following in his capacity as such:

- 259 (a) the holder of a personal licence granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 4 (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(3)(a));
- 260 (b) the holder of a project licence granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 5 (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(3)(b));

- 261 (c) a person specified under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 6(5) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(3)(c)); or
- 262 (d) a person specified under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 s 7(5) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(3)(d)).

For these purposes, 'organisation' includes any institution, trust, undertaking or association of persons; 'premises' includes any place within the meaning of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 (see ANIMALS), and 'regulated procedures' has the meaning given by s 2 (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 876): Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 148(5).

The Secretary of State may by order amend s 148 so as to include a reference to any description of persons whom he considers to be involved in, or to have a direct connection with persons who are involved in, the application of regulated procedures: s 148(4). Any power of the Secretary of State to make an order or regulations under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005, is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 172(1).

Any such power may be exercised so as to make different provision for different cases or descriptions of case or different purposes or areas, and includes power to make such incidental, supplementary, consequential, transitory, transitional or saving provision as the Secretary of State considers appropriate: s 172(2). Orders or regulations made by the Secretary of State under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 are subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 172(3). However, s 172(3) does not apply to any order under s 1(3), s 161(4) or s 178: see s 172(4). Nor does s 172(3) apply to an order under:

- 263 (i) s 33(2)(f) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 462) (s 172(5)(a));
- 264 (ii) s 52 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 476) (s 172(5)(b));
- 265 (iii) s 61(4) (see PARA 1086 post) (s 172(5)(c));
- 266 (iv) s 76(4) (see PARA 1809 post) (s 172(5)(d));
- 267 (v) s 82(6) (see PARA 2101 post) (s 172(5)(e));
- 268 (vi) s 87(5) (see PARA 2104 post) (s 172(5)(f));
- 269 (vii) s 89(5) (see PARA 2105 post) (s 172(5)(g));
- 270 (viii) s 96(1) (see PARA 2151 post) (s 172(5)(h));
- 271 (ix) s 97(1) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391) (s 172(5)(i));
- 272 (x) s 146(6), s 148(4) or s 149 (see PARA 823 post) (s 172(5)(j));
- 273 (xi) s 173 (which amends or repeals any provision of an Act) (s 172(5)(k)), and no order under heads (i)-(xi) supra may be made by the Secretary of State (whether alone or with other provisions) unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing the order has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 172(5).

3 Ibid s 145(1). No proceedings may be instituted except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 147(2). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. Section 145 does not apply to any act done wholly or mainly in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute: s 145(6). For these purposes, 'trade dispute' has the same meaning as in the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 s 218 (see EMPLOYMENT vol 41 (2009) PARA 1181) except that s 218 is to be read as if it made provision corresponding to s 244(4) (see EMPLOYMENT vol 41 (2009) PARA 1326); and in s 218(5), the definition of 'worker' included any person falling within the definition of 'worker' in s 244(5)(b) (see EMPLOYMENT vol 41 (2009) PARA 1324): Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 145(7).

4 Ibid s 145(2)(a). For the purpose of s 145, 'contract' includes any other arrangement; and 'contractual' is to be read accordingly: s 145(4).

5 Ibid s 145(2)(b).

6 Ibid s 145(2)(c).

7 Ibid s 145(3)(a).

8 Ibid s 145(3)(b). However, s 145(3)(b) does not include an act which is actionable on the ground only that it induces another person to break a contract with B: s 145(3).

9 In relation to an offence committed after the commencement of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1) (not yet in force) the reference to a maximum term of imprisonment on summary conviction of six months is to be read as a reference to a maximum term of 12 months: see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 147(1), 175(1), (2).

10 As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

11 Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 147(1), 175(1), (2).

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(3) PROTECTION OF ACTIVITIES OF CERTAIN ORGANISATIONS/822. Intimidation of persons connected with animal research organisation.

822. Intimidation of persons connected with animal research organisation.

A person ('A') commits an offence if, with the intention of causing a second person ('B') to abstain from doing something which B is entitled to do, or to do something which B is entitled to abstain from doing:

- 986 (1) A threatens B that A or somebody else will do a relevant act<sup>1</sup>; and 987 (2) A does so wholly or mainly because B is a person falling within the following list<sup>2</sup>:
- 33
- 45. (a) an employee or officer<sup>3</sup> of an animal research organisation<sup>4</sup>;
  - 46. (b) a student at an educational establishment that is an animal research organisation<sup>5</sup>;
  - 47. (c) a lessor or licensor of any premises occupied by an animal research organisation<sup>6</sup>;
  - 48. (d) a person with a financial interest in, or who provides financial assistance to, an animal research organisation<sup>7</sup>;
  - 49. (e) a customer or supplier of an animal research organisation<sup>8</sup>;
  - 50. (f) a person who is contemplating becoming someone within head (c), (d) or (e) above<sup>9</sup>;
  - 51. (g) a person who is, or is contemplating becoming, a customer or supplier of someone within head (c), (d), (e) or (f) above<sup>10</sup>;
  - 52. (h) an employee or officer of someone within head (c), (d), (e), (f) or (g) above<sup>11</sup>;
  - 53. (i) a person with a financial interest in, or who provides financial assistance to, someone within head (c), (d), (e), (f) or (g) above<sup>12</sup>;
  - 54. (j) a spouse, civil partner, friend or relative of, or a person who is known personally to, someone within any of heads (a) to (i) above<sup>13</sup>;
  - 55. (k) a person who is, or is contemplating becoming, a customer or supplier<sup>14</sup> of someone within head (a), (b), (h), (i) or (j) above<sup>15</sup>; or
  - 56. (l) an employer of someone within head (j) above<sup>16</sup>.

For these purposes, a 'relevant act' is: (i) an act amounting to a criminal offence<sup>17</sup>; or (ii) a tortious act causing B or another person to suffer loss or damage of any description<sup>18</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>19</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>20</sup> or to both<sup>21</sup>.

1 Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 146(1)(a).

2 Ibid s 146(1)(b). The Secretary of State may by order amend s 146 so as to include within s 146(2) (see heads (a)-(l) in the text) any description of persons framed by reference to their connection with an animal research organisation, or any description of persons for the time being mentioned in s 146(2): s 146(6). For the meaning of 'animal research organisation' see PARA 821 note 2 ante.

No proceedings for an offence under s 146 may be instituted except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 147(2). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. Section 146 does not apply to any act done wholly or mainly in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute: s 146(7). For the meaning of 'trade dispute' see s 145(7); and PARA 821 note 3 ante (definition applied by s 146(8)).

3 For these purposes, an 'officer' of an animal research organisation or a person includes:

274 (1) where the organisation or person is a body corporate, a director, manager or secretary (s 146(3)(a));

275 (2) where the organisation or person is a charity, a charity trustee (within the meaning of the Charities Act 1993: see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 1) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 146(3)(b)); and 276 (3) where the organisation or person is a partnership, a partner (s 146(3)(c)).

10 Ibid s 146(2)(g).

11 Ibid s 146(2)(h).

12 Ibid s 146(2)(i).

13 Ibid s 146(2)(j).

14 For these purposes: (1) a person is a customer or supplier of another person if he purchases goods, services or facilities from, or (as the case may be) supplies goods, services or facilities to, that other; and (2) 'supplier' includes a person who supplies services in pursuance of any enactment that requires or authorises such services to be provided: ibid s 146(4).

823. Extension.

The Secretary of State may by order provide for the provisions relating to the offences in relation to animal research organisations<sup>1</sup> to apply to persons or organisations<sup>2</sup> of a description specified in the order as they apply in relation to animal research organisations<sup>3</sup>. The Secretary of State may, however, only make such an order if satisfied that a series of acts has taken place and:

- 988 (1) that those acts were directed at persons or organisations of the description specified in the order or at persons having a connection with them<sup>4</sup>; and
- 989 (2) that, if those persons or organisations had been animal research organisations, those acts would have constituted offences under the provisions relating to offences in relation to animal research organisations<sup>5</sup>.

1 Ie the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 145, 146, 147 (see PARAS 821-822 ante).

(4) SLAVERY

824. Slave-dealing.

Any person who:

- 990 (1) deals or trades in slaves<sup>1</sup> or persons intended to be dealt with as slaves; or carries away, imports into any place whatsoever or ships slaves or persons to be dealt with as slaves; or equips, lets or hires any ship for any operation in connection with the slave trade; or contracts to do any of these things;
- 991 (2) knowingly and wilfully makes any loan, secures any loan, guarantees any agent or ships any goods, to be used or employed for any operation in connection with the slave trade; knowingly and wilfully insures any slaves or anything to be used for any operation in connection with the slave trade; or knowingly and wilfully contracts to do any of these things;
- 992 (3) acts or contracts to act as master, mate, surgeon or supercargo<sup>2</sup> of a ship knowing it is used or intended to be used in any operation in connection with the slave trade;
- 993 (4) procures, counsels, aids or abets a person who commits any of the offences in heads (1) to (3) above, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>3</sup>.

Seamen and persons other than those set out in the Slave Trade Act 1824 s 10 (as amended) who serve or contract to serve on a ship, knowing it is employed or intended to be employed in connection with the slave trade, are guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years: see s 11 (amended by the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1888; the Statute Law Revision Act 1890; the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1; and the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1998 s 1(2), Sch 2).

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(4) SLAVERY/825. Liability for acts committed abroad.

825. Liability for acts committed abroad.

All the provisions of the Slave Trade Act 1824<sup>1</sup> are deemed to extend and to apply to British nationals<sup>2</sup> wheresoever residing or being and whether within the dominions of Her Majesty or of any foreign country; and all the several matters and things prohibited by that Act, when committed by British nationals, whether within Her Majesty's dominions or in any foreign country, are deemed and taken to be offences committed against that Act and are to be dealt with and punished accordingly<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> The Slave Trade Act 1843 refers to 'British subjects', but this is now a very narrow class of person: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 66 et seq. As to British nationality generally see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 5 et seq.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(5) OFFENCES AGAINST RELIGION/826. Blasphemy and blasphemous libel.

(5) OFFENCES AGAINST RELIGION

826. Blasphemy and blasphemous libel.

Blasphemy is an indictable offence at common law consisting in a publication of contemptuous, reviling, scurrilous or ludicrous matter relating to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible or the formularies of the Church of England<sup>1</sup>. The publisher must intend to publish, but he need not intend that the words amount to blasphemy<sup>2</sup>. It is immaterial whether the words are spoken or written<sup>3</sup>; but, if written, they constitute blasphemous libel<sup>4</sup>. The offence is punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>5</sup>.

1 Whitehouse v Gay News Ltd, R v Lemon [1979] AC 617 at 665, 68 Cr App Rep 381 at 410, HL, per Lord Scarman. It is not blasphemy to attack any religion except Christianity: Whitehouse v Gay News Ltd, R v Lemon supra; R v Gathercole (1838) 2 Lew CC 237; R v Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, ex p Choudhury [1991] 1 QB 429, [1991] 1 All ER 306, DC (attack on Islamic religion not covered by common law offence of blasphemy). The present formulation is to be compared with what appeared to be the formulation prior to Whitehouse v Gay News Ltd, R v Lemon supra, namely the publication of words attacking the Christian religion or the Bible so violent, scurrilous or ribald as to pass the limits of decent controversy and tend to lead to a breach of the peace: R v Ramsay and Foote (1883) 48 LT 733; Bowman v Secular Society Ltd [1917] AC 406, HL; R v Waddington (1822) 1 B & C 26; R v Hetherington (1841) 4 State Tr NS 563; R v Boulter (1908) 72 JP 188; R v Gott (1922) 16 Cr App Rep 87, CCA.

The prohibition of blasphemy is not inconsistent with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953) Cmd 8969) art 10 (freedom of expression): Wingrove v United Kingdom (Application 17419/90) (1996) 24 EHRR 1, ECtHR. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

3 R v Boulter (1908) 72 JP 188; R v Gott (1922) 16 Cr App Rep 87, CCA.

4 If the defendant pleads not guilty to the publication of a (blasphemous) libel, he may rebut evidence of publication where done by the act of another person by his authority on proof of evidence that such publication was made without his authority, consent or knowledge, and that the publication did not arise from want of due care or caution on his part: Libel Act 1843 s 7; and see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 300. A criminal prosecution against any proprietor, editor or any person responsible for the publication of a newspaper for any libel published in it may not be commenced without the order of a judge in chambers: see the Law of Libel Amendment Act 1888 s 8; and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 303. However, s 8 does not apply to a prosecution for an offence under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 60 (offences in respect of reporting of assertions): see s 61(5); and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 303. Nothing in the Law of Libel Amendment Act 1888 s 3 (newspaper reports of proceedings in court privileged) authorises the publication of any blasphemous matter: see s 3 proviso; and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 299. Nothing in the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 58 or s 59 (orders in respect of, and restrictions on reporting of, assertions) affects the Law of Libel Amendment Act 1888 s 3 (privilege of newspaper reports of court proceedings): see the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 61(4); and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 302.

As to the power to search for and seize a blasphemous libel, and as to the disposal of any blasphemous libel so seized, see the Criminal Libel Act 1819 ss 1, 2; and PARA 370 note 8 ante.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(5) OFFENCES AGAINST RELIGION/827. Obstructing ministers of religion.

827. Obstructing ministers of religion.

Any person who: (1) by threats or force obstructs or prevents, or endeavours to obstruct or prevent, any clergyman or other minister in or from celebrating divine service or otherwise officiating in any church, chapel, meeting house or other place of divine worship, or in or from the performance of his duty in the lawful burial of the dead in any churchyard or other burial place; or (2) strikes or offers any violence to, or arrests upon any civil process or under the pretence of executing such process, any clergyman or other minister who is engaged in or to the knowledge of the offender is about to engage in any of these rites or duties, or who to his knowledge is going to or returning from their performance, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>1</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>2</sup> or to both<sup>3</sup>.

1 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

3 See the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 36; the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(2); the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1; and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 5(f). As to riotous or indecent behaviour in places of worship etc see ECCLESIASTICAL LAW vol 14 paras 1048, 1050; and as to disturbances at burial services see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 1086, 1175-1176.

(6) BIGAMY

828. Bigamy.

Any person who, being married<sup>1</sup>, marries any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, whether the second marriage<sup>2</sup> takes place in England or Northern Ireland or elsewhere<sup>3</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for any term not exceeding seven years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>5</sup> or to both<sup>6</sup>.

The above provisions do not, however, extend to: (1) any second marriage contracted elsewhere than in England and Northern Ireland by any other than a British national<sup>7</sup>; (2) any person marrying a second time whose husband or wife has been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past and has not been known by such person to be living within that time<sup>8</sup>; (3) any person who, at the time of such second marriage, has been divorced from the bond of the first marriage<sup>9</sup>; or (4) any person whose former marriage has been declared void<sup>10</sup> by any court of competent jurisdiction<sup>11</sup>.

The partner to a bigamous marriage who knows at the time of such marriage that the other person is married, may, it seems, be convicted of counselling the offence<sup>12</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'being married' see PARA 829 post; and as to evidence of being married see PARA 832 post. The place of the marriage is immaterial: 1 Hale PC 192.

2 'Second marriage' means the bigamous marriage charged in the indictment and may be a third or subsequent marriage: see R v Taylor [1950] 2 KB 368, 34 Cr App Rep 138, CCA. As to the second marriage see further PARA 830 post.

3 'Elsewhere' is not limited to the Queen's dominions, but includes any foreign country: R v Earl Russell [1901] AC 446, HL; but see also note 7 infra.

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

6 See the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 57; the Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 49, Sch 3; the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(2), Sch 3 Pt III; the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 5(i). See PARA 1103 post.

7 See R v Topping (1856) 25 LJMC 72, CCR (British subject: both marriages in Scotland; guilty of bigamy). This case refers to 'British subjects', but this is now a very narrow class of person: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 66 et seq. As to British nationality generally see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 5 et seq.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(6) BIGAMY/829. Meaning of 'being married'.

829. Meaning of 'being married'.

For a person to be within the meaning of the words 'being married' there must be a valid marriage subsisting at the date of the second marriage<sup>1</sup>; if the first marriage is void<sup>2</sup> or, at the date of the second marriage, has been declared void by a court of competent jurisdiction<sup>3</sup> or has been dissolved<sup>4</sup>, the second marriage is not bigamous. The second marriage is bigamous if the first marriage is voidable and has not been avoided at the date of the second marriage<sup>5</sup>, or if at that date a decree nisi of nullity or divorce has not been made absolute<sup>6</sup>. Although the first marriage must be monogamous, a potentially polygamous marriage may become monogamous in character, either by the operation of a relevant foreign law or by the acquisition of an English domicile; if a potentially polygamous marriage has become monogamous at the date of the second marriage, the parties to the first marriage are within the meaning of the words 'being married'<sup>7</sup>.

An honest belief, held on reasonable grounds, that the first marriage had been dissolved at the date of the second marriage, or that the first marriage was invalid, is a defence to an indictment for bigamy<sup>8</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'second marriage' see PARA 828 note 2 ante. As to the defence of seven years' absence see PARA 831 post.

See also R v Lamb (1934) 150 LT 519, CCA (giving notice to the superintendent registrar in a false name is not of itself sufficient to render invalid a marriage contracted in pursuance of it). As to the grounds which render marriages void and voidable see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 72 (2009) PARA 344 et seq. As to the validity of foreign marriages see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 208 et seq. A marriage entered into at any time outside England and Wales by a person domiciled in England and Wales which is not actually polygamous is not void on the ground that it is entered into under a law permitting polygamy: see Private International (Miscellaneous Provisions) Law Act 1995 s 5, 6(1); and CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 240. For exceptions see s 6(2), (3); and CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 240.

3 See PARA 828 text to note 11 ante. A decree of nullity before 1 August 1971 in respect of a voidable marriage put the parties retrospectively in the position of never having been married to each other; a decree after 31 July 1971 operates to annul the marriage only as respects any time after the decree has been made absolute: see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 72 (2009) PARA 319. As to recognition of foreign decrees of nullity see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 242 et seq.

4 As to dissolution of marriage see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 72 (2009) PARA 317 et seq; and as to the recognition of foreign decrees of divorce see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 242 et seq.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(6) BIGAMY/830. The second marriage.

830. The second marriage.

It is immaterial that the second marriage<sup>1</sup> would have been invalid apart from its bigamous nature; it is the appearing to contract a second marriage and the going through a form of ceremony known to and recognised by the law as capable of producing a valid marriage which constitute the offence<sup>2</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'second marriage' see PARA 828 note 2 ante.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(6) BIGAMY/831. Absence for seven years.

831. Absence for seven years.

Where continuous absence for the seven years preceding the second marriage<sup>1</sup> has been shown<sup>2</sup>, the onus is on the prosecution to prove that the defendant knew the other party to the first marriage to be alive within that period<sup>3</sup>. It is not sufficient to prove that he had the means of such knowledge<sup>4</sup>.

Even if the period of seven years has not elapsed, an honest belief at the time of the second marriage that the husband or wife was dead, provided it was based on reasonable grounds, is a defence to an indictment for bigamy<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'second marriage' see PARA 828 note 2 ante.

2 See PARA 828 ante. The onus of showing seven years' absence is, it seems, on the defendant: R v Jones (1883) 11 QBD 118, CCR (second marriage 17 years after first; no evidence of separation or as to when, if separated, husband and wife last saw each other; held, presumption that cohabitation continued, and this not displaced). As to presumptions in criminal law see PARA 1374 et seq post. The defence is available even though the absence was due to the defendant's wilful desertion: R v Faulkes (1903) 19 TLR 250.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(6) BIGAMY/832. Evidence of being married.

832. Evidence of being married.

The prosecution must prove the celebration of the first marriage and the identity of the parties; evidence of cohabitation with the reputation of being husband and wife is not sufficient<sup>1</sup>. If a certified copy of an entry in a marriage register book is produced<sup>2</sup>, the defendant's identity with the person named in it may be proved by any means and a witness to the register need not be called<sup>3</sup>. It is not, however, essential to prove registration; it is sufficient to call a person who was present at and can describe the ceremony and identify the parties<sup>4</sup>. If the first marriage is proved, its validity will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary<sup>5</sup>; but in the case of a foreign marriage expert evidence of validity is necessary<sup>6</sup>.

The prosecution must also prove that the first husband or wife was alive at the date of the second marriage<sup>7</sup>; where there is evidence only that he or she was alive at some time before that marriage, the question whether he or she was alive at the relevant date is one for the jury, and the law makes no presumption as to the continuance of life<sup>8</sup>.

In proceedings for bigamy, the defendant's wife or husband may be called as a witness for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the defendant<sup>9</sup>.

1 Morris v Miller (1767) 4 Burr 2057; Catherwood v Caslon (1844) 13 M & W 261 at 265. Cf R v Wilson (1862) 3 F & F 119 (evidence of prior cohabitation with reputation sufficient where defence alleges invalidity of first marriage). However, see also R v Naguib [1917] 1 KB 359, 12 Cr App Rep 187, CCA (prior foreign marriage; held expert evidence necessary).

2 A certified copy of an entry in a marriage register book purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the General Register Office is receivable as evidence of the marriage to which it related without any further or other proof of such entry: see the Marriage Act 1949 s 65(3).

6 R v Naguib [1917] 1 KB 359 at 361, 12 Cr App Rep 187 at 190, CCA. The evidence must be given by a professional lawyer or by a person who is deemed by virtue of his office to be an expert in the law of the country in question: R v Moscovitch (1927) 138 LT 183, 20 Cr App Rep 121, CCA.

7 For the meaning of 'second marriage' see PARA 828 note 2 ante. Except where there has been seven years' absence (see PARA 831 ante), it is not necessary to prove affirmatively that the defendant knew the other party to the first marriage was alive: R v Ellis (1858) 1 F & F 309; R v Jones (1869) 11 Cox CC 358, CCR.

(7) THE VAGRANCY ACTS 1824

833. Idle and disorderly persons.

Every person wandering abroad, or placing himself in any public<sup>1</sup> place, street, highway, court, or passage, to beg or gather alms<sup>2</sup>, is deemed to be an idle and disorderly person and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level three on the standard scale<sup>3</sup> or, if the person is convicted before one justice, a fine of £1 may be imposed<sup>4</sup>.

Every person causing or procuring or encouraging any child or children to wander abroad, or place himself in any public place, street, highway, court, or passage, to beg or gather alms<sup>5</sup>, is deemed to be an idle and disorderly person and is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month<sup>6</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level three on the standard scale in lieu of imprisonment<sup>7</sup>, or, if convicted before one justice, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 days or a fine of £1 in lieu of imprisonment<sup>8</sup>.

1 Any place of public resort or recreation ground belonging to, or under the control of, the local authority, and any unfenced ground adjoining or abutting upon any street in an urban district, is deemed to be an open and public space: Public Health Acts Amendment Act 1907 s 81.

2 This does not include a person who collects alms in an orderly manner for a specific purpose: Pointon v Hill (1884) 12 QBD 306 (workmen on strike seeking assistance, not begging); Mathers v Penfold [1915] 1 KB 514, DC. If the defendant offers something in return for the money given by passers-by, it could not be regarded as begging or gathering alms: Gray v Chief Constable of Greater Manchester [1983] Crim LR 45 (busking).

6 As from a day to be appointed this offence is no longer to be punishable with imprisonment: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(1), Sch 25 para 1 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 Vagrancy Act 1824 s 3 (amended by the National Assistance Act 1948 s 62, Sch 7 Pt I; the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(2); the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 77, Sch 14 para 1; the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 34(3)(b); and the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989 Sch 1). As from a day to be appointed the power to impose a sentence of imprisonment is abolished but the fine which may be imposed for this offence will remain a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: see the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 3 (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 34 para 145); and the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 70(1) (prospectively repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 9). ### 834. Rogues and vagabonds etc.

The following provisions have effect until a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>. The following persons are deemed to be rogues and vagabonds:

- 994 (1) every person committing an offence for which the offender is deemed to be an idle and disorderly person<sup>2</sup>, having been previously convicted as an idle and disorderly person;
- 995 (2) every person apprehended as an idle and disorderly person and violently resisting any constable or other peace officer so apprehending him, and being subsequently convicted of the offence for which he or was apprehended;
- 996 (3) every person going about as a gatherer or collector of alms, or endeavouring to procure charitable contributions of any nature or kind, under any false or fraudulent pretence;
- 997 (4) every person wandering abroad and endeavouring by the exposure of wounds or deformities to obtain or gather alms;
- 998 (5) every person wandering abroad and lodging in any barn or outhouse, or in any deserted or unoccupied building, or in the open air, or under a tent, or in any cart or waggon<sup>3</sup>, and not giving a good account of himself;
- 999 (6) every person found in or upon any dwelling house, warehouse, coach-house, stable, or outhouse, or in any enclosed yard, garden, or area for any unlawful purpose<sup>4</sup>.

A person committing any of these offences is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or, if convicted before one justice, for a term not exceeding 14 days, save that, where a person is convicted of wandering abroad and lodging in any barn or outhouse, or in any deserted or unoccupied building, or in the open air, or under a tent, or in any cart or waggon, and not giving a good account of himself, or of wandering abroad, and endeavouring by the exposure of wounds and deformities to obtain and gather alms, the court may not sentence him to imprisonment but has power to fine him<sup>5</sup>. A fine not exceeding level three on the standard scale<sup>6</sup>, or, if the person is convicted before one justice, a fine of £1, may be imposed in lieu of imprisonment<sup>7</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>8</sup> every person falling within heads (1) to (6) above commits an offence<sup>9</sup>. It is lawful for any justice of the peace to impose on any person who commits such an offence, being convicted thereof before him by the confession of such person, or by the evidence on oath of one or more credible witnesses:

- 1000 (a) in the case of a person convicted of the offence mentioned in head (5) above, a fine not exceeding level one on the standard scale<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1001 (b) in the case of a person convicted of any of the other offences mentioned in heads (1) to (4) and head (6) above, a fine not exceeding level three on the standard scale<sup>11</sup>.

In either case if the person is convicted before one justice a fine of £1 may be imposed<sup>12</sup>.

1 At the date at which this volume states the law, no day had been appointed for the commencement of the prospective amendments made to the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (see the text and notes 8-12 infra).

2 As to idle and disorderly persons see PARA 833 ante.

3 The reference to a person lodging under a tent or in a cart or waggon is not to be deemed to include a person lodging under a tent or in a cart or waggon with or in which he travels: Vagrancy Act 1935 s 1(4). A person wandering abroad and lodging as described is not to be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (as amended) unless it is proved:

- 277 (1) that in relation to the occasion on which he so lodged, he had been directed to a reasonably accessible place of shelter and failed to apply for, or refused, accommodation there (Vagrancy Act 1935 s 1(3)(a));
- 278 (2) that he is a person who persistently wanders abroad and, notwithstanding that a place of shelter is reasonably accessible, lodges or attempts so to lodge (s 1(3)(b)); or
- 279 (3) that by, or in the course of, so lodging, he caused damage to property, infection with vermin, or other offensive consequence, or that he so lodged in such circumstances as to appear to be likely so to do (s 1(3)(c)).

For these purposes, 'a place of shelter' means a place where provision is regularly made for giving, free of charge, accommodation for the night to such persons as apply for it: s 1(3).

4 Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1925 ss 42, 49(4), Sch 3; the Vagrancy Act 1935 s 1(2); the National Assistance Act 1948 s 62, Sch 7 Pt I; the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(2); the Theft Act 1968 s 33(3), Sch 3 Pt I; the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 s 5(2), Schedule; the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 ss 8, 10, Schedule Pt II; the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 77, Sch 14 para 1; the Public Order Act 1986 s 40(3), Sch 3; the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989 Sch 1; and the Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss 139, 140, Sch 6 para 1, Sch 7). It is not necessary to constitute a person a rogue and vagabond that he should lead a wandering and vagabond life: Monck v Hilton (1877) 2 Ex D 268, 41 JP 214. There must be a purpose to commit an offence punishable as a crime, and not a mere offence against, eg, morality: Hayes v Stevenson (1860) 3 LT 296; Smith v Chief Superintendent, Woking Police Station (1983) 76 Cr App Rep 234, DC (unlawful purpose; assault in criminal cause; victim in terror of some immediate violence; defendant in enclosed garden staring through window of bed-sitting room). Actual arrest on the premises etc is not necessary to constitute being 'found': Moran v Jones (1911) 27 TLR 421; R v Goodwin [1944] KB 518, [1944] 1 All ER 506, CCA (decided under the Prevention of Crimes Act 1871). 'Found' means discovered or seen: R v Goodwin supra. See also R v Parkin [1950] 1 KB 155, 34 Cr App Rep 1, CCA; R v Lumsden [1951] 2 KB 513, 35 Cr App Rep 57, CCA (both cases decided under the Larceny Act 1916 s 28(4) (repealed)).

'Dwelling house' includes the common hall of a block of flats: Hollyhomes v Hind [1944] KB 571, [1944] 2 All ER 8, DC. For the meaning of 'warehouse' see Holloran v Haughton (1976) 120 Sol Jo 116, DC. 'Enclosed yard, garden or area' connotes an area which is in the open air; thus a room within a building is not an 'enclosed area' for these purposes: Talbot v DPP [2000] 1 WLR 1102, sub nom Talbot v Oxford City Magistrates Court [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 60, DC. 'Area' has been held to mean that part of the basement of a house which is open to the air for the purpose of lighting the basement: Knott v Blackburn [1944] KB 77, [1944] 1 All ER 116, DC. A railway yard enclosed on all sides except across the tracks is not an enclosed area: Knott v Blackburn supra; Quatromini v Peck [1972] 3 All ER 521, [1972] 1 WLR 1318, DC. The essential feature of a 'yard' is that it should be a relatively small area ancillary to a building: Quatromini v Peck supra. A yard may be an enclosed area even though there are gaps in the surrounding walls etc: Goodhew v Morton [1962] 2 All ER 771, [1962] 1 WLR 210, DC. The fact that a place is described as a railway yard, shipyard etc does not make it a 'yard' for the purposes of the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (as amended): Quatromini v Peck supra at 525 and 1322.

835. Incurrable rogues.

Until a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> every person committing any offence which subjects him to be dealt with as a rogue and vagabond<sup>2</sup>, such person having been at some former time adjudged so to be, and duly convicted thereof<sup>3</sup>, is deemed to be an incurrable rogue and on conviction of any such offence may be committed, in custody or on bail, to the Crown Court for sentence<sup>4</sup>.

However, if a person deemed a rogue and a vagabond is thereafter:

- 1002 (1) convicted<sup>5</sup> of wandering abroad, or placing himself in any public place, street, highway, court, or passage, to beg or gather alms<sup>6</sup>; or
- 1003 (2) convicted<sup>7</sup>: (a) of wandering abroad and lodging in any barn or outhouse, or in any deserted or unoccupied building, or in the open air, or under a tent, or in any cart or waggon, and not giving a good account of himself<sup>8</sup>; or (b) of wandering abroad, and endeavouring by the exposure of wounds and deformities to obtain or gather alms<sup>9</sup>, he must be convicted of that offence and accordingly is not deemed to be an incurrable rogue and may not be committed to the Crown Court by reason only of that conviction<sup>10</sup>.

When a person has been committed to the Crown Court as an incurrable rogue, the court may examine into the circumstances of the case<sup>11</sup> and, if it thinks fit, may order that the offender be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year from the time of making such order<sup>12</sup>. Subject to one exception<sup>13</sup>, this is the only order the court has power to make<sup>14</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 70 is repealed by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 9 as from a day to be appointed under s 80(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 In any offence under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (as amended): see PARA 834 ante.

3 There must be a previous conviction under ibid s 4 (as amended). Previous convictions as an idle and disorderly person (see PARA 833 ante) are insufficient: R v Johnson [1909] 1 KB 439, 2 Cr App Rep 13, CCA. However, on the conviction under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 4 (as amended) a person need not have been expressly adjudged a rogue or vagabond: R v Teesdale (1927) 138 LT 160, 20 Cr App Rep 113, CCA.

4 Vagrancy Act 1824 s 5 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 83(3), Sch 10; the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 103, Sch 6 para 1; the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), Sch 8 Pt II para 5; the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 77, Sch 14 para 1(b); and the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989 Sch 1). 11 The court must satisfy itself that the offender has been convicted of an offence under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 5 (as amended) (see the text and note 4 supra) (R v Evans [1915] 2 KB 762, 11 Cr App Rep 178, CCA) and should inquire into the circumstances of the conviction (R v Holding (1934) 104 LJBK 28, 25 Cr App Rep 28, CCA). The Crown Court, however, has no power to decide whether the defendant is an incorrigible rogue; that will have been decided by the magistrates' court: R v Evans supra. The examination into the circumstances of the case must take place in the offender's presence (R v Cope (1925) 94 LJBK 662, 18 Cr App Rep 181, CCA) and he should be given an opportunity of cross-examining any witness called by the Crown and of addressing the court (R v Holding supra).

13 Where the court would have power to make a hospital order if the offender had been convicted before the court, ie where the requirements of the Mental Health Act 1983 s 37 (as amended) (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 491; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 332-333) are satisfied, it may make a hospital order, with or without a restriction order: see s 43(5); and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 498. As to restriction orders see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 337.

14 See R v Jackson [1974] QB 517, 59 Cr App Rep 23, CA. The offender must be sentenced as an incorrigible rogue and not for the offences for which he was convicted: R v Walters [1969] 1 QB 255, 53 Cr App Rep 9, CA. It is open to the court to make no order at all: R v Jackson supra.

(8) INTIMIDATION AND HARASSMENT

837. Intimidation.

A person who, with a view to compelling<sup>1</sup> any other person to abstain from doing, or to do, any act which that person<sup>2</sup> has a legal right to do or abstain from doing, wrongfully<sup>3</sup> and without legal authority:

- 1004 (1) uses violence to or intimidates<sup>4</sup> that person or his spouse or civil partner or children, or injures his property<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1005 (2) persistently follows<sup>6</sup> such other person about from place to place<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1006 (3) hides any tools, clothes or other property owned or used by that person, or deprives him of or hinders him in the use thereof<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1007 (4) watches or besets the house or other place where that person resides, works, or carries on business or happens to be, or the approach to such house or place<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1008 (5) follows such other person with two or more other persons in a disorderly manner in or through any street or road<sup>10</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>11</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale or to both<sup>12</sup>.

1 It does not matter whether the compulsion was effective: Agnew v Munro 1891 28 SLR 335. A person acts 'with a view to compelling' something for these purposes when it is his purpose or aim to achieve it: J Lyons & Sons v Wilkins [1899] 1 Ch 255 at 270, CA. Purpose must be distinguished from motive (ie the reason why someone acts): J Lyons & Co Ltd v Wilkins supra; DPP v Fidler [1992] 1 WLR 91, 94 Cr App Rep 286, DC. It is insufficient to act simply with the purpose of persuading someone to abstain from doing something which he has a right to do, and vice versa; the defendant must act with a view to compelling someone to abstain etc: DPP v Fidler supra.

2 Ie any other person: J Lyons & Sons v Wilkins [1899] 1 Ch 255, CA.

3 The conduct must amount to a civil wrong separately from the existence of the statutory offence: Ward, Lock & Co Ltd v Operative Printers' Assistants' Society (1906) 22 TLR 327, CA; Fowler v Kibble [1922] 1 Ch 487, CA; Thomas v National Union of Mineworkers (South Wales Area) [1986] Ch 20, [1985] 2 All ER 1. Cf J Lyons & Sons v Wilkins [1896] 1 Ch 811, CA.

4 'Intimidate' includes putting persons in fear by the exhibition of force or violence or the threat of force or violence; there is no limitation restricting the meaning of 'intimidate' to cases of violence or threats of violence to the person: R v Jones [1974] ICR 310, CA (considering Judge v Bennett (1887) 52 JP 247; Connor v Kent, Gibson v Lawson, Curran v Treleaven [1891] 2 QB 545, CCR). Abuse, swearing and jostling may constitute intimidation if such threats are serious and taken seriously by those who receive them: News Group Newspapers Ltd v SOGAT 82 (No 2) [1987] ICR 181 at 204.

838. Harassment of debtors.

If a person, with the object of coercing another person to pay money claimed from the other as a debt due under a contract:

- 1009 (1) harasses the other with demands for payment which, in respect of their frequency or the manner or occasion of making any such demand, or of any threat or publicity by which any demand is accompanied, are calculated to subject him or members of his family or household to alarm, distress or humiliation<sup>1</sup>;
- 1010 (2) falsely represents, in relation to the money claimed, that criminal proceedings lie for failure to pay it<sup>2</sup>;
- 1011 (3) falsely represents himself to be authorised in some official capacity to claim or enforce payment<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1012 (4) utters a document falsely represented by him to have some official character or purporting to have some official character which he knows it has not<sup>4</sup>, he is guilty of an offence<sup>5</sup> and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale<sup>6</sup>.

A person may be guilty of an offence by virtue of head (1) above if he concert with others in the taking of such action as is there described, notwithstanding that his own course of conduct does not by itself amount to harassment<sup>7</sup>. Head (1) above does not apply, however, to anything done by a person which is reasonable, and otherwise permissible in law, for the purpose of: (a) securing the discharge of an obligation due, or believed by him to be due, to himself or to persons for whom he acts, or protecting himself or them from future loss<sup>8</sup>; or (b) the enforcement of any liability by legal process<sup>9</sup>.

(10) OFFENCES RELATING TO BEHAVIOUR IN STREETS

840. Introduction.

In addition to the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and other modern legislation regulating behaviour in highways<sup>2</sup>, there are several other enactments, mainly contained in the Town Police Clauses Act 1847<sup>3</sup> and equivalent London legislation of 1839<sup>4</sup>, which regulate behaviour and occupations in streets by creating offences<sup>5</sup>.

Where a person persistently breaks the law and there is no other sufficient sanction to prevent the breach, the High Court may, in its discretion, grant an injunction at the suit of the Attorney General<sup>6</sup>.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(10) OFFENCES RELATING TO BEHAVIOUR IN STREETS/841.

Offences relating to fires, firearms, games etc.

841. Offences relating to fires, firearms, games etc.

A person is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a penalty<sup>1</sup> if:

- 1013 (1) without lawful authority or excuse, he lights any fire, or discharges any firearm or firework, within 50 feet from the centre of a highway<sup>2</sup> which consists of or comprises a carriageway<sup>3</sup>, and in consequence thereof the highway is damaged<sup>4</sup>;
- 1014 (2) without lawful authority or excuse, he lights any fire on or over a highway which consists of or comprises a carriageway, or discharges any firearm or firework within 50 feet from the centre of such a highway, and in consequence a user of the highway is injured, interrupted or endangered<sup>5</sup>;
- 1015 (3) in any thoroughfare or public place in the metropolitan police district or the City of London<sup>6</sup>, he wantonly discharges any firearm, or throws or discharges any stone or other missile, to the damage or danger of any person, or makes any bonfire, or throws or sets fire to any firework<sup>7</sup>;
- 1016 (4) in any street<sup>8</sup> in England and Wales outside the metropolitan police district and the City of London, to the obstruction, annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers<sup>9</sup>, he wantonly discharges any firearm, or throws or discharges any stone or other missile, or makes any bonfire, or throws or sets fire to any firework<sup>10</sup>;
- 1017 (5) he plays at football or any other game<sup>11</sup> on a highway<sup>12</sup> to the annoyance<sup>13</sup> of a highway user<sup>14</sup>;
- 1018 (6) in any thoroughfare or public place in the metropolitan police district or the City of London, or in any street elsewhere in England and Wales, he flies any kite to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers<sup>15</sup>;
- 1019 (7) in any thoroughfare or public place in the metropolitan police district or the City of London, he makes or uses any slide on ice or snow to the common danger of the passengers<sup>16</sup>; or
- 1020 (8) in any street outside the metropolitan police district or the City of London, he makes or uses any slide on ice or snow to the obstruction, annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers<sup>17</sup>.

1 These offences are punishable on summary conviction: Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 76 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1988); City of London Police Act 1839 ss 97, 100; Public Health Act 1875 s 251 (which, although repealed by the Public Health Act 1936 s 346, Sch 3 Pt I (itself repealed), remains effective for present purposes); Public Health Act 1936 s 316; Highways Act 1980 s 310. However, for restrictions on proceedings under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28 see PARA 848 post.

2 For the meaning of 'highway' see the Highways Act 1980 s 328(1), (2); and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 7.

3 For the meaning of 'carriageway' see ibid s 329(1); and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 64.

4 Highways Act 1980 s 131(1)(d). The penalty is a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: s 131(3); Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 35, 38(1), (6), (8), 46(1), (4). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

5 Highways Act 1980 s 161(2) (substituted by the Highways (Amendment) Act 1986 s 1(1), (2)). The penalty is a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Highways Act 1980 s 161(2) (as so substituted).

6 As to the metropolitan police district see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 137; and as to the City of London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 31.

7 Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 54(15); City of London Police Act 1839 s 35(15). As to the fine for an offence under the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 54 see PARA 849 note 4 post. Under the City of London Police Act 1839 s 35, the fine is one not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale: s 35; Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 92(1), Sch 3 Pt I; City of London (Various Powers) Act 1979 s 21; Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 46(1), (4).

8 'Street' includes any road, square, court, alley and thoroughfare, or public passage: Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 3. 'Street' includes the carriageway and footway at the sides: see A-G v Beynon [1970] Ch 1, [1969] 2 All ER 263; and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARAS 9, 202. In addition, for the purposes of this offence, any place of public resort or recreation ground belonging to or under the control of the local authority, and any unfenced ground adjoining or abutting upon any street, is deemed to be a 'street': Public Health Acts Amendment Act 1907 s 81; Local Government Act 1972 s 180(2), Sch 14 paras 23, 26.

9 The requirement of annoyance etc to the residents or passengers qualifies the whole of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28. Evidence that two constables heard the indecent language is sufficient evidence of annoyance to passengers: Brabham v Wookey (1901) 18 TLR 99, DC. 'Residents' refers to occupiers of residential premises in the street, and 'passengers' to passers-by: Woolley v Corbishley (1860) 24 JP 773, DC; Read v Perrett (1876) 1 Ex D 349, DC. It is open to a court to find that a police officer who was a passer-by was annoyed at being abused by obscene language: Hoogstraten v Goward [1967] Crim LR 590, DC.

10 Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28 (as applied: see PARA 848 post). As to the penalty see PARA 848 post.

See also the Explosives Act 1875 s 80 (as amended) (throwing fireworks in highways etc); and EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 1020. The penalty for this offence is a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: see s 80; the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 92(1), Sch 3 Pt I; and the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38(1), (6), (8), 41(1), (4). See R v Meade (1903) 19 TLR 540 (common law offence of discharging arms in a public place).

11 Eg a mock 'stag hunt' where people in fancy dress chase a man dressed like a stag: Pappin v Maynard (1863) 9 LT 327, DC.

12 See note 2 supra.

14 Highways Act 1980 s 161(3). The penalty is a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale: s 161(3); Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 46(1), (4).

It is an offence to play a game in any thoroughfare or public place in the metropolitan police district or the City of London to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers: Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 54(17); City of London Police Act 1839 s 35(17). As to the fine under the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 see PARA 849 note 4 post; and as to the fine under the City of London Police Act 1839 see note 7 supra.

15 Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 54(17); City of London Police Act 1839 s 35(17); Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28. As to the fine under the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 see PARA 849 note 4 post; as to the fine under the City of London Police Act 1839 see note 7 supra; and as to the fine under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 see PARA 848 post.

16 Metropolitan Police Act 1839 s 54(17); City of London Police Act 1839 s 35(17). As to the fine under the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 see PARA 849 note 4 post; and as to the fine under the City of London Police Act 1839 see note 7 supra.

17 Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28. As to the fine see PARA 848 post.

It is also an offence, to the obstruction, annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers in any street: (1) to fix or place a flowerpot or box, or other heavy article, in an upper window without sufficiently guarding it against being blow down; (2) to throw from the roof or any part of a house or building any slate, brick, wood, rubbish or other thing, except snow thrown so as not to fall on any passenger; or (3) for an occupier of a house or other building, or other person, to order or permit a person in his service to stand on a window sill in order to clean, paint or perform any other operation on the outside of the window or on any house or other building, unless the window is in the sunk or basement storey: s 28. See also West Riding Cleaning Co Ltd v Jowett [1938] 4 All ER 21, DC, where the provision was applied to a window cleaning contractor. As to the penalty see PARA 848 post.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(10) OFFENCES RELATING TO BEHAVIOUR IN STREETS/843.
Advertisements, placards, defacement of walls etc in London.

843. Advertisements, placards, defacement of walls etc in London.

Within the City of London and the metropolitan police district<sup>1</sup> no person may carry about on foot, on horseback or on any motor vehicle, trailer or carriage in any thoroughfare or public place, to the obstruction or annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers, any picture, placard, notice or advertisement, whether written, printed or painted on or posted or attached to any part of the vehicle or carriage or on any board or otherwise<sup>2</sup>.

In such parts of the City of London and the area enclosed in a circle of which the centre is Charing Cross, and the radii are six miles in length as measured in a straight line from Charing Cross, no picture, print, board, placard or notice, except in such form and manner as may be approved<sup>3</sup> by the commissioner of police<sup>4</sup>, may be carried or distributed by way of advertisement<sup>5</sup> in any street by any person on foot or riding in any vehicle<sup>6</sup> or on horseback, although this does not apply to the sale of newspapers<sup>7</sup>.

The Secretary of State may make regulations for restricting the use of vehicles and animals, and of sandwichmen and other persons, in streets<sup>8</sup> in Greater London for the purposes of advertisement of such a nature or in such a manner as to be likely to be a source of danger or to cause obstruction to traffic including foot passengers<sup>9</sup>.

A person who without lawful authority defaces the surface of a street in Greater London, or a structure on it or a building adjacent to it, is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>10</sup>. A person who in any thoroughfare or public place in the metropolitan police district or the City of London, without the consent of the owner or occupier, affixes any posting bill or other paper against or on any building, wall, fence or pale with chalk or paint or in any other way whatsoever is also liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>11</sup>.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(10) OFFENCES RELATING TO BEHAVIOUR IN STREETS/846.

Animals in streets, repair of vehicles etc.

846. Animals in streets, repair of vehicles etc.

A person is liable on summary conviction to a penalty if: (1) in any thoroughfare or public place<sup>1</sup> in the metropolitan police district or the City of London<sup>2</sup>, to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers; or (2) in any street<sup>3</sup> elsewhere in England and Wales, to the obstruction, annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers, he: (a) exposes for show or sale<sup>4</sup> (except in a market<sup>5</sup> lawfully appointed for that purpose) any horse or other animal; (b) shows any caravan containing any animal<sup>6</sup> or any other show or public entertainment; (c) shoes, bleeds or farries any horse or animal (except in cases of accident); (d) cleans, dresses, exercises, trains or breaks any horse or animal; or (e) makes or repairs any part of any motor vehicle, trailer, cart or carriage (except in cases of accident where repair on the spot<sup>7</sup> is necessary)<sup>8</sup>. In the metropolitan police district and the City of London these restrictions extend to feeding or foddering animals and to cleaning any part of a motor vehicle, trailer, cart or carriage<sup>9</sup>.

It is also an offence, punishable on summary conviction with a penalty, for a person in any such place<sup>10</sup> to turn loose<sup>11</sup> horses or cattle<sup>12</sup>, to suffer any unmuzzled ferocious dog to be at large there, and to set on or urge animals to attack, worry or put in fear persons or animals<sup>13</sup>. For this to be an offence outside the metropolitan police district and the City of London obstruction, annoyance or danger to the residents or passengers must be caused<sup>14</sup>.

1 A place where members of the public go although they have no legal right, or where they are invited to go, is a public place.

848. Offences under the Town Police Clauses Act 1847.

The provisions of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 for the prevention of obstructions and nuisances in streets<sup>1</sup> apply throughout England and Wales outside the metropolitan police district and the City of London<sup>2</sup>.

Every person who commits certain offences<sup>3</sup> in any street to the obstruction, annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers is liable for each offence of which he is convicted to a fine not exceeding level three on the standard scale<sup>4</sup> or, in the discretion of the magistrates before whom he is convicted, may be committed to prison for a period not exceeding 14 days<sup>5</sup>. The magistrates must decide whether the act done or the thing placed in a street is such as to be an obstruction, annoyance or danger, there being no obstruction unless there is unreasonable use of the street; but it is unnecessary to show that any person was actually obstructed, annoyed or endangered<sup>6</sup>. In the case of words or noise it is sufficient to show merely that one person was annoyed<sup>7</sup>, and the evidence of a police constable suffices<sup>8</sup>.

The magistrates must determine whether the place is a street, even if dedication as a highway is disputed<sup>9</sup>. However, evidence of a claim to limited dedication, subject to the right to place things in the street, may raise a bona fide claim of title which prevents the magistrates from convicting, but the evidence must be of a cogent character<sup>10</sup>.

Offences under these provisions may be prosecuted before a magistrates' court<sup>11</sup>; but proceedings must not be taken by any person other than by a party aggrieved, or by the local authority of the district in which the offence is committed, without the written consent of the Attorney General<sup>12</sup>.

'Relevant local authority' means a local authority as defined in the Local Government Act 1972 s 270 (as amended) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 23, 658), and any body which was the predecessor of a local authority as so defined: Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 s 12(2)(a), (b). #### 849. Offences under the Metropolitan Police Act 1839.

A person who, within the limits of the metropolitan police district<sup>1</sup>, commits any offence under certain provisions<sup>2</sup> in any thoroughfare or public place<sup>3</sup> is liable to a fine<sup>4</sup>.

Whenever any person having charge of any motor vehicle or trailer, horse, cart, carriage or boat, or any other animal or thing, is taken into custody<sup>5</sup>, it is lawful for any constable to take charge of the vehicle etc and to deposit it in a place of safe custody as security for payment of any penalty to which that person may become liable, and of any expenses necessarily incurred for taking charge of and keeping it, and the magistrate may order it to be sold to satisfy the penalty and expenses in default of payment as if it had been distrained<sup>6</sup>.

Nothing in the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 prevents any person from being indicted for any indictable offence made punishable on summary conviction by that Act or from being liable under any other Act to any other or higher penalty or punishment than is provided for the offence by that Act<sup>7</sup>.

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(10) OFFENCES RELATING TO BEHAVIOUR IN STREETS/850.

Byelaws regulating behaviour in streets.

850. Byelaws regulating behaviour in streets.

Byelaws for good rule and government and for the prevention and suppression of nuisances may be made in England by the council of a district or London borough, and in Wales by the council of a principal area (that is, a county or county borough)<sup>1</sup>. Under these provisions, byelaws are frequently made which regulate behaviour in streets. Such byelaws may prohibit the playing of musical instruments or singing in a street after being required by a constable to stop, and in this case need not be confined to cases where the playing or singing causes annoyance to householders<sup>2</sup>. However, an absolute prohibition of music has been held to be unreasonable<sup>3</sup>.

The byelaws may prohibit swearing or the use of indecent or obscene language under such circumstances as to be an annoyance to the people passing along the highway<sup>4</sup>. However, in this case the byelaw is bad if there is no requirement of annoyance<sup>5</sup>. A byelaw providing that 'no person shall wilfully annoy passengers in the street' is void for uncertainty<sup>6</sup>.

A byelaw may deal with a nuisance already punishable by statute<sup>7</sup>. However, a byelaw prohibiting an act which is prohibited by statute is repugnant to the general law if it purports to exclude an exception contained in the statute or takes away a defence available under it<sup>8</sup>.

A byelaw prohibiting the distribution of any paper wholly or mainly devoted to giving information as to the probable results of races is bad, because it is framed too widely<sup>9</sup>, as is a byelaw prohibiting, without qualification, street trading by children at night<sup>10</sup>.

A byelaw prohibiting an act except under licence may be held to be bad<sup>11</sup>.

1 See the Local Government Act 1972 s 235(1); and the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 s 66(5), Sch 15 para 49. As respects the City of London, the Common Council may make byelaws (although this power refers only to the 'suppression' and not the prevention of nuisances): City of London (Various Powers) Act 1961 s 39(1); Local Law (City of London) Order 1965, SI 1965/508, art 4, Sch 2. As to the making of byelaws in London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 10. The confirming authority in relation to byelaws made under the Local Government Act 1972 s 235 is the Secretary of State (s 235(2)); in Wales the Secretary of State's function is exercisable by him concurrently with the National Assembly for Wales: Government of Wales Act 1998 s 22(1); National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999, SI 1999/672. Byelaws must not be made under the Local Government Act 1972 s 235 for any purpose as respects any area if provision for that purpose as respects that area is made or may be made by or under any other enactment: s 235(3). As to the making and confirmation of byelaws see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 553 et seq. Byelaws must be intra vires, not repugnant to general law, certain, and reasonable: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 560 et seq.

2 R v Powell (1884) 48 JP 740, DC; Kruse v Johnson [1898] 2 QB 91, DC (where a full court was convened consequently on the disagreement of the judges in Brownscombe v Johnson (1898) 62 JP 326, DC). Where a byelaw prohibited the use of any noisy instrument 'so as to cause annoyance to the inhabitants', and the justices were satisfied that the instrument was likely to cause annoyance, it was not necessary that there should be any evidence whether one or more people were in fact annoyed: Raymond v Cook [1958] 3 All ER 407, [1958] 1 WLR 1098, DC.

4 Mantle v Jordan [1897] 1 QB 248, DC.

5 Strickland v Haynes [1896] 1 QB 290, DC. This is because the provisions of the Town Police Clauses Act 1847 s 28 (see PARA 848 ante), dealing with precisely the same subject requires annoyance to be proved: Strickland v Haynes supra, as explained and distinguished in Burnett v Berry [1896] 1 QB 641, DC; Thomas v Sutters [1900] 1 Ch 10, CA; Gentel v Rapps [1902] 1 KB 160, DC. The latter two cases were in turn distinguished in Powell v May [1946] KB 330, [1946] 1 All ER 444, DC (see the text and note 8 infra). See also Teale v Harris (1896) 60 JP 744, DC; Kruse v Johnson [1898] 2 QB 91, DC; White v Morley [1899] 2 QB 34, DC.

6 Nash v Finlay (1901) 66 JP 183, DC.

7 Batchelor v Sturley (1905) 69 JP 398, DC (where street traders were prohibited from throwing down and leaving waste etc).

8 Powell v May [1946] KB 330, [1946] 1 All ER 444, DC (where the byelaw prohibited frequenting streets or public places for the purposes of betting). Cf Burnett v Berry [1896] 1 QB 641, DC; White v Morley [1899] 2 QB 34, DC; Thomas v Sutters [1900] 1 Ch 10, CA (which were decided before frequenting a street etc for betting was made a statutory offence). As to betting in streets and on racecourses see LICENSING AND GAMBLING.

9 Scott v Pilliner [1904] 2 KB 855, DC.

10 Such a byelaw is neither for good rule and government, nor for the prevention of nuisances: Macdonald v Lochrane (1887) 51 JP 629, DC.

11 Eg on the ground that under the terms of the byelaw: (1) three householders (who may be rival traders) can prevent the grant of the licence (Elwood v Bullock (1844) 6 QB 383); or (2) discretion is given to the mayor in a case where the byelaw is for the prevention of nuisances (Munro v Watson (1887) 51 JP 660, DC).

(11) STREET COLLECTIONS

851. Regulations as to street collections.

Until a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> certain authorities<sup>2</sup> may make regulations with respect to the places where and the conditions under which persons may be permitted in any street<sup>3</sup> or public place<sup>4</sup> within their areas to collect money<sup>5</sup> or sell articles for the benefit of charitable or other purposes<sup>6</sup>. However, such regulations cannot apply to the selling of articles where the articles are sold in the ordinary course of trade, for the purpose of earning a livelihood, and no representation is made by or on behalf of the seller that any part of the proceeds of sale will be devoted to any charitable purpose<sup>7</sup>. Any person who acts in contravention of any such regulations is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level one on the standard scale<sup>8</sup>.

Regulations which must be observed by all persons within the metropolitan police district<sup>9</sup> relate to the places where and the conditions under which persons may collect money in any street for any charitable or other purpose<sup>10</sup>.

1 The Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 is repealed by the Charities Act 1992 ss 78(2), 79(7), Sch 7 as from a day to be appointed under s 79(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Common Council of the City of London (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 51-55), the police authority for the metropolitan police district (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 137) and the council of each district: Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1A) (added by the Local Government Act 1972 s 251(2), Sch 29 para 22). However, any regulations made by a district council do not affect any part of its area which also falls within the area covered by the metropolitan police district: see the Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1A) (as so added).

3 'Street' includes any highway and any public bridge, road, lane, footway, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not: ibid s 5(4).

4 'Public place' is not defined by the Police, Factories &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916. In the context of other statutes where 'public place' has been left undefined, 'public place' has been construed as meaning a place to which members of the public, whether on payment or otherwise, are admitted or have access at the material time: R v Wellard (1884) 14 QBD 63, CCR; R v Collinson (1931) 75 Sol Jo 491, CCA; Elkins v Cartledge [1947] 1 All ER 829, DC. Cf Brannan v Peek [1948] 1 KB 68, [1947] 2 All ER 572, DC. The absence of a physical obstruction or of a notice forbidding entry does not of itself mean that the public has access: R v Spence [1999] RTR 353, CA. It is irrelevant that the public could have had access; the question is whether the public has actually had access to the place in question: R v Spence supra. If the public has had access, the fact that it has been in defiance of an express prohibition is irrelevant: R v DPP, ex p Taussik [2000] 9 Archbold News 2, DC (where this was assumed). Access by virtue of possessing a special qualification, eg that of being an employee at the premises in question or a member of a club whose premises are in question (DPP v Vivier [1991] 4 All ER 18, DC) is not access as a member of the public.

5 Street collections under these powers are to be distinguished from house-to-house collections for charity, as to which see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 461 et seq.

6 Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1) (amended by the Local Government Act 1972 s 251, Sch 29 para 22). The regulations do not come into operation until they have been confirmed by the Secretary of State, and published for such time and in such manner as he may direct: Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1) proviso (a). With the exception of the regulations referred to in note 10 infra, such regulations are not made as statutory instruments. A person making a collection in good faith for a charitable object is not begging within the meaning of the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 3 (as amended): Mathers v Penfold [1915] 1 KB 514, DC.

7 Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1) proviso (b).

8 Ibid s 5(1); Criminal Law Act 1977 s 31(5)(a), (6)(a), (9); Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 46(1), (4). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

9 As to the metropolitan police district see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 137.

10 See the Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1230 (amended by SI 1986/1696) (made pursuant to the Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1)); and PARA 852 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/11. MISCELLANEOUS OFFENCES/(11) STREET COLLECTIONS/852. Street collections in London.

852. Street collections in London.

The following provisions apply in the metropolitan police district<sup>1</sup>, and any person who acts in contravention of them is liable on summary conviction to a fine<sup>2</sup>.

No collection<sup>3</sup> may be made in any street<sup>4</sup> or public place<sup>5</sup> within that district unless the society, committee or other body of persons responsible for the collection has obtained from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner of the a permit<sup>6</sup> for the collection<sup>7</sup>. No collection may be made except on the day and between the hours stated in the permit<sup>8</sup>, which may limit the collection to such districts, streets or public places or such parts of them as the Commissioner thinks fit<sup>9</sup>. No person may assist or take part in any collection unless in possession of a written authority signed on behalf of the chief promoter<sup>10</sup>, and every authorised person must produce that authority forthwith for inspection by any constable on request<sup>11</sup>.

While collecting, a collector must remain stationary, and one or two collectors together must not be nearer to another collector than 25 metres<sup>12</sup>. No collection may be made in any part of the carriageway of any street<sup>13</sup>; nor may it be made in such a manner as to cause, or be likely to cause, danger, obstruction, inconvenience or annoyance to any person<sup>14</sup>. No collector may importune any person to the annoyance of that person<sup>15</sup>, or be accompanied by any animal<sup>16</sup>. No person under the age of 16 may act or be permitted to act as a collector<sup>17</sup>.

Every collector must carry a collecting box<sup>18</sup>. All such boxes must be numbered consecutively and be securely closed and sealed in such a way as to prevent them being opened without the seal being broken<sup>19</sup>. All money received from contributions<sup>20</sup> must immediately be placed in a collecting box<sup>21</sup>, and every collector must deliver, unopened, all collecting boxes in his possession to a promoter<sup>22</sup>. A collector must not carry or use any collecting box, receptacle or tray which does not bear displayed prominently on it the name of the charity or fund which is to benefit, or any collecting box which is not duly numbered<sup>23</sup>.

A collecting box must be opened in the presence of a promoter and another responsible person<sup>24</sup>, although a collecting box delivered unopened to a bank may be opened by a bank official<sup>25</sup>. As soon as a collecting box has been opened the person opening it must count the contents and enter the amount with the number of the box on a list which he must certify<sup>26</sup>.

No payment by way of reward may be made to a collector, and no payment may be made out of the proceeds of a collection, either directly or indirectly, to any other person connected with its promotion or conduct for or in respect of services connected with it except any shown in the application and approved by the Commissioner<sup>27</sup>.

Within three months after the date of a collection, the chief promoter must forward to the Commissioner a statement of receipts and expenditure<sup>28</sup> certified by two of the persons responsible for the collection<sup>29</sup> and by a qualified accountant<sup>30</sup>, and lists showing the names of the collectors and the amounts contained in each collecting box; and must, if required by the Commissioner, satisfy him as to the proper application of the proceeds<sup>31</sup>. The chief promoter must also, within the same period, at his own expense and after any certification required, publish in such newspaper or newspapers as the Commissioner may direct a statement showing specified details in connection with the collection<sup>32</sup>.

These provisions are simplified in respect of carol singing collections<sup>33</sup>.

1 As to the metropolitan police district see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 137.

2 See the Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5(1). As to the prospective repeal of the Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 see PARA 851 note 1 ante. As to the fine see PARA 851 ante. The Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1230 (amended by SI 1986/1696) (which are made in pursuance of the Police, Factories, &c (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1916 s 5 (see PARA 851 ante)), do not apply in respect of a collection taken at a meeting in the open air, or to the sale of articles in the course of trade: Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, reg 3.

3 'Collection' means a collection of money or a sale of articles in any street or public place within the metropolitan police district for the benefit of charitable or other purposes; and 'collector' is to be construed accordingly: ibid reg 2.

4 For the meaning of 'street' see PARA 851 note 3 ante.

5 As to the meaning of 'public place' see PARA 851 note 4 ante.

6 'Permit' means a permit for collection: Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1230, reg 2.

7 See ibid regs 2, 4. Every application for a permit must be made in writing to the Commissioner in the form set out in Sch 1 not later than the first day of the month preceding the month in which it is proposed to hold the collection, although where there are special reasons he may consider an application made later: reg 5(1). The application must be made by a society, committee or other body consisting of not less than three members acting through not less than three members who are jointly responsible for the collection: reg 5(2). The Commissioner must refer the application to an advisory committee appointed by him with the approval of the Secretary of State, and he may have regard to its recommendations: reg 5(3).

8 Ibid reg 6.

9 Ibid reg 7.

10 Ibid reg 8(1). 'Chief promoter' means a society, committee or other body consisting of not less than three persons to which a permit has been granted: reg 2.

11 Ibid reg 8(2).

12 Ibid reg 12(a), (b). The Commissioner may waive these requirements in respect of an authorised collection in connection with a procession: reg 12 proviso.

13 Ibid reg 9. The Commissioner may allow a collection with a procession to take place on such a carriageway: reg 9 proviso.

14 Ibid reg 10.

15 Ibid reg 11.

16 Ibid reg 14.

17 See ibid reg 13. However, in the case of a collection in connection with a procession, the Commissioner may authorise the chief promoter to permit persons aged under 16 but not under 14 years to act as collectors after receipt of a written assurance by such chief promoter that each such person will at all times be accompanied by a responsible able-bodied adult: reg 13 proviso.

18 Ibid reg 15(1). 'Collecting box' means a box or other receptacle for the reception of money from contributors: reg 2.

19 Ibid reg 15(2).

20 'Contributor' means a person who contributes to a collection, and includes a purchaser of articles for sale for the benefit of charitable or other purposes: ibid reg 2.

21 Ibid reg 15(3).

22 Ibid reg 15(4). 'Promoter' means a person (authorised in that behalf by the chief promoter) who causes others to act as collectors: reg 2.

23 Ibid reg 16.

- 27 Ibid reg 18.
- 28 For the form of the statement see ibid Sch 2.
- 29 Ie two of the persons referred to in ibid reg 5(2): see note 7 supra.
- 30 Ibid reg 19(1)(a). 'A qualified accountant' means a member of one or more of the following bodies: (1) the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales; (2) the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Scotland; (3) the Association of Certified Accountants; (4) the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland: reg 19(4). If a collection results in a sum of £400 or less being collected, the Commissioner may waive the requirement for certification by a qualified accountant and substitute for it a requirement for certification by an independent responsible person unless, after examination of the statement, he decides that it should be certified by a qualified accountant: reg 19(1)(a) proviso (amended by SI 1986/1696).
- 31 Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1230, reg 19(1)(b), (c).
- 32 See ibid reg 19(2). Not later than seven days after the publication of a newspaper containing this statement, the chief promoter must send a copy to the Commissioner: reg 19(3).
- 33 See ibid reg 20 (amended by SI 1986/1696). The Chief Superintendent in charge of the police division may issue a certificate to the person appearing to him to be principally concerned in promoting a collection to be made, in accordance with the certificate, in the period from 1 December to 24 December in connection with the singing or playing (including the reproduction of recordings) of Christmas carols by two or more persons assembled together: Street Collections (Metropolitan Police District) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1230, reg 20(1), (2) (as so amended). In the case of such a collection, regs, 4, 5, 12(b), 17 and 19 and (so far as they relate to numbering collecting boxes) regs 15(2), 16, do not apply, and other regulations are modified appropriately: see reg 20(3).

851-852 Regulations as to street collections, Street collections in London

853. Bomb hoaxes.

Any person who places any article<sup>1</sup> in any place whatever, or dispatches any article by post, rail or any other means whatever of sending things from one place to another, with the intention, in either case, of inducing in some other person a belief that it is likely to explode or ignite and thereby cause personal injury or damage to property is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup>.

A person who communicates any information which he knows or believes to be false to another person with the intention of inducing in him or any other person a false belief that a bomb or other thing liable to explode or ignite is present in any place or location whatever is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence<sup>4</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>6</sup> or to both<sup>7</sup>.

For a person to be guilty of such an offence<sup>8</sup>, it is not necessary for him to have any particular person in mind as the person in whom he intends to induce the requisite belief<sup>9</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'article' includes substance: Criminal Law Act 1977 s 51(1).

2 Ibid s 51(1).

3 Ibid s 51(2). The information need not be specific: see R v Webb (1995) Times, 19 June, CA (emergency call, saying 'there is a bomb'; held sufficient for an offence under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 51(2)).

4 Ie an offence under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 51(1) or (2).

5 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

854. Hoaxes involving noxious things or substances.

A person is guilty of an offence if he places any substance<sup>1</sup> or other thing in any place, or sends any substance or other thing from one place to another, by post, rail or any other means whatever, with the intention of inducing in a person anywhere in the world a belief that it is likely to be, or contain, a noxious substance or other noxious thing and thereby endanger human life or create a serious risk to human health<sup>2</sup>.

A person is guilty of an offence if he communicates any information which he knows or believes to be false with the intention of inducing in a person anywhere in the world a belief that a noxious substance or other noxious thing is likely to be present, whether at the time the information is communicated or later, in any place and thereby endanger human life or create a serious risk to human health<sup>3</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence<sup>4</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>6</sup> or to both<sup>7</sup>.

For a person to be guilty of such an offence<sup>8</sup> it is not necessary for him to have any particular person in mind as the person in whom he intends to induce the belief in question<sup>9</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(1) CRIME AND DISORDER STRATEGIES/855. Crime and disorder strategies.

12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

(1) CRIME AND DISORDER STRATEGIES

855. Crime and disorder strategies.

The functions conferred<sup>1</sup> in respect of the formulation and implementation of strategies for the reduction of crime and disorder in a local government area<sup>2</sup> are exercisable in relation to that area by the responsible authorities, that is to say: (1) the council for the area and, where the area is a district and the council is not a unitary authority, the council for the county which includes the district; (2) every chief officer of police any part of whose police area lies within the area; (3) every police authority any part of whose police area so lies; (4) every fire and rescue authority any part of whose area so lies; (5) if the local government area is in England, every primary care trust the whole or any part of whose area so lies; and (6) if the local government area is in Wales, every health authority the whole or any part of whose area so lies<sup>3</sup>.

In exercising those functions, the responsible authorities must act in co-operation with:

- 1021 (a) every local probation board any part of whose area lies within the area;
- 1022 (b) every person or body of a description which is for the time being prescribed by order of the Secretary of State<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1023 (c) where they are acting in relation to an area in Wales, every person or body which is of a description which is for the time being prescribed by order<sup>5</sup> of the National Assembly for Wales, and it is the duty of those persons and bodies to co-operate in the exercise by the responsible authorities of those functions<sup>6</sup>. The responsible authorities must also invite the participation in their exercise of those functions of at least one person or body of each description which is for the time being prescribed by order<sup>7</sup> of the Secretary of State and, in the case of the responsible authorities for an area in Wales, of any person or body of a description for the time being prescribed by an order<sup>8</sup> of the National Assembly for Wales<sup>9</sup>.

For each relevant period<sup>10</sup>, the responsible authorities for a local government area must formulate and implement in accordance with the provisions above, in the case of an area in England, a strategy for the reduction of crime and disorder in the area and a strategy for combating the misuse of drugs in the area, and, in the case of an area in Wales, a strategy for the reduction of crime and disorder in the area and a strategy for combating substance misuse in the area<sup>11</sup>. Before formulating a strategy, the responsible authorities must: (i) carry out, taking due account of the knowledge and experience of persons in the area, a review, in the case of an area in England, of the levels and patterns of crime and disorder in the area and of the level and patterns of the misuse of drugs in the area, and, in the case of an area in Wales, of the levels and patterns of crime and disorder in the area and of the level and patterns of substance misuse in the area; (ii) prepare an analysis of the results of that review; (iii) publish in the area a report of that analysis; and (iv) obtain the views on that report of persons or bodies in the area<sup>12</sup>, whether by holding public meetings or otherwise<sup>13</sup>.

A strategy must include objectives to be pursued by the responsible authorities, by co-operating persons or bodies<sup>14</sup> or, under agreements with the responsible authorities, by other persons or bodies, and long-term and short-term performance targets for measuring the extent to which such objectives are achieved<sup>15</sup>. After formulating a strategy, the responsible authorities must publish in the area a document which includes details of: (A) co-operating persons and bodies; (B) the review carried out under head (i) above; (C) the report published under head (iii) above; and (D) the strategy, including in particular the objectives mentioned above and, in each case, the authorities, persons or bodies by whom they are to be pursued, and the performance targets mentioned above<sup>16</sup>. While implementing a strategy, the responsible authorities must keep it under review with a view to monitoring its effectiveness and making any changes to it that appear necessary or expedient<sup>17</sup>.

The Secretary of State may, by order, require the responsible authorities for local government areas to formulate any strategy<sup>18</sup> for the reduction of crime and disorder so as to include, in particular, provision for the reduction of crime of a description specified in the order, or disorder of a description so specified, and, in relation to local government areas in England, to prepare any strategy for combating the misuse of drugs so as to include in it a strategy for combating, in the area in question, such other forms of substance misuse as may be specified or described in the order<sup>19</sup>. After formulating any such strategy (whether in a case in which there has been an order under this provision or in any other case), the responsible authorities for a local government area must send both a copy of the strategy, and a copy of the document which they propose to publish<sup>20</sup>, to the Secretary of State<sup>21</sup>. It is the duty of the responsible authorities, when preparing any such document to be published<sup>22</sup>, to have regard to any guidance issued by the Secretary of State as to the form and content of the documents to be so published<sup>23</sup>. If the responsible authorities for a local government area propose to make any changes to a strategy, they must send copies of the proposed changes to the Secretary of State<sup>24</sup>.

The responsible authorities for a local government area, whenever so required by the Secretary of State, must submit to him a report on such matters connected with the exercise of their functions as may be specified in the requirement<sup>25</sup>.

Without prejudice to any other obligation imposed on them, it is the duty of local authorities<sup>26</sup>, joint authorities<sup>27</sup>, the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority<sup>28</sup>, a fire and rescue authority<sup>29</sup>, a police authority<sup>30</sup>, a national park authority<sup>31</sup> and the Broads Authority, to exercise their various functions with due regard to the likely effect of the exercise of those functions on, and the need to do all that it reasonably can to prevent, crime and disorder in their areas<sup>32</sup>. Pursuant to the promotion of the prevention of crime or the welfare of the victims of crime, local authorities<sup>33</sup> are also empowered, subject to consultation with the chief officer of police, to provide maintain and operate, or arrange for the provision, maintenance and operation of, closed-circuit television systems in their areas<sup>34</sup>. Further, the Secretary of State may, with the consent of the Treasury, make such payments, or pay such grants, to such persons as he considers appropriate in connection with measures intended to prevent crime or reduce the fear of crime<sup>35</sup>.

1 le by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6 (as amended): see the text and notes 10-17 infra.

2 'Local government area' means: (1) in relation to England, a district or London borough, the City of London, the Isle of Wight and the Isles of Scilly; (2) in relation to Wales, a county or county borough: ibid s 5(4). For these purposes, the Inner Temple and the Middle Temple form part of the City of London: s 18(5).

3 Ibid s 5(1) (amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 ss 97(2), 107(2), Sch 8; and the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 53(1), Sch 1 para 89(1), (2)(a)). For these purposes, 'police authority' means any police authority established under the Police Act 1996 s 3 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 139), or the Metropolitan Police Authority; and 'fire and rescue authority' means a fire and rescue authority constituted by a scheme under the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 2 or a scheme to which s 4 applies, any metropolitan county fire and civil defence authority, or the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(5) (added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(6); and amended by the Civil Contingencies Act 2004 s 32(1), Sch 2 Pt 1 para 10; and the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 53(1), Sch 1 para 89(1), (2) (b)). The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1) (as amended) has effect in relation to a local government area in England at any time when that area or a part of it comprises or contains an area that is not included in the area of a primary care trust, as if the reference to a primary care trust the whole or part of whose area lies within the local government area included a reference to any health authority or strategic health authority whose area comprises or includes the area for which there is no primary care trust: Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(15).

The Secretary of State may by order provide in relation to any two or more local government areas in England that the functions conferred by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 6, 7 (s 6 as amended) (see the text and notes 10-17, 25 infra) are to be carried out in relation to those areas taken together as if they constituted only one area, and that the persons who for these purposes are to be taken to be responsible authorities in relation to the combined area are the persons who comprise every person who (apart from the order) would be a responsible authority in relation to any one or more of the areas included in the combined area: s 5(1A) (s 5(1A), (1B) added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(3)). The Secretary of State must not make an order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1A) (as added) unless an application for the order has been made jointly by all the persons who would be the responsible authorities in relation to the combined area or the Secretary of State has first consulted those persons, and he considers it would be in the interests of reducing crime and disorder, or of combating the misuse of drugs, to make the order: s 5(1B) (as so added). As to the orders that have been made see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (Responsible Authorities) Order 2005, SI 2005/1789; and the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (Responsible Authorities) (No 2) Order 2005, SI 2005/3343.

Provision is made for the disclosure of information to relevant authorities where such disclosure is necessary or expedient for the purposes of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998: see s 115 (amended by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 74, Sch 7 paras 150, 151; the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(1), (14)(a), (b); the Housing Act 2004 s 219; the Health Act 1999 (Supplementary, Consequential etc Provisions) Order 2000, SI 2000/90, arts 2(1), 3(1), Sch 1 para 35(1), (7); and the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Act 2002 (Supplementary, Consequential etc Provisions) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/2469, reg 4, Sch 1 para 25(1), (6)).

11   Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(1) (amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(7)). In determining what matters to include or not to include in a strategy for combating substance misuse, the responsible authorities for an area in Wales must have regard to any guidance issued for these purposes by the National Assembly for Wales: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(1A) (added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(8)). 'Substance misuse' includes the misuse of drugs or alcohol: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(7) (amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(11)).

12   Ie including those of a description prescribed by order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(3) (as amended) (see the text and notes 7-9 supra): s 6(2)(d).

13   Ibid s 6(2) (amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(9)). As from a day to be appointed, the review of crime and disorder is to include anti-social and other behaviour adversely affecting the local environment: see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(2) (as so amended; prospectively amended by the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 s 1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

In formulating a strategy, the responsible authorities must have regard to the analysis prepared under head (ii) in the text and the views obtained under head (iv) in the text: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(3).

14    Ie persons or bodies co-operating in the exercise of the responsible authorities' functions under ibid s 6 (as amended): see s 6(7).

15    Ibid s 6(4).

16    Ibid s 6(5).

17    Ibid s 6(6). Within one month of the end of each reporting period, the responsible authorities must submit a report on the implementation of their strategies during that period, in the case of a report relating to the strategies for an area in England, to the Secretary of State, and, in the case of a report relating to the strategies for an area in Wales, to the Secretary of State and to the National Assembly for Wales: s 6(6A) (added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(10)). 'Reporting period' means every period of one year which falls within a relevant period and which begins, in the case of the first reporting period in the relevant period, with the day on which the relevant period begins, and, in any other case, with the day after the day on which the previous reporting period ends: see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(7) (amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 97(11)).

18    Ie a strategy to be formulated under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6(1) (as amended): see the text and notes 10-11 supra.

20    Ie under ibid s 6(5): see the text and note 16 supra.

21    Ibid s 6A(2) (as added: see note 19 supra). For these purposes and for the purposes of s 6A(3)-(4) (as added), references to the Secretary of State, in relation to responsible authorities for local government areas in Wales have effect as references to the Secretary of State and the National Assembly for Wales, and, accordingly, guidance issued for the purposes of s 6A(3) (as added) in relation to local government areas in Wales must be issued by the Secretary of State and that Assembly acting jointly: s 6A(5) (as so added).

22    Ie under ibid s 6(5): see the text and note 16 supra.

23    Ibid s 6A(3) (as added: see note 19 supra).

24    Ibid s 6A(4) (as added: see note 19 supra).

25    Ibid s 7(1). A requirement may specify the form in which a report is to be given: s 7(2). The Secretary of State may arrange, or require the responsible authorities to arrange, for a report to be published in such manner as appears to him to be appropriate: s 7(3).

26    For this purpose, 'local authority' means a local authority within the meaning given by the Local Government Act 1972 s 270(1) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 23) or the Common Council of the City of London (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 51 et seq): Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17(3).

27    Ie within the meaning of the Local Government Act 1985 (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 47 et seq): Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17(3).

28    As to the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 217.

29    Ie a fire and rescue authority constituted by a scheme under the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 2 (see FIRE SERVICES) or a scheme to which s 4 (see FIRE SERVICES) applies.

30    As to police authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 139 et seq.

31    Ie an authority established under the Environment Act 1995 s 63: see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17(3). As to national park authorities see OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 526 et seq.

32    Ibid s 17(1), (2) (s 17(2) amended by the Greater London Authority Act 1999 s 328, Sch 29 para 63; and the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004 s 53(1), Sch 1 para 89(1), (3)).

33    For this purpose, 'local authority' means, in relation to England, a county council or a district council and, in relation to Wales, a county council or a county borough council: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 163(4). As to local government areas and authorities in England and Wales see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 22 et seq.

34 See ibid s 163 (amended by the Communications Act 2003 s 406(1), Sch 17 para 130).

UPDATE

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

855 Crime and disorder strategies

TEXT AND NOTES--A relevant authority is under a duty to disclose to all other relevant authorities any information held by the authority which is of a prescribed description, at such intervals and in such form as may be prescribed: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17A(1) (s 17A added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 9 para 5). In the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17A(1) 'prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Secretary of State: s 17A(2) (s 17A as so added). See the Crime and Disorder (Prescribed Information) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/1831 (amended by SI 2008/1406, SI 2010/656). The Secretary of State may only prescribe descriptions of information which appears to him to be of potential relevance in relation to the reduction of crime and disorder in any area of England and Wales, including anti-social or other behaviour adversely affecting the local environment in that area: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17A(3). Nothing in s 17A requires a relevant authority to disclose any personal data, within the meaning of the Data Protection Act 1998 (see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION): Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 17A(4) (s 17A as so added). In s 17A 'relevant authority' means an authority in England and Wales which is for the time being a relevant authority for the purposes of s 115: s 17A(5).

TEXT AND NOTES 1-3--Every local authority must ensure that it has a crime and disorder committee with power (1) to review or scrutinise decisions made, or other action taken, in connection with the discharge by the responsible authorities of their functions conferred by or under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 6; (2) to make reports or recommendations to the local authority with respect to the discharge of those functions: Police and Justice Act 2006 s 19(1). For this purpose, 'local authority' means, in relation to England, a county council, a district council, a London borough council, the Common Council of the City of London or the Council of the Isles of Scilly and, in relation to Wales, a county council or a county borough council: s 19(11). A local authority must ensure that its crime and disorder committee has power to make a report or recommendations to the local authority with respect to any matter which is a local crime and disorder matter in relation to a member of the authority, and must make arrangements which enable any member of the authority who is not a member of the crime and disorder committee to refer any local crime and disorder matter to the committee: see s 19(3)-(8), (8A), (8B), (11) (s 19(3)-(8), substituted, s 19(8A), (8B) added, s 19(9), (11) amended by the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 s 126(1)-(4)). Further provision is made in relation to local authorities not operating executive arrangements under the Local Government Act 2000 Pt 2 (ss 10-48) by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 19(10), Sch 8, and in relation to local authorities operating such arrangements by s 19(9).

The Secretary of State (or in relation to Wales, after consulting the Secretary of State, the National Assembly for Wales) may issue guidance to local authorities, members of those authorities, and crime and disorder committees of those authorities, with regard to the exercise of their functions under or by virtue of s 19: s 20(1), (2) (s 20(1), (2), (5), (7) amended, s 20(6A) added by the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 ss 121(2), (3) 126(1), (5)-(7), Sch 18 Pt 6). The Secretary of State may by regulations make provision supplementing that made by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 19 in relation to local authorities (in relation to local authorities in Wales the Secretary of State must first consult the National Assembly for Wales): see s 20(3)-(6), (6A), (7). See the Crime and Disorder (Overview and Scrutiny) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/942 (amended by SI 2010/616).

TEXT AND NOTE 3--Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1) further amended: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 9 para 2(2); References to Health Authorities Order 2007, SI 2007/961. The appropriate national authority may by order amend the 1998 Act by (1) adding an entry for any person or body to the list of authorities in s 5(1), (2) altering or repealing an entry for the time being included in the list, or (3) adding, altering or repealing provisions for the interpretation of entries in the list: s 5(6) (s 5(6)-(8) added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 9 para 2(5)). In the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5 the 'appropriate national authority', in relation to a person or body means (a) the National Assembly for Wales, if all the functions of the person or body are devolved Welsh functions; (b) the Secretary of State and the Assembly acting jointly, if the functions of the person or body include devolved Welsh functions and other functions; and (c) the Secretary of State, if none of the functions of the person or body are devolved Welsh functions: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(7) (as so added). In s 5(7), 'devolved Welsh functions' means functions which are dischargeable only in relation to Wales and relate to matters in relation to which the National Assembly has functions: s 5(8) (as so added).

NOTE 3--An order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1A) (1) may require the councils for the local government areas in question to appoint a joint crime and disorder committee and to arrange for crime and disorder scrutiny functions in relation to any (or all) of those councils to be exercisable by that committee; (2) may make provision applying any of the Police and Justice Act 2006 ss 19-21, Sch 8, and any regulations made under s 20 (see TEXT AND NOTES 1-3), with or without modifications, in relation to a joint crime and disorder committee: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1C), (1D) (added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 21). 'Crime and disorder scrutiny functions', in relation to a council, means functions that are, or, but for an order under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1A), would be, exercisable by the crime and disorder committee of the council under the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 19: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1D).

See also the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (Responsible Authorities) (No 2) Order 2007, SI 2007/1839, and the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 (Responsible Authorities) Order 2009, SI 2009/1033, made under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1A) (amended by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 9 para 2(3)). For 'drugs' read 'drugs, alcohol and other substance': Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 5(1B) (amended by the 2006 Act Sch 9 para 2(4)). Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 115 further amended: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 9 para 7; SI 2008/912.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--1998 Act s 5(2) further amended: SI 2008/912.

TEXT AND NOTES 10-24--The responsible authorities for a local government area must, in accordance with the 1998 Act s 5 (TEXT AND NOTES 1-3) and with regulations made under s 6(2), formulate and implement (1) a strategy for the reduction of crime and disorder in the area, including anti-social and other behaviour adversely affecting the local environment; and (2) a strategy for combating the misuse of drugs, alcohol and other substances in the area: s 6(1) (s 6(1)-(9) substituted by the 2006 Act Sch 9 para 3). The appropriate national authority may by regulations make further provision as to the formulation and implementation of a strategy under s 6: s 6(2)). Regulations under s 6(2) may in particular make provision for or in connection with (a) the time by which a strategy must be prepared and the period to which it is to relate (b) the procedure to be followed by the responsible authorities in preparing and implementing a strategy, including requirements as to the holding of public meetings and other consultation; (c) the conferring of functions on any one or more of the responsible authorities in relation to the formulation and implementation of a strategy; (d) matters to which regard must be had in formulating and implementing a strategy; (e) objectives to be addressed in strategy and performance targets in respect of those objectives; (f) the sharing of information between responsible authorities; (g) the publication and dissemination of a strategy; (h) the preparation of reports on the implementation of a strategy: s 6(3). The provision which may be made under s 6(2) includes provision for or in connection with the conferring of functions on a committee of, or a particular member or officer of, any of the responsible authorities: s 6(4). The matters referred to in head (d), may in particular include guidance given by the appropriate national authority in connection with the formulation or implementation of a strategy: s 6(5). Provision under head (e) may require a strategy to be formulated so as to address, in particular, the reduction of crime or disorder of a particular description or the combating of a particular description of misuse of drugs, alcohol or other substances: s 6(6). Regulations under s 6 may make different provision for different local government areas or supplementary or incidental provision: s 6(7). For the purposes of s 6 any reference to the implementation of a strategy includes keeping it under review for the purposes of monitoring its effectiveness and making any changes to it that appear necessary or expedient: s 6(8). In s 6 the 'appropriate national authority' is (i) the Secretary of State, in relation to strategies for areas in England; (ii) the National Assembly for Wales, in relation to strategies for combating the misuse of drugs, alcohol or other substances in areas in Wales; (iii) the Secretary of State and the Assembly acting jointly, in relation to strategies for combating crime and disorder in areas in Wales: s 6(9). See the Substance Misuse (Formulation and Implementation of Strategy) (Wales) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3078.

TEXT AND NOTES 10-16--See the Crime and Disorder (Formulation and Implementation of Strategy) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/1830 (amended by SI 2010/647) ; and the Crime and Disorder (Formulation and Implementation of Strategy) (Wales) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3076 (amended by SI 2010/648).

TEXT AND NOTES 26-32--The 1998 Act s 17 applies to each of the following: (1) a local authority; (2) a joint authority; (3) a combined authority established under the Local Democracy, Economic Development and Construction Act 2009 s 103; (4) the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority; (5) a fire and rescue authority constituted by a scheme under the 2004 Act s 2 or a scheme to which s 4 applies; (6) a metropolitan county fire authority; (7) a police authority; (8) a National Park authority; (9) the Broads Authority; (10) the Greater London Authority; (11) the London Development Agency; and (12) Transport for London: 1998 Act s 17(2) (s 17(2) substituted by the 2006 Act Sch 9 para 4(3); and amended by SI 2008/78, Local Democracy, Economic Development and Construction Act 2009 Sch 6 para 90). The appropriate national authority may by order amend the 1998 Act s 17 by (a) adding an entry for any person or body to the list of authorities in s 17(2); (b) altering or repealing any entry for the time being included in the list; or (c) adding, altering or repealing provisions for the interpretation of entries in the list: s 17(4) (s 17(4), (5) added by the 2006 Act Sch 9 para 4(4)). In the 1998 Act s 17(4) 'the appropriate national authority' has the same meaning as in s 5 (see TEXT AND NOTE 3): s 17(5).

TEXT AND NOTE 32--For 'crime and disorder in their areas' read 'crime and disorder in their areas, including anti-social and other behaviour adversely affecting the local environment and the misuse of drugs, alcohol and other substances in their areas': 1998 Act s 17(1) (amended by the 2006 Act Sch 9 para 4(2)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(2) INTRODUCTION TO POLICE POWERS/856. Introduction.

(2) INTRODUCTION TO POLICE POWERS

856. Introduction.

The statutory powers to stop and search<sup>1</sup>, of entry, search and seizure<sup>2</sup>, arrest<sup>3</sup>, detention<sup>4</sup>, questioning and treatment by the police<sup>5</sup> are contained in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>6</sup> and the codes of practice made under it<sup>7</sup>. The Secretary of State must issue codes of practice in connection with<sup>8</sup>:

- 1024 (1) the exercise by police officers of statutory powers to search a person without first arresting him, or to search a vehicle without making an arrest, or to arrest a person<sup>9</sup>;
- 1025 (2) the detention, treatment, questioning<sup>10</sup> and identification<sup>11</sup> of persons by police officers<sup>12</sup>;
- 1026 (3) searches of premises by police officers<sup>13</sup>; and
- 1027 (4) the seizure of property found by police officers on persons or premises<sup>14</sup>.

It is also the duty of the Secretary of State:

- 1028 (a) to issue a code of practice in connection with the tape-recording of interviews of persons suspected of the commission of criminal offences which are held by police officers at police stations<sup>15</sup>; and
- 1029 (b) to make an order<sup>16</sup> requiring the tape-recording of interviews of persons suspected of the commission of criminal offences, or of such description of criminal offences as may be specified in the order, which are so held, in accordance with the code as it has effect for the time being<sup>17</sup>.

In addition, the Secretary of State has power:

- 1030 (i) to issue a code of practice<sup>18</sup> for the visual recording of interviews held by police officers at police stations<sup>19</sup>; and
- 1031 (ii) to make an order requiring the visual recording of interviews so held, and requiring the visual recording to be in accordance with the code for the time being in force<sup>20</sup>.

The Secretary of State may at any time revise the whole or part of any such code<sup>21</sup>. A code may be made, or revised, so as to apply only in relation to one or more specified areas, have effect only for a specified period, or apply only in relation to specified offences or descriptions of offender<sup>22</sup>.

Before issuing a code, or any revision of such a code, the Secretary of State must consult: (A) persons whom he considers to represent the interests of police authorities; (B) persons whom he considers to represent the interests of chief officers of police; (C) the General Council of the Bar; (D) the Law Society of England and Wales; (E) the Institute of Legal Executives; and (F) such other persons as he thinks fit<sup>23</sup>.

Such a code, or a revision of a code, does not come into operation until the Secretary of State by order made by statutory instrument so provides<sup>24</sup>. An order bringing a code into operation may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament<sup>25</sup>.

Persons other than police officers who are charged with the duty of investigating offences<sup>26</sup> or charging offenders must in the discharge of that duty have regard to any relevant provision of a code<sup>27</sup>. Police authority employees on whom police powers are conferred by any designation<sup>28</sup> or by any accreditation under a community safety accreditation scheme<sup>29</sup> must have regard to any relevant provision of a code in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on them by that designation or accreditation<sup>30</sup>.

A failure on the part: (aa) of a police officer to comply with any provision of such a code; (bb) of any person other than a police officer who is charged with the duty of investigating offences or charging offenders to have regard to any relevant provision of such a code in the discharge of that duty; or (cc) of a person so designated or so accredited<sup>31</sup> to have regard to any relevant provision of a code in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by that designation or accreditation, does not of itself render him liable to any criminal or civil proceedings<sup>32</sup>.

6 The Treasury may by order direct that any provision of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 relating to investigations of offences by police officers or to persons detained by the police is to apply, subject to any modifications specified in the order, to investigations conducted by officers of Revenue and Customs which relate to assigned matters, as defined in the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 1 (as amended) (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 900), or to persons detained by such persons: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2); and the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(2), (7). As to the order that has been made see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Application to Customs and Excise) Order 1985, SI 1985/1800 (amended by SI 1987/439; SI 1995/3217; SI 1996/1860; SI 2005/3389). As to the list of provisions applied to Customs and Excise see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Application to Customs and Excise) Order 1985, SI 1985/1800, Sch 1 (amended by SI 1987/439; SI 1995/3217; SI 2005/3389). As to officers of Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante. As to the application of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to Department of Trade and Industry investigations see PARA 878 note 1 post.

7 The codes of practice have undergone revision and replacement on various occasions. The codes in operation at the date at which this volume states the law came into force on either 1 January 2006 (in the case of Codes A, B, D, E, F, G) or 25 July 2006 (in the case of Code C): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2005, SI 2005/3503, arts 2, 3; Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Code of Practice C and Code of Practice H) Order 2006, SI 2006/1938, art 2. The codes are Crown copyright and are reproduced by permission of the Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

8 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 66(1). Codes must (in particular) include provisions in connection with the exercise by police officers of powers under s 63B (as added and amended) (see PARA 1031 post): s 66(2) (added by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 57(4)).

9 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 66(1)(a) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 110(3), 174(2), Sch 17 Pt 2). 20 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 60A(1)(b) (as added: see note 19 supra). A requirement imposed by an order under s 60A (as added) may be imposed in relation to such cases or police stations in such areas, or both, as may be specified or described in the order: s 60A(2) (as so added). An order under s 60A(1) (as added) must be made by statutory instrument and is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 60A(3) (as so added). In s 60A(1) (as added), references to any interview are references to an interview of a person suspected of a criminal offence, and references to a visual recording include references to a visual recording in which an audio recording is comprised: s 60A(4) (as so added).

21 Ibid s 67(2) (s 67(1)-(7) substituted, and s 67(7A)-(7D) added, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 11(1)). 'Code' in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 67 (as amended) means a code of practice under s 60, s 60A (as added) or s 66 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-20 supra): see s 67(1) (as so substituted).

23 Ibid s 67(4) (as substituted: see note 21 supra).

24 Ibid s 67(5), (6) (as substituted: see note 21 supra). An order bringing a revision of such a code into operation must be laid before Parliament if the order has been made without a draft having been so laid and approved by a resolution of each House: s 67(7A) (as added: see note 21 supra). When an order or draft of an order is laid under s 67 (as amended), the code or revision of a code to which it relates must also be laid: s 67(7B) (as added: see note 21 supra). No order or draft of an order may be laid until the consultation required by s 67(4) (as substituted) (see the text to note 23 supra) has taken place: s 67(7C) (as added: see note 21 supra). An order bringing such a code, or a revision of such a code, into operation may include transitional or saving provisions: s 67(7D) (as added: see note 21 supra).

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(2) INTRODUCTION TO POLICE POWERS/857. Power of constable to use reasonable force.

857. Power of constable to use reasonable force.

<sup>3</sup> Whether the force used was reasonable depends on the facts and has to be gauged in the context of the purpose for which the force was being used: DPP v Meaden [2003] EWHC 3005 (Admin), [2004] 4 All ER 75, [2004] 1 WLR 945. As to the use of 'reasonable force' see note 4 infra; and PARAS 20 ante, 926 post.

<sup>4</sup> Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 117. Persons who have specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on them ('designated persons') are entitled to use reasonable force at certain times, for example: (1) when at a police station carrying out the duty to keep detainees for whom they are responsible under control and to assist any other police officer or designated person to keep any detainee under control and to prevent his escape; (2) when securing or assisting any other police officer in securing the detention of a person at police station; (3) when escorting, or assisting any other police officer or designated person in escorting, a detainee within a police station; (4) for the purpose of saving life or limb; or (5) preventing serious damage to property: see Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 1.13, 1.14.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/859. Code of practice.

(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH

859. Code of practice.

A constable's powers to stop and search persons, vehicles etc are governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and by Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search<sup>2</sup>.

As to the main stop and search powers to which Code A applies, which were in existence at the time when the Code was prepared, see Code A general introduction, Annex A. The powers listed are a number of powers requiring reasonable suspicion, including the power under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 860 post) and those set out in PARA 861 post and the powers to stop and search under an authorisation given under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) (see PARA 862 post) or the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(1) or (2) (see PARA 427 ante). They also apply to a search by an examining officer under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 paras 7, 8 (see PARA 432 ante). The list in Code A Annex A should not, however, be regarded as definitive: see Code A general introduction.

Code A also applies to powers to search a person who has not been arrested in the exercise of a power to search premises (see Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 2.4; and PARA 869 post): Code A para 2.1. Code A also covers requirements for police officers and police staff to record encounters not governed by statutory powers: see Code A general introduction.

Code A does not apply: (1) to the powers of stop and search under the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 27(2) (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 327) and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 6(1) (powers of constables employed by statutory undertakers on the premises of those undertakers: see PARA 868 post); or (2) searches carried out for the purposes of examination under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (as amended) and to which the Code of Practice issued under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 6 (as amended) applies (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 545): see Code A general introduction.

The notes for guidance included in Code A are not provisions of the Code, but are guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation: Code A general introduction. Provisions in the Annexes to Code A are, however, provisions of the Code: see Code A general introduction.

Code A sets out the following principles governing stop and search:

- 280 (a) Powers to stop and search must be used fairly, responsibly, with respect for people being searched and without unlawful discrimination. The Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 (see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 455) makes it unlawful for police officers to discriminate on the grounds of race, colour, ethnic origin, nationality or national origins when using their powers (Code A para 1.1).

- 281 (b) The intrusion on the liberty of the person stopped or searched must be brief and detention for the purposes of a search must take place at or near the location of the stop (Code A para 1.2).
- 282 (c) If these fundamental principles are not observed the use of powers to stop and search may be drawn into question. Failure to use the powers in the proper manner reduces their effectiveness. Stop and search can play an important role in the detection and prevention of crime, and using the powers fairly makes them more effective (Code A para 1.3).
- 283 (d) The primary purpose of stop and search powers is to enable officers to allay or confirm suspicions about individuals without exercising their power of arrest. Officers may be required to justify the use or authorisation of such powers, in relation both to individual searches and the overall pattern of their activity in this regard, to their supervisory officers or in court. Any misuse of the powers is likely to be harmful to policing and lead to mistrust of the police. Officers must also be able to explain their actions to the member of the public searched. The misuse of these powers can lead to disciplinary action (Code A para 1.4).
- 284 (e) An officer must not search a person, even with his consent, where no power to search is applicable. Even where a person is prepared to submit to a search voluntarily, the person must not be searched unless the necessary legal power exists, and the search must be in accordance with the relevant power and the provisions of the Code. The only exception, where an officer does not require a specific power, applies to searches of persons entering sports grounds or other premises carried out with their consent given as a condition of entry (Code A para 1.5).

Code A does not affect the ability of an officer to speak to or question a person in the ordinary course of the officer's duties without detaining the person or exercising any element of compulsion. It is not the purpose of the code to prohibit such encounters between the police and the community with the co-operation of the person concerned and neither does it affect the principle that all citizens have a duty to help police officers to prevent crime and discover offenders. This is a civic rather than a legal duty; but when a police officer is trying to discover whether, or by whom, an offence has been committed he may question any person from whom useful information might be obtained, subject to the restrictions imposed by Code C (see PARA 908 et seq post). A person's unwillingness to reply does not alter this entitlement, but in the absence of a power to arrest, or to detain in order to search, the person is free to leave at will and cannot be compelled to remain with the officer. See Code A Guidance note 1.

As to the codes of practice made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 generally see PARA 856 ante.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/860. Powers of constable to stop and search persons, vehicles etc.

860. Powers of constable to stop and search persons, vehicles etc.

A constable<sup>1</sup> may exercise any of the following powers to stop and search:

- 1032 (1) in any place to which at the time when he proposes to exercise the power the public or any section of the public has access, on payment or otherwise, as of right or by virtue of express or implied permission<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1033 (2) in any other place to which people have ready access at the time when he proposes to exercise the power but which is not a dwelling<sup>3</sup>.

A constable may search any person or vehicle<sup>4</sup> and anything which is in or on a vehicle for stolen or prohibited articles<sup>5</sup> or any specified article<sup>6</sup> or firework<sup>7</sup>, and may detain a person or vehicle for the purpose of such a search<sup>8</sup>. The above provisions do not, however, give a constable power to search a person or vehicle or anything in or on a vehicle unless he has reasonable grounds for suspecting<sup>9</sup> that he will find stolen or prohibited articles or a specified article or firework<sup>10</sup>.

If a person is in a garden or yard occupied with and used for the purposes of a dwelling or on other land so occupied and used, a constable may not search him in the exercise of the above power unless the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that he does not reside in the dwelling, and that he is not in the place in question with the express or implied permission of a person who resides in the dwelling<sup>11</sup>.

If a vehicle is in a garden or yard occupied with and used for the purposes of a dwelling or on other land so occupied and used, a constable may not search the vehicle or anything in or on it in the exercise of the above power unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person in charge of the vehicle does not reside in the dwelling, and that the vehicle is not in the place in question with the express or implied permission of a person who resides in the dwelling<sup>12</sup>.

If in the course of such a search a constable discovers an article which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be a stolen or prohibited article or a specified article or firework, he may seize it<sup>13</sup>.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(1)(a).

3 Ibid s 1(1)(b).

4 Ibid s 1 (as amended) and s 2 (see PARA 864 post) apply to vessels, aircraft and hovercraft as they apply to vehicles: s 2(10). For these purposes, 'vessel' means any ship, boat, raft or other apparatus constructed or adapted for floating on water: s 118(1).

5 An article is prohibited for these purposes if it is: (1) an offensive weapon; or (2) an article made or adapted for use in the course of, or in connection with, a specified offence or intended by the person having it with him for such use by him or by some other person: ibid s 1(7). The offences specified are: (a) burglary (see PARA 294 ante); (b) theft (see PARA 282 ante); (c) offences under the Theft Act 1968 s 12 (as amended) (taking motor vehicle or other conveyance without authority: see PARA 298 ante); (d) offences under s 15 (obtaining property by deception: see PARA 310 ante); (e) offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 (destroying or damaging property: see PARA 334 ante): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(8) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 1(2), 332, Sch 37 Pt 1). For these purposes, 'offensive weapon' means any article: (i) made or adapted for use for causing injury to persons; or (ii) intended by the person having it with him for such use by him or by some other person: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(9).

6     le an article in relation to which a person has committed, or is committing or is going to commit an offence under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 139 (as amended) (having an article with a blade or point in a public place: see PARA 700 ante): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(8A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 140(1)(c)).

7     le a firework which a person possesses in contravention of a prohibition imposed by fireworks regulations: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(8B) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 115(1), (5)). For these purposes, 'firework' must be construed in accordance with the definition of 'fireworks' in the Fireworks Act 2003 s 1(1); and 'firework regulations' has the same meaning as in that Act (see EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 908): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(8C) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 115(1), (5)).

8     Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 140(1)(a); the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 115(1), (2)). As to a constable's power to seize a stolen or prohibited article see PARA 865 post.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/861. Reasonable grounds for suspicion.

861. Reasonable grounds for suspicion.

The exercise of the power under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to stop and search<sup>1</sup> and of a number of other statutory powers of stop and search<sup>2</sup> requires reasonable grounds for suspicion that articles of a particular kind are being carried<sup>3</sup>.

Reasonable grounds for suspicion depend on the circumstances in each case<sup>4</sup>. There must be an objective basis for that suspicion based on facts, information, and/or intelligence which are relevant to the likelihood of finding an article of a certain kind<sup>5</sup>. Reasonable suspicion can never be supported on the basis of personal factors alone without reliable supporting intelligence or information or some specific behaviour by the person concerned. For example, a person's race, age, appearance, or the fact that the person is known to have a previous conviction, cannot be used alone or in combination with each other as the reason for searching that person. Reasonable suspicion cannot be based on generalisations or stereotypical images of certain groups or categories of people as more likely to be involved in criminal activity; a person's religion cannot be considered as reasonable grounds for suspicion and should never be considered as a reason to stop or stop and search an individual<sup>6</sup>.

Reasonable suspicion can sometimes exist without specific information or intelligence and on the basis of some level of generalisation stemming from the behaviour of a person<sup>7</sup>. However, reasonable suspicion should normally be linked to accurate and current intelligence or information, such as information describing an article being carried, a suspected offender, or a person who has been seen carrying a type of article known to have been stolen recently from premises in the area. Searches based on accurate and current intelligence or information are more likely to be effective<sup>8</sup>.

4    See Code A para 2.2.

5    Or, in the case of searches under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 43 (see PARA 426 ante) to the likelihood that the person is a terrorist.

6    See Code A para 2.2.

7 See Code A para 2.3. For example, if an officer encounters someone on the street at night who is obviously trying to hide something, the officer may (depending on the other surrounding circumstances) base such suspicion on the fact that this kind of behaviour is often linked to stolen or prohibited articles being carried. Similarly, for the purposes of the Terrorism Act 2003 s 43 (see PARA 426 ante), suspicion that a person is a terrorist may arise from the person's behaviour at or near a location which has been identified as a potential target for terrorists: see Code A para 2.3.

8 See Code A para 2.4. Targeting searches in a particular area at specified crime problems increases their effectiveness and minimises inconvenience to law-abiding members of the public. It also helps in justifying the use of searches both to those who are searched and to the public. This does not however prevent stop and search powers being exercised in other locations where such powers may be exercised and reasonable suspicion exists: see Code A para 2.4.

Searches are more likely to be effective, legitimate, and secure public confidence when reasonable suspicion is based on a range of factors. The overall use of these powers is more likely to be effective when up to date and accurate intelligence or information is communicated to officers and they are well-informed about local crime patterns: Code A para 2.5.

Where there is reliable information or intelligence that members of a group or gang habitually carry knives unlawfully or weapons or controlled drugs, and wear a distinctive item of clothing or other means of identification to indicate their membership of the group or gang, that distinctive item of clothing or other means of identification may provide reasonable grounds to stop and search a person: Code A para 2.6. Other means of identification might include jewellery, insignias, tattoos or other features which are known to identify members of the particular gang or group: Code A Guidance note 9.

A police officer may have reasonable grounds to suspect that a person is in innocent possession of a stolen or prohibited article or other item for which he is empowered to search. In that case the officer may stop and search the person even though there would be no power of arrest: Code A para 2.7.

Under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 43(1) (see PARA 426 ante), a constable may stop and search a person whom the officer reasonably suspects to be a terrorist to discover whether the person is in possession of anything which may constitute evidence that the person is a terrorist. These searches may only be carried out by an officer of the same sex as the person searched: Code A para 2.8.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-7--Code A paras 2.2, 2.3 modified: see SI 2008/3146.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/862. Powers of police to stop and search in anticipation of violence.

862. Powers of police to stop and search in anticipation of violence.

If a police officer of or above the rank of inspector reasonably believes<sup>1</sup>: (1) that incidents involving serious violence may take place in any locality in his police area<sup>2</sup>, and that it is expedient to give an authorisation<sup>3</sup> to prevent their occurrence; or (2) that persons are carrying dangerous instruments<sup>4</sup> or offensive weapons<sup>5</sup> in any locality in his police area without good reason, he may give an authorisation that stop and search powers conferred by the relevant provisions<sup>6</sup> are to be exercisable at any place within that locality<sup>7</sup> for a specified period not exceeding 24 hours<sup>8</sup>. If an inspector gives such an authorisation he must, as soon as it is practicable to do so, cause an officer of or above the rank of superintendent to be informed<sup>9</sup>. If it appears to an officer of or above the rank of superintendent that it is expedient to do so, having regard to offences which have, or are reasonably suspected to have, been committed in connection with any activity falling within the authorisation, he may direct<sup>10</sup> that the authorisation is to continue in being for a further 24 hours<sup>11</sup>.

The relevant provisions confer power on any constable in uniform: (a) to stop any pedestrian and search him or anything carried by him for offensive weapons or dangerous instruments; (b) to stop any vehicle<sup>12</sup> and search the vehicle, its driver and any passenger for offensive weapons or dangerous instruments<sup>13</sup>. A constable may, in the exercise of these powers<sup>14</sup>, stop any person or vehicle and make any search he thinks fit whether or not he has any grounds for suspecting that the person or vehicle is carrying weapons or articles of that kind<sup>15</sup>. If in the course of such a search a constable discovers a dangerous instrument or an article which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be an offensive weapon, he may seize it<sup>16</sup>.

A person who fails to stop, or to stop a vehicle, when required to do so by a constable in the exercise of his powers under the provisions above is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month<sup>17</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale or to both<sup>18</sup>.

Any things seized by a constable under the provisions above may be retained in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of State<sup>19</sup>.

1 There must be an objective basis for the officer's belief, for example: intelligence or relevant information such as a history of antagonism and violence between particular groups; previous incidents of violence at, or connected with, particular events or locations; a significant increase in knife-point robberies in a limited area; reports that individuals are regularly carrying weapons in a particular locality; or in the case of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60AA (as added; prospectively amended) (see PARA 863 post) previous incidents of crimes being committed while wearing face coverings to conceal identity: Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search Guidance note 11.

2 The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(1)-(9) (as amended), so far as it relates to an authorisation by a member of the British Transport Police Force (including one who for the time being has the same powers and privileges as a member of a police force for a police area), has effect as if the references to a locality in his police area were references to a place specified in the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 31(1)(a)-(f) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 283): Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(9A) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 para 16(2); and amended by the British Transport Police (Transitional and Consequential Provisions) Order 2004, SI 2004/1573, art 12(3)). 'British Transport Police Force' means the British Transport Police Force established by the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 Pt 3 (ss 18-77) (as amended) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 281): Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994

s 60(11) (definition added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Sch 7 para 16(3)(a); and amended by the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 73, Sch 5 para 4(1), (2)).

3 Any such authorisation must be in writing signed by the officer giving it and must specify the grounds on which it is given and the locality in which and the period during which the powers conferred by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) are exercisable: s 60(9) (amended by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(6)).

4 'Dangerous instruments' means instruments which have a blade or are sharply pointed: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(11).

5 'Offensive weapon' has the meaning given by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(9) (see PARA 860 note 5 ante): see Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(11). For the purposes of s 60 (as amended), a person carries a dangerous instrument or an offensive weapon if he has it in his possession: s 60(11A) (added by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(10)).

6 I.e. the powers conferred by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended).

7 The authorising officer may wish to take into account factors such as the nature and venue of the anticipated incident, the number of people who may be in the immediate area of any possible incident, their access to surrounding areas and the anticipated level of violence. The officer should not set a geographical area which is wider than that he believes necessary for the purpose of preventing anticipated violence, the carrying of knives or offensive weapons, or, in the case of ibid s 60AA (as added and amended) (see PARA 863 post), the prevention of commission of offences. It is particularly important to ensure that constables exercising such powers are fully aware of where they may be used. If the area specified is smaller than the whole force area, the officer giving the authorisation should specify either the streets which form the boundary of the area or a divisional boundary within the force area. If the power is to be used in response to a threat or incident that straddles police force areas, an officer from each of the forces concerned will need to give an authorisation: Code A Guidance note 13.

8 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(1) (amended by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(2)). The period authorised must be no longer than appears reasonably necessary to prevent, or seek to prevent incidents of serious violence, or to deal with the problem of carrying dangerous instruments or offensive weapons: Code A para 2.13. The officer should set the minimum period he considers necessary to deal with the risk of violence, the carrying of knives or offensive weapons: Code A Guidance note 12. The powers conferred by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) are in addition to and not in derogation of, any power otherwise conferred: s 60(12).

9 Ibid s 60(3A) (added by the Police Act 1997 s 8(5)).

10 Any such direction must be given in writing or, where that is not practicable, recorded in writing as soon as it is practicable to do so: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(9).

11 Ibid s 60(3) (amended by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(4)). Such a direction may be given only once. Thereafter further use of the powers of stop and search under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) requires a new authorisation: Code A Guidance note 12. The powers under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) are separate from and additional to the normal stop and search powers which require reasonable grounds to suspect an individual of carrying an offensive weapon or other article. Their overall purpose is to prevent serious violence and the widespread carrying of weapons which might lead to persons being seriously injured by disarming potential offenders in circumstances where other powers would not be sufficient. They should not therefore be used to replace or circumvent the normal powers for dealing with routine crime problems: Code A Guidance note 10.

12 'Vehicle' includes a caravan as defined in the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960 s 29(1) (see PARA 610 note 1 ante): see the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(11). The provisions of s 60 (as amended) apply (with the necessary modifications) to ships, aircraft and hovercraft as they apply to vehicles: s 60(7).

14 I.e. the powers conferred by ibid s 60(4): see the text and note 13 supra.

15 Ibid s 60(5) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 25(2)). Where a vehicle is stopped by a constable under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended), the driver is entitled to obtain a written statement that the vehicle was stopped under the powers conferred by s 60 (as amended) if he applies for such a statement not later than the end of the period of 12 months from the day on which the vehicle was stopped: s 60(10) (amended by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(7)). A person who is searched by a constable under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) is entitled to obtain a written statement that he was searched under the powers conferred by s 60 (as amended) if he applies for such a statement not later than the end of the period of 12 months from the day on which he was searched: s 60(10A) (added by the Knives Act 1997 s 8(8)).

17 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased from three months to 51 weeks: ibid s 60(8) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(2), (3), Sch 26 para 45(1), (2)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

18 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(8) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 25(3); and the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 125, Sch 8 Pt 6). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

19 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60A (added by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 26; and amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 94(2)). See the Police (Retention and Disposal of Items Seized) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1372.

TEXT AND NOTES--1994 Act s 60 further amended so as to extend powers to include the circumstance where a serious violent incident has occurred, and the police believe that the weapon used in the incident is being carried in the locality and it is expedient to give an authorisation to find the weapon: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 87.

NOTES--Certain persons or indorsements mentioned in this paragraph are specified for the purposes of Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 37, Schs 5, 6 (meaning of 'regulator' for the purposes of imposing civil sanctions), see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 196A.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/863. Powers to require removal of disguises.

863. Powers to require removal of disguises.

Where an authorisation<sup>1</sup> to stop and search in anticipation of violence is for the time being in force in relation to any locality<sup>2</sup> for any period, or an authorisation<sup>3</sup> that the powers<sup>4</sup> mentioned below to require the removal of disguises are to be exercisable at any place in a locality is in force for any period, those powers are exercisable at any place in that locality at any time in that period<sup>5</sup>. Powers are conferred<sup>6</sup> on any constable<sup>7</sup> in uniform: (1) to require any person to remove any item which the constable reasonably believes that person is wearing wholly or mainly for the purpose of concealing his identity; (2) to seize any item which the constable reasonably believes any person intends to wear wholly or mainly for that purpose<sup>8</sup>. The exercise of these powers is not subject to the preliminary procedure for a stop and search, conduct of searches or action after searches<sup>9</sup> because they do not involve a search<sup>10</sup>.

If a police officer of or above the rank of inspector<sup>11</sup> reasonably believes that activities may take place in any locality in his police area<sup>12</sup> that are likely (if they take place) to involve the commission of offences, and that it is expedient, in order to prevent or control the activities, to give an authorisation that the powers conferred by this provision are exercisable at any place within that locality for a specified period not exceeding 24 hours, he may give such an authorisation<sup>13</sup>. If an inspector gives such an authorisation<sup>14</sup>, he must, as soon as it is practicable to do so, cause an officer of or above the rank of superintendent to be informed<sup>15</sup>. If it appears to an officer of or above the rank of superintendent that it is expedient to do so, having regard to offences which have been committed in connection with the activities in respect of which the authorisation was given, or are reasonably suspected to have been so committed, he may direct that the authorisation is to continue in force for a further 24 hours<sup>16</sup>.

A person who fails to remove an item worn by him when required to do so by a constable in the exercise of his power under the provisions above is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month<sup>17</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale or to both<sup>18</sup>.

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/864. Stop and search: preliminary procedure.

864. Stop and search: preliminary procedure.

Where a search requires reasonable grounds for suspicion an officer who has the reasonable grounds for suspicion<sup>1</sup> necessary to exercise a power of stop and search<sup>2</sup> may detain the person concerned in order to carry out a search<sup>3</sup>. There is no power to stop or detain a person against his will in order to find grounds for a search<sup>4</sup>.

Before carrying out a search the officer may question the person about his behaviour or his presence in circumstances which gave rise to the suspicion<sup>5</sup>, since he may have a satisfactory explanation which will make a search unnecessary<sup>6</sup>. If, as a result of any questioning preparatory to a search, or other circumstances which come to the attention of the officer, there cease to be reasonable grounds for suspecting that an article is being carried of a kind for which there is a power of stop and search, no search may take place<sup>7</sup>.

As a result of questioning the detained person the reasonable grounds for suspicion which are necessary for the exercise of the initial power to detain may be confirmed or eliminated, or such questioning may reveal reasonable grounds to suspect the possession of a different kind of unlawful article from that originally suspected; but the reasonable grounds for suspicion without which any search or detention for the purposes of a search is unlawful cannot be retrospectively provided by such questioning during his detention or by his refusal to answer any question put to him<sup>8</sup>.

If a constable contemplates a search<sup>9</sup>, other than a search of an unattended vehicle<sup>10</sup>, it is his duty to take reasonable steps before he commences his search to bring to the attention of the appropriate person<sup>11</sup>:

1034 (1) if the constable is not in uniform, documentary evidence<sup>12</sup> that he is a constable<sup>13</sup>; and

and the constable may not commence the search until he has performed that duty<sup>16</sup>. A failure to fulfil this duty means that a subsequent search will not be a lawful search, and the constable will not be acting in the execution of his duty<sup>17</sup>.

Before the search takes place the officer must inform the person (or the owner or person in charge of the vehicle that is to be searched) of his entitlement to a copy of the record of the search, including his entitlement to a record of the search if an application is made within 12 months, if it is wholly impracticable to make a record at the time. If a record is not made at the time the person should also be told how a copy can be obtained. The person should also be given information about police powers to stop and search and the individual's rights in these circumstances<sup>18</sup>. If the person to be searched, or in charge of a vehicle to be searched, does not appear to understand what is being said, or there is any doubt about his ability to understand English, the officer must take reasonable steps to bring the above information to his attention<sup>19</sup>. If the person is deaf or cannot understand English and has someone with him, then the officer must establish whether that person can interpret or otherwise help the officer to give the required information<sup>20</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'reasonable grounds for suspicion' see PARA 861 ante.

2 As to the statutory power of stop and search see PARA 860 ante.

3 Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search para 2.9.

4 Code A para 2.11.

5 In some circumstances preparatory questioning may be unnecessary; but in general a brief conversation or exchange will be desirable not only as a means of avoiding unsuccessful searches but to explain the grounds for the stop/search, to gain co-operation and reduce any tension there might be surrounding the stop/search: Code A Guidance note 2. Where a person is lawfully detained for the purpose of a search, but no search in the event takes place, the detention will not thereby have been rendered unlawful: Code A Guidance note 3.

6 Code A para 2.9. A constable who detains a person or vehicle in the exercise of the power conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 860 ante) or of any other power: (1) to search a person without first arresting him; or (2) to search a vehicle without making an arrest, need not conduct a search if it appears to him subsequently that no search is needed or that a search is impracticable: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2(1).

7 Code A para 2.10. In the absence of any other lawful power to detain, the person is free to leave at will and must be so informed: Code A para 2.10.

8 Code A para 2.9.

9 In the exercise of the power conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 860 ante) or of any other power, whether or not it requires a reasonable suspicion on the part of the officer contemplating making the search, except the power conferred by s 6 (as amended) (see PARA 868 post) and the power conferred by the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 27(2) (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 327).

10 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2 applies to vessels, aircraft and hovercraft as it applies to vehicles: s 2(10). For the meaning of 'vessel' see PARA 860 note 4 ante.

11 For these purposes, 'the appropriate person' means: (1) if the constable proposes to search a person, that person; and (2) if he proposes to search a vehicle, or anything in or on a vehicle, the person in charge of the vehicle: ibid s 2(5).

12 If the officer is not in uniform, he must show his warrant card: Code A para 3.9.

13 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2(i).

14 In the effect of ibid s 3(7) or s 3(8) (see PARA 866 post). A constable need not bring the effect of s 3(7) or s 3(8) to the attention of the appropriate person if it appears to the constable that it will not be practicable to make the record in s 3(1) (see PARA 866 post): s 2(4).

15 Ibid s 2(2), (3).

16 See ibid s 2(2). Before a search the constable must take reasonable steps to give the appropriate person the following information: (1) that he is being detained for the purposes of a search; (2) the officer's name (except in the case of inquiries linked to the investigation of terrorism, or otherwise where the officer reasonably believes that giving his name might put him in danger, in which case the warrant or other identification number must be given) and the name of the police station to which the officer is attached; (3) the legal search power which is being exercised; and (4) a clear explanation of: (a) the purpose of the search in terms of the article or articles for which there is a power to search; and (b) the grounds for his reasonable suspicion (where the search power requires such suspicion) or the nature of the search power and of any necessary authorisation, and that it has been given (where the search power does not require reasonable suspicion): Code A para 3.8.

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

864 Stop and search: preliminary procedure

NOTE 17--The police officer must say his name and police station before searching a defendant, not merely if it is reasonable for him to do so: R v Bristol [2007] EWCA (Crim) 3214, (2008) 172 JP 161.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/865. Conduct of the search.

865. Conduct of the search.

All stops and searches must be carried out with courtesy, consideration and respect for the person concerned<sup>1</sup>. Every reasonable effort must be made to reduce to the minimum the embarrassment that a person being searched may experience<sup>2</sup>.

The co-operation of the person to be searched must be sought in every case, even if the person initially objects to the search<sup>3</sup>. A forcible search may be made only if it has been established that the person is unwilling to co-operate or resists<sup>4</sup>. Reasonable force may be used as a last resort if necessary to conduct a search or to detain a person or vehicle for the purposes of a search<sup>5</sup>.

The length of time for which a person or vehicle may be detained must be reasonable and kept to a minimum. Where the exercise of the power requires reasonable suspicion, the thoroughness and extent of a search must depend on what is suspected of being carried, and by whom<sup>6</sup>. If the suspicion relates to a particular article which is seen to be slipped into a person's pocket, then, in the absence of other grounds for suspicion or an opportunity for the article to be moved elsewhere, the search must be confined to that pocket<sup>7</sup>. In the case of a small article which can readily be concealed, such as a drug, and which might be concealed anywhere on the person, a more extensive search may be necessary<sup>8</sup>.

The search must be conducted at the place where the person or vehicle was first detained or nearby<sup>9</sup>.

With two exceptions<sup>10</sup> there is no power to require a person to remove any clothing in public, other than an outer coat, jacket or gloves<sup>11</sup>. Searches in public of clothing which has not been removed must be restricted to superficial examination of outer garments<sup>12</sup>. This does not, however, prevent an officer from placing his hand inside the pockets of the outer clothing, or feeling round the inside of collars, socks and shoes if this is reasonably necessary in the circumstances to look for the object of the search or to remove and examine any item reasonably suspected to be the object of the search<sup>13</sup>. Where on reasonable grounds it is considered necessary to conduct a more thorough search, for example by requiring someone to take off a T-shirt, this should be done out of public view, for example, in a police van<sup>14</sup> or a nearby police station if there is one<sup>15</sup>. Any search involving the removal of more than an outer coat, jacket, gloves, headgear or footwear may only be made by an officer of the same sex as the person searched and may not be made in the presence of anyone of the opposite sex unless the person being searched expressly requests it<sup>16</sup>. Searches involving exposure of intimate parts of the body must not be conducted as a routine extension of a less thorough search, simply because nothing is found in the course of the initial search. Searches involving exposure of intimate parts of the body may be carried out only at a nearby police station or other nearby location which is out of public view (but not a police vehicle)<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> See Code A para 3.1. Many people customarily cover their heads or faces for religious reasons, eg Muslim women, Sikh men, Sikh or Hindu women, or Rastafarian men or women. A police officer cannot order the removal of a head or face covering except where there is reason to believe that the item is being worn by the individual wholly or mainly for the purpose of disguising identity, not simply because it disguises identity.

Where there may be religious sensitivities about ordering the removal of such an item, the officer should permit the item to be removed out of public view. Where practicable, the item should be removed in the presence of an officer of the same sex as the person and out of sight of anyone of the opposite sex: Code A Guidance note 4.

4 See Code A para 3.2.

5 See Code A para 3.2; and PARA 857 ante.

6 See Code A para 3.3. The time for which a person or vehicle may be detained for the purposes of a search is such time as is reasonably required to permit a search to be carried out either at the place where the person or vehicle was first detained or nearby: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2(8). A search of a person in public should be completed as soon as possible: Code A Guidance note 5.

7 See Code A para 3.3.

8 See Code A para 3.3. In the case of searches authorised under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) (see PARA 862 ante) or the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(1), (2) (see PARA 427 ante) or of a search of a person who has not been arrested in the exercise of a power to search premises, which searches do not require reasonable grounds for suspicion, officers may make any reasonable search to look for items for which they are empowered to search: see Code A para 3.3.

9 Code A para 3.4. A person may be detained under a stop and search power at a place other than where the person was first detained, only if that place, be it a police station or elsewhere, is nearby. Such a place should be located within a reasonable travelling distance using whatever mode of travel on foot or by car is appropriate. This applies to all searches under stop and search powers, whether or not they involve the removal of clothing or exposure of intimate parts of the body (see Code A paras 3.6, 3.7; and the text and notes 14-17 infra) or take place in or out of public view. It means, for example, that a search under the stop and search power in the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 23 (as amended) (see PARA 781 ante) which involves the compulsory removal of more than a person's outer coat, jacket or gloves cannot be carried out unless a place which is both nearby the place they were first detained and out of public view is available. If a search involves exposure of intimate parts of the body and a police station is not nearby, particular care must be taken to ensure that the location is suitable in that it enables the search to be conducted in accordance with the requirements of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officer Annex A para 11 (see PARA 1009 post): Code A Guidance note 6.

10 See the Terrorism Act 2000 s 45(3) (power of constable conducting search under s 44 (as amended) to require removal of headgear and footwear in public: see PARA 427 ante); and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60AA (as added; prospectively amended) (see PARA 863 ante).

11 See Code A para 3.5.

13 See Code A para 3.5.

Neither the power conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 860 ante) nor any other power to detain and search a person without first arresting him or to detain and search a vehicle without making an arrest is to be construed: (1) as authorising a constable to require a person to remove any of his clothing in public other than an outer coat, jacket or gloves; or (2) as authorising a constable not in uniform to stop a vehicle: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2(9). Subject to the restrictions on the removal of headgear, a person's hair may also be searched in public: see Code A para 3.5. Although there is no power to require a person to do so, there is nothing to prevent an officer from asking a person voluntarily to remove more than an outer coat, jacket or gloves in public: see Code A Guidance note 7.

15 Code A para 3.6. A search in the street itself should be regarded as being in public for the purposes of Code A para 3.6 and Code A para 3.7 (see the text to note 17 infra), even though it may be empty at the time a search begins: Code A Guidance note 7.

16 See Code A para 3.6. A search in the street itself should be regarded as being in public for the purposes of Code A para 3.6 and Code A para 3.7 (see the text and note 17 infra), even though it may be empty at the time a search begins. Although there is no power to require a person to do so, there is nothing to prevent an officer from asking a person voluntarily to remove more than an outer coat, jacket or gloves (and headgear or footwear under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 45(3): see PARA 427 ante) in public: Code A Guidance note 7. Where there may be religious sensitivities about asking someone to remove headgear using a power under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 45(3), the police officer should offer to carry out the search out of public view (eg in a police van or police station if there is one nearby): see Code A Guidance note 8.

17 See Code A para 3.7. See also note 16 supra. These searches must be conducted in accordance with Code C Annex A para 11 (see PARA 1009 post) except that an intimate search mentioned in Code C Annex A para 11(f) may not be authorised or carried out under any stop and search powers. The other provisions of Code C do not apply to the conduct and recording of searches of persons detained at police stations in the exercise of stop and search powers: see Code A para 3.7.

UPDATE

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/866. Action after search.

866. Action after search.

Where a constable<sup>1</sup> has carried out a search in exercise of any specified power<sup>2</sup>, he must make a record of it in writing unless it is not practicable to do so<sup>3</sup>.

If a constable is so required to make a record of a search but it is not practicable to make the record on the spot<sup>4</sup>, he must make it as soon as practicable after the completion of the search<sup>5</sup>.

The record of a search of a person must include a note of his name, if the constable knows it; but a constable may not detain a person to find out his name<sup>6</sup>. If a constable does not know the name of a person whom he has searched, the record of the search must include a note otherwise describing that person<sup>7</sup>. The record of a search of a vehicle<sup>8</sup> must include a note describing the vehicle<sup>9</sup>.

The record of a search of a person or a vehicle:

- 1036 (1) must state:
  - 35
  - 57. (a) the object of the search<sup>10</sup>;
  - 58. (b) the grounds for making it<sup>11</sup>;
  - 59. (c) the date and time when it was made<sup>12</sup>;
  - 60. (d) the place where it was made<sup>13</sup>;
  - 61. (e) whether anything, and if so what, was found<sup>14</sup>;
  - 62. (f) whether any, and if so what, injury to a person or damage to property appears to the constable to have resulted from the search<sup>15</sup>; and
  - 36
- 1037 (2) must identify the constable making it<sup>16</sup>.

If a constable who conducted a search of a person made a record of it, the person who was searched is entitled to a copy of the record if he asks for one before the end of the period of 12 months beginning with the date on which the search was made<sup>17</sup>; and, if the owner of a vehicle which has been searched or the person who was in charge of the vehicle at the time when it was searched asks for a copy of the record of the search before the end of the period of 12 months beginning with the date on which the search was made and the constable who conducted the search made a record of it, the person who made the request is entitled to a copy<sup>18</sup>.

On completing a search of an unattended vehicle or anything in or on such a vehicle, an officer must leave a notice<sup>19</sup>:

- 1038 (i) stating that he has searched it<sup>20</sup>;
- 1039 (ii) giving the name of the police station to which he is attached<sup>21</sup>;
- 1040 (iii) stating where an application for compensation for any damage caused by the search may be directed<sup>22</sup>; and
- 1041 (iv) stating where a copy of the record of the search may be obtained<sup>23</sup>.

When an officer requests a person in a public place to account for himself (that is, his actions, behaviour, presence in an area or possession of anything), a record of the encounter must be completed at the time and a copy given to the person who has been questioned<sup>25</sup>. The record must identify the name of the officer who has made the stop and conducted the encounter<sup>26</sup>. This requirement to complete a record does not apply to general conversations such as when giving directions to a place, or when seeking witnesses<sup>27</sup>. It also does not include occasions on which an officer is seeking general information or questioning people to establish background to incidents which have required officers to intervene to keep the peace or resolve a dispute<sup>28</sup>.

2 le under any power such as is mentioned in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 2(1) (see PARA 864 note 6 ante), other than a search under s 6 (as amended) (see PARA 868 post) or under the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 27(2) (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 327): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 3(1).

3 Ibid s 3(1); and see Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search para 4.1. There may be situations where it is not practicable to obtain the information necessary to complete a record, but the officer should make every effort to do so: see Code A para 4.1. In situations where it is not practicable to provide a written record of the stop or stop and search at the time, the officer should consider providing the person with details of the police station at which the person may attend for a record. This may take the form of a simple business card, adding the date of the stop or stop and search: Code A Guidance note 21. Failure to record a search does not render it unlawful: Basher v DPP [1993] COD 372, DC.

Every annual report made under the Police Act 1996 s 22 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 191) or made by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner must contain information about searches recorded under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 3 which have been carried out in the area to which the report relates during the period to which it relates: s 5(1)(b)(i) (s 5(1)(a) substituted by the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 8 para 34). Such information must not include information about specific searches but must include: (1) the total number of searches in each month during the period to which the report relates for stolen articles, offensive weapons and other prohibited articles or specified articles; (2) the total number of persons arrested in each such month in consequence of searches of each of such descriptions: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 5(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 140(2)). For the meaning of 'prohibited article' see PARA 860 note 5 ante. As to specified articles see PARA 860 ante.

Supervising officers must monitor the use of stop and search powers and should consider in particular whether there is any evidence that they are being exercised on the basis of stereotyped images or inappropriate generalisations. Supervising officers should satisfy themselves that the practice of officers under their supervision in stopping, searching and recording is fully in accordance with Code A. Supervisors must also examine whether the records reveal any trends or patterns which give cause for concern, and if so take appropriate action to address this: see Code A para 5.1. Senior officers with area or force-wide responsibilities must also monitor the broader use of stop and search powers and, where necessary, take action at the relevant level: Code A para 5.2. Supervision and monitoring must be supported by the compilation of comprehensive statistical records of stops and searches at force, area and local level. Any apparently disproportionate use of the powers by particular officers or groups of officers or in relation to specific sections of the community should be identified and investigated: Code A para 5.3. In order to promote public confidence in the use of the powers, forces in consultation with police authorities must make arrangements for the records to be scrutinised by representatives of the community, and to explain the use of the powers at a local level: Code A para 5.4. Arrangements for public scrutiny of records should take account of the right to confidentiality of those stopped and searched. Anonymised forms and/or statistics generated from records should be the focus of the examinations by members of the public: Code A Guidance note 19.

4 Eg in situations involving public disorder or when the officer's presence is urgently required elsewhere: see Code A para 4.1.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 3(2).

6 Ibid s 3(3). The officer must ask for the name, address and date of birth of the person searched, but under the search procedures there is no obligation on a person to provide these details and there is no power to detain him if he is unwilling to do so: see Code A para 4.2.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 3(4).

8 The requirements imposed by ibid s 3 with regard to records of searches of vehicles apply also to records of searches of vessels, aircraft and hovercraft: s 3(10). For the meaning of 'vessel' see PARA 860 note 4 ante.

9 Ibid s 3(5).

- 10 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(i).
- 11 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(ii).
- 12 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(iii).
- 13 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(iv).
- 14 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(v).
- 15 Ibid s 3(6)(a)(vi).
- 16 Ibid s 3(6)(b). The following information must always be included in the record of a search even if the person does not wish to provide any personal details:
  - 285 (1) The name of the person searched, or (if it is withheld) a description of him (Code A para 4.3(i)).
  - 286 (2) A note of the person's self-defined ethnic group (Code A para 4.3(ii)). Officers should record the self-defined ethnicity of every person stopped according to the categories used in the 2001 census question listed in Code A Annex B. Respondents should be asked to select one of the five main categories representing broad ethnic groups and then a more specific cultural background from within this group. The ethnic classification should be coded for recording purposes using the coding system in Code A Annex B. An additional 'Not stated' box is available but should not be offered to respondents explicitly. Officers should be aware and explain to members of the public, especially where concerns are raised, that this information is required to obtain a true picture of stop and search activity and to help improve ethnic monitoring, tackle discriminatory practice, and promote effective use of the powers. If the person gives what appears to the officer to be an 'incorrect' answer (eg a person who appears to be white states that he is black), the officer should record the response that has been given. Officers should also record their own perception of the ethnic background of every person stopped and this must be done by using the PNC/Phoenix classification system. If the 'Not stated' category is used the reason for this must be recorded on the form (Code A Guidance note 18).
  - 287 (3) When a vehicle is searched, its registration number (unless it has not been allocated such a number, eg as in the case of a rally car or a trials bike (Code A para 4.3(iii), Guidance note 16).
  - 288 (4) The date, time, and place that the person or vehicle was first detained (Code A para 4.3(iv)).
  - 289 (5) The date, time and place the person or vehicle was searched (if different from head (4) supra (Code A para 4.3(v)).
  - 290 (6) The purpose of the search (Code A para 4.3(vi)).
  - 291 (7) The grounds for making it, or in the case of searches authorised under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) (see PARA 862 ante) or the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(1) or (2) (see PARA 427 ante), the nature of the power and of any necessary authorisation and the fact that it has been given (Code A para 4.3(vii)). It is important for monitoring purposes to specify whether the authority for exercising a stop and search power was given under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60 (as amended) or under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(1) or (2) (Code A Guidance note 17).
  - 292 (8) Its outcome (Code A para 4.3(viii)).
  - 293 (9) A note of any injury or damage to property resulting from it (Code A para 4.3(ix)).
  - 294 (10) Subject to Code A para 3.8(b) (see PARA 864 note 16 head (1) ante), the identity of the officer making the search (Code A para 4.3(x)). Where a search is made by more than one officer, the identity of all officers engaged in the search must be recorded on the search record (Code A Guidance note 15).

Nothing in head (10) supra or in Code A para 4.10A (see note 24 infra) requires the names of police officers to be shown on the search record or any other record required to be made under this Code in the case of inquiries linked to the investigation of terrorism or otherwise where an officer reasonably believes that recording names might endanger the officers. In such cases the record must show the officer's warrant or other identification number and duty station: Code A para 4.4.

Where officers detain an individual with a view to performing a search, but the search is not carried out due to the grounds for suspicion being eliminated as a result of questioning the person detained, a record must still be made in accordance with the procedure outlined in Code A para 4.12 (see the text and note 25 infra): Code A para 4.7.

A record is required for each person and each vehicle searched; if a person is in a vehicle and both are searched, and the object and grounds of the search are the same, only one record need be completed: see Code A para 4.5. If more than one person in a vehicle is searched, separate records for each search of a person must be made: see Code A para 4.5. If only a vehicle is searched, the name of the driver and his self-defined ethnic background must be recorded, unless the vehicle is unattended: see Code A para 4.5. The record of the grounds for making a search must, briefly but informatively, explain the reason for suspecting the person concerned, whether by reference to his behaviour and/or other circumstances: see Code A para 4.6.

18 Ibid s 3(8), (9).

19 The notice must be left in the vehicle, or on the vehicle if things in it or on it have been searched without opening it: see Code A para 4.8.

20 See Code A para 4.8.

21 See Code A para 4.9.

22 See Code A para 4.9.

23 See Code A para 4.9.

24 See Code A para 4.10. When an officer makes a record of the stop electronically and is unable to produce a copy of the form at the time, the officer must explain how the person can obtain a full copy of the record of the stop or search and give the person a receipt which contains: (1) a unique reference number and guidance on how to obtain a full copy of the stop and search; (2) the name of the officer who carried out the stop or search (unless Code A para 4.4 applies: see the text and note 16 supra); and (3) the power used to stop and search him: Code A para 4.10A. See also Code A Guidance note 21; and note 3 supra.

25 Code A para 4.12. This does not apply in the exceptional circumstances outlined in Code A para 4.1 (see note 3 supra).

A separate record need not be completed when stopping a person in a vehicle when an HORT/1 form, a Vehicle Defence Rectification Scheme Notice, or a fixed penalty notice is issued. It also does not apply when a specimen of breath is required under the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 6 (as substituted) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARAS 979-985), or when stopping a person when a penalty notice is issued for an offence: Code A para 4.14.

Officers must inform the person of his entitlement to a copy of a record of the encounter: Code A para 4.15.

The provisions of Code A para 4.4 (see note 16 supra) apply equally when the encounters described in Code A para 4.12 and Code A para 4.13 (see the text and notes 27-28 infra) are recorded: Code A para 4.16.

The following information must be included in the record: (1) the date, time and place of the encounter; (2) if the person is in a vehicle, the registration number; (3) the reason why the officer questioned that person; (4) a note of the person's self-defined ethnic background; (5) the outcome of the encounter: Code A para 4.17.

There is no power to require the person questioned to provide personal details. If a person refuses to give his self-defined ethnic background, a form must still be completed, which includes a description of the person's ethnic background: Code A para 4.18.

A record of an encounter must always be made when the criteria set out in Code A para 4.12 have been met. If the criteria are not met but the person requests a record, the officer should provide a copy of the form but record on it that the encounter did not meet the criteria. The officer can refuse to issue the form if he reasonably believes that the purpose of the request is deliberately aimed at frustrating or delaying legitimate police activity: Code A para 4.19. Where an officer engages in conversation which is not pertinent to the actions or whereabouts of the individual (eg it does not relate to why the person is there, what they are doing or where they have been or are going) then issuing a form would not meet the criteria set out in Code A para 4.12. Situations designed to impede police activity may arise, eg in public order situations where individuals engage in dialogue with the officer but the officer does not initiate or engage in contact about the person's individual circumstances: Code A Guidance note 20.

For these purposes, all references to officers include police staff designated as community support officers under the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529): Code A para 4.20.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(3) CODE OF PRACTICE TO STOP AND SEARCH/867. Road checks.

867. Road checks.

The following provisions have effect in relation to the conduct of road checks<sup>1</sup> by police officers for the purpose of ascertaining whether a vehicle is carrying:

- 1042 (1) a person who has committed an offence other than a road traffic offence or a vehicles excise offence<sup>2</sup>;
- 1043 (2) a person who is a witness to such an offence<sup>3</sup>;
- 1044 (3) a person intending to commit such an offence<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1045 (4) a person who is unlawfully at large<sup>5</sup>.

There may only be such a road check if a police officer of the rank of superintendent or above<sup>6</sup> authorises it in writing<sup>7</sup>.

An officer may only so authorise a road check:

- 1046 (a) for the purpose specified in head (1) above, if he has reasonable grounds:
  - (i) for believing that the offence is an indictable offence; and (ii) for suspecting that the person is, or is about to be, in the locality in which vehicles would be stopped if the road check were authorised<sup>8</sup>;
- 1047 (b) for the purpose specified in head (2) above, if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the offence is an indictable offence<sup>9</sup>;
- 1048 (c) for the purpose specified in head (3) above, if he has reasonable grounds:
  - (i) for believing that the offence would be an indictable offence; and (ii) for suspecting that the person is, or is about to be, in the locality in which vehicles would be stopped if the road check were authorised<sup>10</sup>;
- 1049 (d) for the purpose specified in head (4) above, if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person is, or is about to be, in that locality<sup>11</sup>.

An officer below the rank of superintendent may, however, authorise such a road check if it appears to him that it is required as a matter of urgency for one of the purposes specified in heads (1) to (4) above<sup>12</sup>. If an authorisation is so given, it is the duty of the officer who gives it to make a written record of the time at which he gives it, and to cause an officer of the rank of superintendent or above to be informed that it has been given<sup>13</sup>. An officer to whom a report is so made may, in writing, authorise the road check to continue<sup>14</sup>. If such an officer considers that the road check should not continue, he must record in writing the fact that it took place and the purpose for which it took place<sup>15</sup>.

An officer giving an authorisation under the above provisions must specify the locality in which vehicles are to be stopped<sup>16</sup>; and an officer of the rank of superintendent or above so giving an authorisation must specify a period, not exceeding seven days, during which the road check may continue and may direct that the road check is to be continuous, or is to be conducted at specified times, during that period<sup>17</sup>.

If it appears to an officer of the rank of superintendent or above that a road check ought to continue beyond the period for which it has been authorised, he may, from time to time, in writing specify a further period, not exceeding seven days, during which it may continue<sup>18</sup>.

Where a vehicle is stopped in a road check, the person in charge of the vehicle at the time when it is stopped is entitled to obtain a written statement of the purpose of the road check if he applies for such a statement not later than the end of the period of 12 months from the day on which the vehicle was stopped<sup>19</sup>.

1 For these purposes, a road check consists of the exercise in a locality of the power conferred by the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 163 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 646) in such a way as to stop, during the period for which its exercise in that way in that locality continues, all vehicles or vehicles selected by any criterion: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 4(2) (amended by the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 4, Sch 3 para 27(1)). Where a designation under the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (prospectively amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) applies a constable's powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 4 (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-19 infra) to a community support officer, that person has the power to carry out any road check the carrying out of which is authorised under that provision: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 para 13(1); and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 4(1)(a); and see note 5 infra.

3 Ibid s 4(1)(b); and see note 5 infra.

4 Ibid s 4(1)(c); and see note 5 infra.

5 Ibid s 4(1)(d). Nothing in s 4 (as amended) affects the exercise by police officers of any power to stop vehicles for purposes other than those specified in s 4(1): s 4(16). For other police powers to stop vehicles see the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 163 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 646); the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 60(4) (see PARA 862 ante); and the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44 (as amended) (see PARA 427 ante). See also the common law power to stop and turn back vehicles on the ground of a reasonable apprehension of the real possibility of an imminent breach of the peace: Moss v McLachlan (1984) 149 JP 167; R (on the application of Laporte) v Chief Constable of Gloucestershire Constabulary [2004] EWCA Civ 1639, [2005] QB 678, [2005] 1 All ER 473.

Every annual report made under the Police Act 1996 s 22 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 191) or made by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner must contain information about road checks authorised in that area during that period under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 4 (as amended): s 5(1)(b)(ii) (s 5(1)(a) substituted by the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 7 para 34). Such information must include information about the reason for authorising each road check and about the result of each of them: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 5(3).

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 4(3). Every written authorisation under s 4 (as amended) must specify: (1) the name of the officer giving it; (2) the purpose of the road check; and (3) the locality in which vehicles are to be stopped: s 4(13). The duties to specify the purposes of a road check imposed by s 4(9) (see the text to note 15 infra) and s 4(13) include duties to specify any relevant indictable offence: s 4(14) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 111, Sch 7 para 43(1), (2)(b)). For the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(i) Code of Practice/869. Code of practice.

(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE

(i) Code of Practice

869. Code of practice.

A constable's power to search premises and to seize and retain property found by him on persons or premises is governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and by Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises<sup>2</sup>.

Any reference to a police officer in Code B includes a designated person<sup>3</sup> acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by his designation<sup>4</sup>.

A person authorised to accompany police officers or designated persons in the execution of a warrant has the same powers as a constable in the execution of the warrant and the search and seizure of anything related to the warrant. These powers must be exercised in the company and under the supervision of a police officer<sup>5</sup>.

1    le the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt II (ss 8-23) (as amended): see PARA 870 et seq post.

2    The Code must be readily available at all police stations for consultation by police officers, police staff, detained persons and members of the public: Code B para 2.1. The version of Code B current at the date at which this volume states the law applies to applications for warrants made after 31 December 2005 and to searches and seizures taking place after midnight on 31 December 2005: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2005, SI 2005/3503, arts 2(e), 6.

Code B deals with police powers to search premises and to detain and retain property found on premises and persons: Code B para 1.1. These powers may be used to find property and material relating to a crime, wanted persons, or children who abscond from local authority accommodation where they have been remanded or committed by a court: Code B para 1.1A.

Code B applies to the following searches of premises:

- 295 (1) searches of premises undertaken by police for the purposes of an investigation into an alleged offence, with the occupier's consent, other than routine scenes of crime searches, calls to a fire or burglary made by or on behalf of an occupier or searcher following the activation of fire or burglar alarms or discovery of insecure premises; searches when it is unnecessary to secure consent if this would cause disproportionate inconvenience to the person concerned (see PARA 870 note 4 post); and bomb threat calls (Code B para 2.3(a));
- 296 (2) searches under the powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17 (as amended) (entry for purpose of arrest etc: see PARA 884 post), s 18 (as amended) (entry and search after arrest: see PARA 885 post) and s 32 (as amended) (search upon arrest: see PARA 936 post) (Code B para 2.3(b));
- 297 (3) searches of premises undertaken in pursuance of a search warrant issued in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15 (as amended) (see PARAS 872, 880 post) and s 16 (as amended) (see PARAS 880-882 post) (Code B para 2.3(c));
- 298 (4) under any other power given to police to enter premises with or without a search warrant for any purpose connected with the investigation into an alleged or suspected offence (see Code B para 2.3(d)).

As to codes of practice generally see PARA 856 ante. Code B does not apply to the exercise of a statutory power to enter premises or to inspect goods, equipment or procedures if the exercise of that power is not dependent on the existence of grounds for suspecting that an offence may have been committed and the person exercising the power has no reasonable grounds for such suspicion: Code B para 2.5.

The notes for guidance included in Code B are not provisions of the Code: Code B para 2.2.

The right to privacy and respect for personal property are key principles of the Human Rights Act 1998: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 149, 165. Powers of entry, search and seizure should be fully and clearly justified before use because they may significantly interfere with the occupier's privacy. Officers should consider if the necessary objectives can be met by less intrusive means: Code B para 1.3.

In all cases, police should exercise their powers courteously and with respect for persons and property, and only use reasonable force when this is considered necessary and proportionate to the circumstances: Code B para 1.4. A person who has not been arrested but is searched during a search of premises should be searched in accordance with Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Stop and Search Powers (see PARA 859 et seq ante): Code B para 2.4.

The Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 139B (as added) (see PARA 701 ante) provides that a constable who has reasonable grounds to believe an offence under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 139A (as added and amended) (see PARA 701 ante) has or is being committed may enter school premises and search the premises and any persons on the premises for any bladed or pointed article or offensive weapon. Persons may be searched under a warrant issued under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 23(3) (see PARA 781 ante) to search premises for drugs or documents only if the warrant specifically authorises the search of persons on the premises: see Code B Guidance note 2C.

Examples of the powers referred to in head (4) supra include: (a) the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 6E(1) (as added) giving police power to enter premises to require a person to provide a specimen of breath, or to arrest a person following a positive breath test or failure to provide a specimen of breath (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 984); (b) the Transport and Works Act 1992 s 30(4) giving police powers to enter premises mirroring the powers in head (a) supra in relation to specified persons working on transport systems to which the Act applies (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARAS 378, 382); (c) the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 139B (as added) giving police power to enter and search school premises for offensive weapons, bladed or pointed articles (see PARA 701 ante); (d) the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 3, 15 (prospectively amended) empowering a superintendent in urgent cases to give written authority for police to enter and search premises for the purposes of a terrorist investigation (see PARA 413 ante); (e) the Explosives Act 1875 s 73(b) empowering a superintendent to give written authority for police to enter premises, examine and search them for explosives (see EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 1027); (f) search warrants and production orders (see PARA 871 et seq post) or the equivalent issued in Scotland or Northern Ireland indorsed under the Summary Jurisdiction (Process) Act 1881 or the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act 1851 respectively for execution in England and Wales: see Code B Guidance note 2B.

Head (4) supra is subject to Code B para 2.6, whereby it does not affect any directions of a search warrant or order lawfully executed in England or Wales that any item or evidence seized under that warrant or order be handed over to a police force, court, tribunal, or other authority outside England or Wales (eg warrants and orders issued in Scotland or Northern Ireland): Code B para 2.6.

For the purposes of Code B, 'premises' as defined in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (as amended) (see PARA 872 note 5 post) includes any place, vehicle, vessel, aircraft, hovercraft, tent or movable structure and any offshore installation as defined in the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 (see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1681): see Code B para 2.3.

The Immigration Act 1971 Pt III (ss 24-28L) (as amended) and Sch 2 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, ASYLUM AND IMMIGRATION vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 197 et seq) gives immigration officers powers to enter and search premises, and seize and retain property, with and without a search warrant. These are similar to the powers available to police under search warrants issued by a justice of the peace and without a warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 17, 18, 19 and 32 (as amended) (see PARAS 884-886, 936 post) except they only apply to specified offences under the Immigration Act 1971 and immigration control powers. For certain types of investigations and inquiries these powers avoid the need for the immigration service to rely on police officers becoming directly involved. When exercising these powers, immigration officers are required by the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 145 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, ASYLUM AND IMMIGRATION vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 206-207) to have regard to the corresponding provisions in Code B. When immigration officers are dealing with persons or property at police stations, police officers should give appropriate assistance to help them discharge their specific duties and responsibilities: Code B Guidance note 2D.

3 'Designated person' means a person other than a police officer, designated under the Police Reform Act 2002 Pt 4 (ss 38-77) (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) who has specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on him: Code B para 2.11(a). An officer of the rank of inspector or above may direct a designated investigating officer not to wear a uniform for the purposes of a specific operation: Code B Guidance note 2G.

5 Code B para 12.11(c). See Guidance note 3C; and PARA 872 note 7 post.

TEXT AND NOTES--Revised Code of Practice B came into operation on 1 February 2008: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2008, SI 2008/167.

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733. Certain persons or indorsements mentioned in this paragraph are specified for the purposes of Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 37, Schs 5, 6 (meaning of 'regulator' for the purposes of imposing civil sanctions), see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 196A.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ii) Search with Consent/870. Search with consent.

(ii) Search with Consent

870. Search with consent.

If it is proposed to search premises with the consent of a person entitled to grant entry to the premises, the consent must, if practicable, be given in writing on the Notice of Powers and Rights before the search<sup>1</sup>. Before seeking consent, the officer in charge must state the purpose of the proposed search and its extent. This information must be as specific as possible, particularly regarding the articles or persons being sought and the parts of the premises to be searched. The person concerned must be clearly informed that he is not obliged to consent and that anything seized may be produced in evidence. If at the time the person is not suspected of an offence, the officer must say this when stating the purpose of the search<sup>2</sup>. An officer cannot enter and search or continue to search premises if consent is given under duress or withdrawn before the search is completed<sup>3</sup>.

It is unnecessary to seek consent if this would cause disproportionate inconvenience to the person concerned<sup>4</sup>.

1 Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 5.1. As to the Notice of Powers and Rights see PARA 881 post. The officer must make any necessary inquiries to be satisfied that the person is in a position to give such consent: Code B para 5.1. In a lodging house or similar accommodation, every reasonable effort should be made to obtain the consent of the tenant, lodger or occupier. A search should not be made solely on the basis of the landlord's consent unless the tenant, lodger or occupier is unavailable and the matter is urgent: Code B Guidance note 5A. If the intention is to search premises under the authority of a warrant or a power of entry and search without warrant, and the occupier of the premises co-operates in accordance with Code B para 6.4 (see PARA 881 post), there is no need to obtain written consent: Code B Guidance note 5B.

2 Code B para 5.2.

3 Code B para 5.3.

4 Code B para 5.4. Code B para 5.4 is intended to apply when it is reasonable to assume that innocent occupiers would agree to police taking, and expect police to take, the proposed action, for example if: (1) a suspect has fled the scene of a crime or to evade arrest and it is necessary quickly to check surrounding gardens and readily accessible places to see if the suspect is in hiding; or (2) police have arrested someone in the night after a pursuit and it is necessary to make a brief check of gardens along the pursuit route to see if stolen or incriminating articles have been discarded: Code B Guidance note 5C.

(iii) Search Warrants and Production Orders: Preliminary Procedure

871. Action before making application for search warrant or production order.

When information appears to justify an application, the officer must take reasonable steps to check that the information is accurate, recent and has not been provided maliciously or irresponsibly<sup>1</sup>. An application may not be made on the basis of information from an anonymous source if corroboration has not been sought<sup>2</sup>. The officer must ascertain as specifically as possible the nature of the articles concerned and their location<sup>3</sup>.

The officer must make reasonable inquiries to establish: (1) if anything is known about the likely occupier of the premises and the nature of the premises themselves, and whether they have been previously searched and, if so, how recently; and (2) to obtain any other information relevant to the application<sup>4</sup>.

An application:

- 1050 (a) for a search warrant or for a production order<sup>5</sup> must be supported by a signed written authority from an officer of inspector rank or above (except that, if the case is an urgent application to a justice of the peace and an inspector or above is not readily available, the next most senior officer on duty can give the written authority)<sup>6</sup>;
- 1051 (b) to a circuit judge under the terrorism legislation<sup>7</sup> for a production order, search warrant, or an order requiring an explanation of material seized or produced under such a warrant or production order must be supported by a signed written authority from an officer of superintendent rank or above<sup>8</sup>.

Except in a case of urgency, if there is reason to believe that a search might have an adverse effect on relations between the police and the community, the officer in charge must consult the local police/community liaison officer before the search or, in urgent cases, as soon as possible after the search<sup>9</sup>.

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(iii) Search Warrants and Production Orders: Preliminary Procedure/872. Application for search warrant.

872. Application for search warrant.

Where a constable<sup>1</sup> applies for any search warrant<sup>2</sup>, it is his duty:

- 1052 (1) to state: (a) the ground on which he makes the application<sup>3</sup>; and (b) the enactment under which the warrant would be issued; and (c) if the application is for a warrant authorising entry and search on more than one occasion, the ground on which he applies for such a warrant, and whether he seeks a warrant authorising an unlimited number of entries, or (if not) the maximum number of entries desired<sup>4</sup>;
- 1053 (2) to specify certain prescribed matters relating to the premises which it is desired to enter and search<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1054 (3) to identify, so far as is practicable, the articles or persons to be sought<sup>6</sup>.

An application for such a warrant must be made ex parte and supported by an information in writing<sup>7</sup>.

The constable must answer on oath any question that the justice of the peace or judge hearing the application asks him<sup>8</sup>.

If an application is refused, no further application may be made for a warrant to search those premises unless supported by additional grounds<sup>9</sup>.

1 See PARA 857 note 2 ante. A suitably designated investigating officer may apply for and be granted a search warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984; certain related powers and obligations are also extended to such a person: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 paras 16-20 (as amended); and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529.

2 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 15, 16 (both as amended) (see the text and notes 3-8 infra; and PARAS 880-881 post) have effect in relation to the issue to constables under any enactment, including an enactment contained in an Act passed after the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, of warrants to enter and search premises; and an entry on or search of premises under a warrant is unlawful unless it complies with ss 15, 16 (both as amended): s 15(1). As to the meaning of 'it' see R v Longman [1988] 1 WLR 619 at 622, [1989] 88 Cr App Rep 148 at 152, CA, per Lord Lane CJ (court inclined to view that 'it' most probably refers to the warrant but it left the matter unresolved). In R v Central Criminal Court, ex p AJD Holdings Ltd [1992] Crim LR 669, DC, the court, referring to R v Longman supra, did not accept that that case left it open to the court in R v Central Criminal Court, ex p AJD Holdings supra to hold that the invalidity of the warrant did not render the search unlawful.

3 The documents or information upon the strength of which a search warrant is obtained are protected by public interest immunity: Taylor v Anderton (1986) Times, 21 October. See PARA 1480 post; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 574 et seq.

4 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2)(a) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 114(1), (3), (4), 174(2), Sch 17 Pt 2).

5 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2)(b) (substituted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 113(1), (5), (6)). The prescribed matters are:

299 (1) if the application relates to one or more sets of premises specified in the application, each set of premises which it is desired to enter and search (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2A)(a) (s 15(2A) added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 115(1), (5), (7); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2A)(a) substituted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 (Amendment) Order 2005, SI 2005/3496, art 7(1), (2)(a));

- 300 (2) if the application relates to any premises occupied or controlled by a person specified in the application: (a) as many sets of premises which it is desired to enter and search as it is reasonably practicable to specify; (b) the person who is in occupation or control of those premises and any others which it is desired to enter and search; (c) why it is necessary to search more premises than those specified under head (a) supra; and (d) why it is not reasonably practicable to specify all the premises which it is desired to enter and search (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2A)(b) (as so added; and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 (Amendment) Order 2005, SI 2005/3496, art 7(1), (2)(b))).

For these purposes, 'premises' includes any place and, in particular, includes: (1) any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft; (2) any offshore installation; (3) any renewable energy installation; (4) any tent or movable structure: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (amended by the Energy Act 2004 ss 103(2), 197(9), Sch 23 Pt 1). For the meaning of 'offshore installation' see the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 s 12 (as amended); the Offshore Installations and Pipeline Works (Management and Administration) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/738, reg 3 (as amended); and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1681 (definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (amended by virtue of the Offshore Installations and Pipeline Works (Management and Administration) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/738, regs 3, 22(1), Sch 1 Pt 1)). As to offshore workings and installations see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1677 et seq. 'Renewable energy installation' has the same meaning as in the Energy Act 2004 Pt 2 Ch 2 (see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1311); see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (amended by the Energy Act 2004 s 103(2)). When a constable wishes to search only a part of premises divided into separate dwellings, he must make it clear to the justices in the information that the application is so limited: R v South Western Magistrates' Court, ex p Cofie [1997] 1 WLR 885, 161 JP 69, DC.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(2)(c).

7 Ibid s 15(3). An application for a search warrant must be supported in writing, specifying: (1) the enactment under which the application is made; (2) whether the warrant is to authorise entry and search of one set of premises or, if the application is under s 8 (see PARA 873 post) or Sch 1 para 12 (see PARA 879 post), more than one set of premises or all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person, and the premises to be searched; (3) the object of the search; (4) the grounds for the application, including, when the purpose of the proposed search is to find evidence of an alleged offence, an indication of how the evidence relates to the investigation; (5) where the application is under s 8 or Sch 1 para 12 for a single warrant to enter and search: (a) more than one set of specified premises, the officer must specify each set of premises which it is desired to enter and search; (b) all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person, the officer must specify: (i) as many sets of premises which it is desired to enter and search as it is reasonably practicable to specify; (ii) the person who is in occupation or control of those premises and any others which it is desired to search; (iii) why it is necessary to search more premises than those which can be specified; (iv) why it is not reasonably practicable to specify all the premises which it is desired to enter and search; (6) whether an application under s 8 (see PARA 873 post) is for a warrant authorising entry and search on more than one occasion, and if so, the officer must state the grounds for this and whether the desired number of entries authorised is unlimited or a specified maximum; (7) there are no reasonable grounds to believe the material to be sought, when making application to a: (A) justice of the peace or a judge, consists of or includes items subject to legal privilege; (B) justice of the peace, consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material (note that this does not affect the additional powers of seizure in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) (see PARAS 890-900 post)); (8) if applicable, a request for the warrant to authorise a person or persons to accompany the officer who executes the warrant: Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 3.6.

The information supporting a search warrant application should be as specific as possible, particularly in relation to the articles or persons being sought and where in the premises it is suspected they may be found: Code B Guidance note 3B. For the meaning of 'items subject to legal privilege' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 10 (see PARA 873 post); for the meaning of 'special procedure material' see s 14 (see PARA 876 post); and for the meaning of 'excluded material' see s 11 (see PARA 875 post) (definitions applied by Code B Guidance note 3B).

Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(2) (see PARA 880 post), a search warrant may authorise persons other than police officers to accompany the constable who executes the warrant. This includes, for example, any suitably qualified or skilled person or an expert in a particular field whose presence is needed to help accurately identify the material sought or to advise where certain evidence is most likely to be found and how it should be dealt with. It does not give him any right to force entry, but it gives him the right to be on the premises during the search and to search for and seize property without the occupier's permission: see Code B Guidance note 3C. An application for a search warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 12(a) (as amended) (see PARA 879 post) must also, if appropriate, indicate why it is believed that service of notice of an application for a production order (see PARA 877 post) may seriously prejudice the investigation: Code B para 3.7. Applications for search warrants under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 para 11 (prospectively amended) (see PARA 411 ante) must indicate why a production order would not be appropriate: see Code B para 3.7.

The identity of an informant need not be disclosed when making an application, but the officer concerned should be prepared to deal with any questions the magistrate or judge may have about the accuracy of previous information from that source or any other related matters: Code B Guidance note 3A.

Power of justice of the peace to authorise entry and search.

(iv) Issue of Search Warrants and Production Orders

A. STANDARD PROCEDURE

873. Power of justice of the peace to authorise entry and search.

If, on an application<sup>1</sup> made by a constable<sup>2</sup>, a justice of the peace is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing:

- 1055 (1) that an indictable offence has been committed<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1056 (2) that there is material on premises<sup>4</sup> specified<sup>5</sup> which is likely to be of substantial value (whether by itself or together with other material) to the investigation of the offence<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1057 (3) that the material is likely to be relevant evidence<sup>7</sup>; and
- 1058 (4) that it does not consist of or include items subject to legal privilege, excluded material or special procedure material<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1059 (5) that any of the specified conditions<sup>9</sup> applies in relation to each set of premises specified in the application<sup>10</sup>, he may issue a warrant authorising a constable to enter and search the premises<sup>11</sup>. If the application is for an all premises warrant, the justice of the peace must also be satisfied:

- 1060 (a) that because of the particulars of the offence referred to in head (1) above, there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is necessary to search premises occupied or controlled by the person in question which are not specified in the application in order to find the material referred to in head (2) above<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1061 (b) that it is not reasonably practicable to specify in the application all the premises which he occupies or controls and which might need to be searched<sup>13</sup>.

The warrant may authorise entry to and search of premises on more than one occasion if, on the application, the justice of the peace is satisfied that it is necessary to authorise multiple entries in order to achieve the purpose for which he issues the warrant<sup>14</sup>. If it authorises multiple entries, the number of entries authorised may be unlimited, or limited to a maximum<sup>15</sup>.

A constable may seize and retain anything for which a search has been authorised<sup>16</sup>.

874-889 post) is to have effect as if references to indictable offences in s 8 (as amended) included any conduct which: (1) constitutes an offence under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom; and (2) would, if it occurred in England and Wales, constitute an indictable offence: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(1) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 51(1), (2)). An application for a warrant or order by virtue of the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(1) (as amended) may be made only: (a) in pursuance of a direction given under s 13 (see PARA 904 post); or (b) if it is an application for a warrant or order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended), by a constable for the purposes of an investigation by an international joint investigation team of which he is a member: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(2).

4 For the meaning of 'premises' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23 (as amended); and PARA 872 note 5 ante.

5 le: (1) one or more sets of premises specified in the application (in which case the application is for a 'specific premises warrant'); or (2) any premises occupied or controlled by a person specified in the application, including such sets of premises as are so specified (in which case the application is for an 'all premises warrant'): ibid s 8(1A) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 113(1), (2), (4)).

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(1)(b) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 113(1), (2), (3)(a)).

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(1)(c). For these purposes, 'relevant evidence', in relation to an offence, means anything that would be admissible in evidence at a trial for the offence: s 8(4).

8 Ibid s 8(1)(d). For these purposes, 'items subject to legal privilege' means:

- 301 (1) communications between a professional legal adviser and his client or any person representing his client made in connection with the giving of legal advice to the client (ss 10(1)(a), 118(1));
- 302 (2) communications between a professional legal adviser and his client or any person representing his client or between such an adviser or his client or any such representative and any other person made in connection with or in contemplation of legal proceedings and for the purposes of such proceedings (ss 10(1)(b), 118(1)); and
- 303 (3) items enclosed with or referred to in such communications and made: (a) in connection with the giving of legal advice; or (b) in connection with or in contemplation of legal proceedings and for the purposes of such proceedings, when they are in the possession of a person who is entitled to possession of them (ss 10(1)(c), 118(1)).

The actual conveyance of a house, and records showing how the transaction was financed, are not subject to legal privilege within the meaning of s 10 (see heads (1)-(3) supra, although correspondence as to how the transaction is to be financed and completed may be: R v Crown Court at Inner London Sessions, ex p Baines and Baines (a firm) [1988] QB 579, 87 Cr App Rep 111, DC. See also R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Primlaks Holdings Co (Panama) Inc [1990] 1 QB 261, 89 Cr App Rep 215, DC (pre-existing documents sent to solicitors under cover of correspondence not subject to legal privilege unless made in accordance with head (3) supra).

Forged documents made for the purposes of supporting a civil claim are not made in connection with legal proceedings; 'made in connection with legal proceedings' means 'lawfully made': R v Leeds Magistrates' Court, ex p Dumbleton [1993] Crim LR 866, DC. A blood sample provided by the defendant to his doctor for a DNA test which his solicitors had requested has been held to be an item covered by head (3) supra: R v R [1994] 4 All ER 260, [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 183, CA.

Records of time spent with a client on attendance notes, time sheets or fee records are not communications made in connection with legal advice and are therefore not subject to legal privilege: R v Manchester Crown Court, ex p Rogers [1999] 4 All ER 35, [1994] 2 Cr App Rep 267, DC.

Items held with the intention of furthering a criminal purpose are not items subject to legal privilege: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 10(2). On the true construction of s 10(2) items which would otherwise come within the definition of 'items subject to legal privilege' contained in s 10(1) are excluded from that definition if they are held with the intention of either the holder or any other person furthering a criminal purpose, whether the purpose be that of the client, the solicitor or any other person: R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Francis and Francis (a firm) [1989] AC 346, 88 Cr App Rep 213, HL, disapproving the reasoning in R v Crown Court at Snaresbrook, ex p DPP [1988] QB 532, 86 Cr App Rep 227, DC. If, prima facie, legal privilege is lost by virtue of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 10(2), that result does not mean that no express or implied undertaking to hold in confidence can exist; but such undertaking cannot prevent an order being made pursuant to an application under s 9 (as amended) (see PARA 874 et seq post) by a judge who will consider the matter inter partes and in circumstances in which the matter can be fully ventilated: R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Primlaks Holdings Co (Panama) Inc supra.

Legal privilege does not apply to protect material in the hands of a solicitor from being disclosed where there is evidence of an agreement to pervert the course of justice, which is free-standing and independent in the sense that it does not require any judgment to be reached in relation to the issues to be tried in the pending proceedings: R (on the application of Hallinan Blackburn-Gittings & Nott (a firm)) v Middlesex Guildhall Crown Court [2004] EWHC 2726 (Admin), [2005] 1 WLR 766. See also Kuwait Airways Corp v Iraqi Airways Co [2005] EWCA Civ 286, [2005] 1 WLR 2734, (2005) Times, 25 April.

For the meaning of 'excluded material' see PARA 875 post. For the meaning of 'special procedure material' see PARA 876 post.

9 The specified conditions are:

- 304 (1) that it is not practicable to communicate with any person entitled to grant entry to the premises (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(3)(a));
- 305 (2) that it is practicable to communicate with a person entitled to grant entry to the premises but it is not practicable to communicate with any person entitled to grant access to the evidence (s 8(3)(b));
- 306 (3) that entry to the premises will not be granted unless a warrant is produced (s 8(3)(c));
- 307 (4) that the purpose of a search may be frustrated or seriously prejudiced unless a constable arriving at the premises can secure immediate entry to them (s 8(3)(d)).

10 Ibid s 8(1)(e) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 111, 113(1), (2), (3)). The information supporting a search warrant application should be as specific as possible, particularly in relation to the article or persons being sought and where in the premises it is suspected they may be found: Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises Guidance note 3B.

11 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(1). The criteria in s 8(1) (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-10 supra) are directed to the justice's state of mind when he is being asked to issue the warrant; the justice must consider whether the application raises the issue of legal privilege, and if the applicant police officer does not volunteer information on that issue, the justice should ask whether the material sought consists of or includes items subject to legal privilege; if there are reasonable grounds for believing that it does so consist or include, the targeted material should be redefined so as to enable the justice to be satisfied that there are no longer reasonable grounds for so believing, otherwise the justice cannot issue the warrant sought: R v Chesterfield Justices, ex p Bramley [2000] QB 576, [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 486, DC. For further guidance see R v Southampton Crown Court, ex p J and P [1993] Crim LR 962, DC.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended) confers a Draconian power and it is for the justice to satisfy himself that there are reasonable grounds for believing the matters set out; the fact that a police officer states that there are reasonable grounds is not enough: R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Primlaks Holdings Co (Panama) Inc [1990] 1 QB 261, 89 Cr App Rep 215, DC. Where the justice cannot be so satisfied that the material sought does not include any items which are prima facie subject to legal privilege or special procedure material, he should refuse the application and leave the applicant to proceed under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9 (see PARA 874 et seq post): R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Primlaks Holdings Co (Panama) Inc supra. It is not a pre-condition to the grant of a warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended) that other methods of obtaining material have been tried without success, or have not been tried because they were bound to fail: R v Billericay Justices and Doblyn, ex p Frank Harris (Coaches) Ltd [1991] Crim LR 472, DC. It is not a bar to the issue or execution of a warrant that the police may have to sift material and may encounter material which is subject to legal privilege or is special procedure material; such material would be outside the scope of the search: R v Leeds Magistrates' Court, ex p Dumbleton [1993] Crim LR 866, DC.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended) applies in relation to a relevant offence (as defined in the Immigration Act 1971 s 28D (as added and amended): see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 207) as it applies to an indictable offence: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(6) (added by the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 169(1), Sch 14 para 80(1), (2); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 43(1), (3)). The power under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(1) (as amended) to issue a warrant is in addition to any such power otherwise conferred: s 8(5).

As to search warrants issued under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 (as amended) see PARAS 409-413 ante. As to powers of search for material relevant to an overseas investigation see PARA 904 post.

Those executing a warrant issued under s 8 (as amended) must not lose sight of the requirement that, even though material may fall within the description in the warrant, its seizure must fall within what is permitted by s 8(1), (2) (as amended): R v Chief Constable of Warwickshire Constabulary, ex p Fitzpatrick [1998] 1 All ER 65, [1999] 1 WLR 564, DC. ### 874. Special provisions as to access.

A constable<sup>1</sup> may obtain access to excluded material<sup>2</sup> or special procedure material<sup>3</sup> for the purposes of a criminal investigation by making an application in accordance with the statutory provisions<sup>4</sup>.

2 For the meaning of 'excluded material' see PARA 875 post.

3 For the meaning of 'special procedure material' see PARA 876 post.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9(1). The statutory provisions referred to in the text are those contained in Sch 1 (as amended): see PARAS 877-879 post. As to the procedure for making an application see PARA 877 et seq post. Any Act (including a local Act) passed before the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 under which a search of premises for the purposes of a criminal investigation could be authorised by the issue of a warrant to a constable has ceased to have effect so far as it relates to the authorisation of searches: (1) for items subject to legal privilege; or (2) for excluded material; or (3) for special procedure material consisting of documents or records other than documents: s 9(2). For the meaning of 'items subject to legal privilege' see PARA 873 note 8 ante. Section 9(2) does not apply to prevent the authorisation and execution in England of a search warrant issued in Scotland in respect of a Scottish crime: R v Manchester Stipendiary Magistrate and the Lord Advocate, ex p Granada Television Ltd [2001] 1 AC 300, [2000] 1 All ER 135, HL. The Summary Jurisdiction (Process) Act 1881 s 4 which includes provision for the execution of process of English courts in Scotland, and the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act 1851 s 29 which makes equivalent provision for execution in Northern Ireland, each apply to any process issued by a circuit judge under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 (as amended) as it applies to process issued by a magistrates' court under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9(2A) (added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 86(1)). As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as to refer to a judge instead of a circuit judge: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9(2A) (as so added; prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 65, Sch 4 para 5). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. For the meaning of 'judge' see PARA 878 note 2 post.

As to the procedure for gaining access to such material for the purposes of a terrorist investigation see PARA 411 ante.

The statutory provisions relating to excluded and special procedure material are to safeguard the confidence of the maker or holder of such material and not that of the suspected person, and therefore the holders of such records can disclose the material voluntarily, but, if they choose not to, the statutory procedure must be followed: R v Singleton [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 431, CA.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(iv) Issue of Search Warrants and Production Orders/B. SPECIAL PROCEDURE/875. Meaning of 'excluded material'.

875. Meaning of 'excluded material'.

'Excluded material' means:

- 1062 (1) personal records<sup>1</sup> which a person has acquired or created in the course of any trade, business, profession or other occupation or for the purposes of any paid or unpaid office and which he holds in confidence<sup>2</sup>;
- 1063 (2) human tissue or tissue fluid which has been taken for the purposes of diagnosis or medical treatment and which a person holds in confidence<sup>3</sup>;
- 1064 (3) journalistic material<sup>4</sup> which a person holds in confidence and which consists of documents<sup>5</sup> or of records other than documents<sup>6</sup>.

A person holds material other than journalistic material in confidence for these purposes if he holds it subject:

- 1065 (a) to an express or implied undertaking to hold it in confidence<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1066 (b) to a restriction on disclosure or an obligation of secrecy contained in any enactment, including an enactment contained in an Act passed after the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>8</sup>.

A person holds journalistic material in confidence for these purposes if:

- 1067 (i) he holds it subject to such an undertaking, restriction or obligation<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1068 (ii) it has been continuously held (by one or more persons) subject to such an undertaking, restriction or obligation since it was first acquired or created for the purposes of journalism<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'personal records' means documentary and other records concerning an individual (whether living or dead) who can be identified from them and relating: (1) to his physical or mental health; (2) to spiritual counselling or assistance given or to be given to him; or (3) to counselling or assistance given or to be given to him, for the purposes of his personal welfare, by any voluntary organisation or by any individual who: (a) by reason of his office or occupation, has responsibilities for his personal welfare; or (b) by reason of an order of a court, has responsibilities for his supervision: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 12. Hospital records of patients' admissions and discharges are personal records because they relate to the physical or mental health of persons who could be identified from them: R v Cardiff Crown Court, ex p Kellam (1993) Times, 3 May, DC.

4 For these purposes, 'journalistic material' means material acquired or created for the purposes of journalism: ibid s 13(1). Material is only journalistic material for these purposes if it is in the possession of a person who acquired or created it for the purposes of journalism: s 13(2). A person who receives material from someone who intends that the recipient shall use it for the purposes of journalism is to be taken to have acquired it for those purposes: s 13(3).

5 'Document' means anything in which information of any description is recorded: ibid s 118(1) (substituted by the Civil Evidence Act 1995 s 15(1), Sch 1 para 9(1), (3)).

876. Meaning of 'special procedure material'.

'Special procedure material' means specified material<sup>1</sup> and journalistic material<sup>2</sup>, other than journalistic material which is excluded material<sup>3</sup>.

For these purposes, specified material means material, other than items subject to legal privilege<sup>4</sup> and excluded material, in the possession of a person who:

- 1069 (1) acquired or created it in the course of any trade, business, profession or other occupation or for the purpose of any paid or unpaid office<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1070 (2) holds it subject: (a) to an express or implied undertaking to hold it in confidence; or (b) to a restriction on disclosure or an obligation of secrecy contained in any enactment, including an enactment contained in an Act passed after the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>6</sup>.

Where material is acquired:

- 1071 (i) by an employee from his employer and in the course of his employment<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1072 (ii) by a company from an associated company<sup>8</sup>, it is only special procedure material if it was special procedure material immediately before the acquisition<sup>9</sup>.

Where material is created by an employee in the course of his employment, it is only special procedure material if it would have been special procedure material had his employer created it<sup>10</sup>.

Where material is created by a company on behalf of an associated company, it is only special procedure material if it would have been special procedure material had the associated company created it<sup>11</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(iv) Issue of Search Warrants and Production Orders/B. SPECIAL PROCEDURE/877. Notice of making of application for order.

877. Notice of making of application for order.

An application<sup>1</sup> for an order for production or access<sup>2</sup> must be made inter partes<sup>3</sup>; and notice of an application for such an order may be served on a person either by delivering it to him or by leaving it at his proper address or by sending it by post to him in a registered letter or by the recorded delivery service<sup>4</sup>. Such notice may be served on a body corporate by serving it on the body's secretary or clerk or other similar officer and on a partnership by serving it on one of the partners<sup>5</sup>.

Where notice of an application for an order has been served on a person, he may not conceal, destroy, alter or dispose of the material to which the application relates except with the leave of a judge or with the written permission of a constable, until the application is dismissed or abandoned or he has complied with an order for production or access made on the application<sup>6</sup>.

1 Before making such an application, police officers must give careful consideration to what material it is hoped a search might reveal; the application must make clear that the material sought relates to the crime under investigation: R v Central Criminal Court, ex p AJD Holdings Ltd [1992] Crim LR 669, DC.

2 Ie under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9(1), Sch 1 para 4 (prospectively amended): see PARA 878 post. Such an application is an application in a 'criminal cause or matter': Carr v Atkins [1987] QB 963, 85 Cr App Rep 343, CA; R v Crown Court at Bristol, ex p Bristol Press and Picture Agency Ltd (1986) 85 Cr App Rep 190, DC.

3 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 7. A suspect has no statutory right to be heard, but the judge has a discretion to hear the suspect where this appears likely to be helpful: R v Crown Court at Lewes, ex p Hill (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 60, DC. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 7 applies to the police and the person or institution in whose custody special procedure material is believed to be held; there is thus no requirement under Sch 1 para 8 (see the text and note 4 infra) to give notice of the proceedings to the defendant or suspected person: R v Crown Court at Leicester, ex p DPP [1987] 3 All ER 654, 86 Cr App Rep 254, DC.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 8. It is incumbent on the applicant to set out in the notice a description of all that is sought to be produced since failure to do so may lead the recipient of the notice to destroy the material unwittingly in breach of his obligations under Sch 1 para 11 (see the text and note 6 infra): R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Adegbesan [1986] 3 All ER 113, 84 Cr App Rep 219, DC. It may, however, suffice if the information is given orally to the person affected, either at the time the notice is served or beforehand (R v Crown Court at Manchester, ex p Taylor [1988] 2 All ER 769, [1988] 1 WLR 705, DC; Barclays Bank plc v Taylor, Trustee Savings Bank of Wales and Border Counties v Taylor [1989] 3 All ER 563, [1989] 1 WLR 1066, CA), but it is essential that the respondent knows before the order is made what he has to produce or allow access to, as well as the nature of the offence under investigation (R v Crown Court at Manchester, ex p Taylor supra).

The police are not obliged to give the respondent advance notice of the evidence upon which they propose to rely: R v Crown Court at Inner London Sessions, ex p Baines and Baines (a firm) [1988] QB 579, 87 Cr App Rep 111, DC. Where, however, the application is accompanied by evidence, the party against whom the order is sought should be provided with that evidence before the hearing, or given an opportunity to seek an adjournment of the hearing if evidence is given which cannot adequately be responded to there and then: R v Crown Court at Inner London Sessions, ex p Baines and Baines (a firm) supra.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 9. For these purposes, and for the purposes of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 7 in its application to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 (as amended), the proper address of a person, in the case of the secretary or clerk or other similar officer of a body corporate, is that of the registered or principal office of that body, and in the case of a partner of a firm it is that of the principal office of the firm, and in any other case it is the last known address of the person to be served: Sch 1 para 10. Where the police are proceeding to obtain information from an unincorporated body they ought to name an officer of that body as the person against whom they are moving by way of application: R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Adegbesan [1986] 3 All ER 113, 84 Cr App Rep 219, DC.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 11. It is implicit in the terms of Sch 1 para 11 that the body subject to an order has the power to intercept communications by e-mail so as to comply with the order notwithstanding that such action would otherwise constitute a criminal offence: R (on the application of NTL Group Ltd) v Ipswich Crown Court [2002] EWHC 1585 (Admin), [2003] QB 131, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 225.

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(iv) Issue of Search Warrants and Production Orders/B. SPECIAL PROCEDURE/878. Making of order by judge.

878. Making of order by judge.

If on an application made by a constable<sup>1</sup> a circuit judge<sup>2</sup> is satisfied<sup>3</sup> that one or other of the sets of access conditions is fulfilled, he may make an order<sup>4</sup>.

The first set of access conditions is fulfilled if:

- 1073 (1) there are reasonable grounds for believing:
  - 37
  - 63. (a) that an indictable offence has been committed<sup>5</sup>;
  - 64. (b) that there is material which consists of special procedure material<sup>6</sup> or includes special procedure material and does not also include excluded material<sup>7</sup> on premises<sup>8</sup> specified in the application, or on premises occupied or controlled by a person specified in the application (including all such premises on which there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is such material as it is reasonably practicable so to specify)<sup>9</sup>;
  - 65. (c) that the material is likely to be of substantial value (whether by itself or together with other material) to the investigation in connection with which the application is made<sup>10</sup>; and
  - 66. (d) that the material is likely to be relevant evidence<sup>11</sup>;
  - 38
- 1074 (2) other methods of obtaining the material:
  - 39
  - 67. (a) have been tried without success<sup>12</sup>; or
  - 68. (b) have not been tried because it appeared that they were bound to fail<sup>13</sup>; and
  - 40
- 1075 (3) it is in the public interest, having regard:
  - 41
  - 69. (a) to the benefit likely to accrue to the investigation if the material is obtained<sup>14</sup>; and
  - 70. (b) to the circumstances under which the person in possession of the material holds it<sup>15</sup>,
  - 42
- 1076 that the material should be produced or that access to it should be given<sup>16</sup>.

The second set of access conditions is fulfilled if:

- 1077 (i) there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material which consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material on premises specified in the application, or on premises occupied or controlled by a person specified in the application (including all such premises on which there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is such material as it is reasonably practicable so to specify)<sup>17</sup>;
- 1078 (ii) but for the statutory provision<sup>18</sup>, a search of such premises for that material could have been authorised<sup>19</sup> by the issue of a warrant to a constable<sup>20</sup>; and 1079 (iii) the issue of such a warrant would have been appropriate<sup>21</sup>.

An order so made is an order that the person who appears to the circuit judge to be in possession of the material to which the application relates must produce it to a constable for him to take away<sup>22</sup> or give a constable access to it<sup>23</sup>, not later than the end of the period of seven days from the date of the order or the end of such longer period as the order may specify<sup>24</sup>.

If a person fails to comply with such an order, a circuit judge may deal with him as if he had committed a contempt of the Crown Court<sup>25</sup>.

1 See PARA 857 note 2 ante. The special procedure material provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 (as amended) (see PARA 876) may be extended to investigations of indictable offences conducted by the department of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry or a person acting on his behalf: see s 114A (added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 85; and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 111, Sch 7 para 43(1), (11)). See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Department of Trade and Industry Investigations) Order 2002, SI 2002/2326 (amended by SI 2005/3389).

2 As from a day to be appointed the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 (as amended) is further amended so as to refer to a judge instead of a circuit judge: see Sch 1 para 1 (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 65, Sch 4 para 6(1)). 'Judge' means a circuit judge or a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts): see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 17 (prospectively added by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 4 para 6(1)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed this definition is amended so as to provide that 'judge' means a judge of the High Court, a circuit judge, a Recorder or a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts): see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 17 (prospectively added; and prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 114(1), (9)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Before a judge can make an order, he must be given sufficient information upon which to form a reliable judgment as to whether the specific matters listed in one of the two access conditions are fulfilled; it is not enough for a constable simply to assert that they have been met: R v Crown Court at Lewes, ex p Hill (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 60, DC.

4 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 1. Such an order is made under Sch 1 para 4: see the text and notes 22-24 infra. The judge may hear the application in chambers or in open court at his discretion: R v Central Criminal Court, ex p DPP (1988) Times, 1 April, DC. As to the meaning of 'open court' see PARA 90 note 10 ante.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 2(a)(i) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 43(1), (3)). For the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt 2 (ss 8-23) (as amended) (powers of entry, search and seizure) is to have effect as if references to indictable offences in Sch 1 (as amended) included any conduct which:

308 (1) constitutes an offence under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(1)(a) (s 16 amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 51)); and 309 (2) would, if it occurred in England and Wales, constitute an indictable offence (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(1)(b) (as so amended)).

However, an application for a warrant or order by virtue of s 16(1) (as amended) may be made only: (a) in pursuance of a direction given under s 13 (requests from overseas authorities: see PARA 904 post); or (b) if it is an application for a warrant or order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 (as amended) by a constable for the purposes of an investigation by an international joint investigation team of which he is a member: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 16(2).

In the absence of evidence as to the conditions laid down in head (2) in the text, the access conditions cannot be fulfilled: R v Crown Court at Inner London Sessions, ex p Baines and Baines (a firm) [1988] QB 579 at 585, 87 Cr App Rep 111 at 116, DC, per Watkins LJ.

16 See ibid Sch 1 para 2(c); and see R v Crown Court at Bristol, ex p Bristol Press and Picture Agency Ltd (1986) 85 Cr App Rep 190, DC.

Where these conditions are fulfilled, the fact that compliance with an order may involve the person subject to it in self-incrimination is not per se a reason for not making the order: R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Bright [2001] 2 All ER 244, [2001] 1 WLR 662, DC.

Although it has been stated that it is inconsistent for a judge who has concluded that there are reasonable grounds for believing that an indictable offence has been committed to refuse an application for access to material by finding that it is not in the public interest that access should be given (R v Crown Court at Northampton, ex p DPP (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 376, DC), this does not mean that the judge does not have a discretion where he finds the access conditions satisfied not to make the order, eg because of the apparent disproportion between what might be obtained by the production of the material and the offence to which it relates, and (in the case of journalistic material) the potential stifling of debate and the risk of imposing an obligation requiring the individual to whom the order is directed to incriminate himself (R v Central Criminal Court, ex p Bright supra).

17 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 3(a) (Sch 1 para 3(a), (b) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 113(1), (10)-(12)).

21 Ibid Sch 1 para 3(c).

22 For the purposes of ibid ss 21, 22 (as amended) (see PARAS 888-889 post), material produced in pursuance of an order so made is to be treated as if it were material seized by a constable: Sch 1 para 6. Where the material consists of information stored in any electronic form, an order so made has effect as an order to produce the material in a form in which it can be taken away and in which it is visible and legible or from which it can readily be produced in a visible and legible form: Sch 1 para 5(a) (Sch 1 para 5 amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 70, Sch 2 Pt 2 para 14).

23 Where the material consists of information stored in any electronic form, an order so made has effect as an order to give a constable access to the material in a form in which it is visible and legible: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 5(b) (as amended: see note 22 supra).

24 Ibid Sch 1 para 4. As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as to refer to a judge instead of a circuit judge: see Sch 1 para 4 (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 4 para 6(1)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See note 2 supra. As to the judge's responsibility for ensuring that the special procedure is not abused see R v Crown Court at Maidstone, ex p Waitt [1988] Crim LR 384, DC. As to costs see PARA 879 post. Once an order has been made it cannot be rescinded; an application by the aggrieved party for judicial review is the proper approach: R v Liverpool Crown Court, ex p Wimpey plc [1991] Crim LR 635, DC.

25 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 15(1). As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as to refer to a judge instead of a circuit judge: see Sch 1 para 15(1) (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 4 para 6(1)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See note 2 supra.

Any enactment relating to contempt of the Crown Court has effect in relation to such a failure as if it were such a contempt: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Sch 1 para 15(2).

If, on an application made by a constable<sup>1</sup>, a circuit judge:

1080 (1) is satisfied that either set of access conditions<sup>2</sup> is fulfilled and that any of the further specified conditions<sup>3</sup> is also fulfilled in relation to each set of premises specified in the application<sup>4</sup>; or

he may issue a warrant authorising a constable to enter and search the premises or (as the case may be) all premises occupied or controlled by the person specified in the application for the order<sup>7</sup>, including such sets of premises as are specified in the application (an 'all premises warrant')<sup>8</sup>. The judge may not issue an all premises warrant unless he is satisfied:

1082 (a) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is necessary to search premises occupied or controlled by the person in question which are not specified in the application, as well as those which are, in order to find the material in question<sup>9</sup>; and 1083 (b) that it is not reasonably practicable to specify all the premises which he occupies or controls which might need to be searched<sup>10</sup>.

A constable may seize and retain anything for which a search has been authorised<sup>11</sup>.

The costs of any application under the special procedure and of anything done or to be done in pursuance of an order are in the discretion of the judge<sup>12</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(v) Effect of and Execution of Warrants/880. The warrant.

(v) Effect of and Execution of Warrants

880. The warrant.

Unless it specifies that it authorises multiple entries, a warrant authorises an entry on one occasion only<sup>1</sup>; and it:

- 1084 (1) must specify: (a) the name of the person who applies for it; (b) the date on which it is issued; (c) the enactment under which it is issued; and (d) each set of premises<sup>2</sup> to be searched, or (in the case of an all premises warrant) the person who is in occupation or control of premises to be searched, together with any premises under his occupation or control which can be specified and which are to be searched<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1085 (2) must identify, so far as is practicable, the articles or persons to be sought<sup>4</sup>.

Two copies must be made of a warrant which specifies only one set of premises and does not authorise multiple entries; and as many copies as are reasonably required may be made of any other kind of warrant<sup>5</sup>. The copies must be clearly certified as copies<sup>6</sup>.

A warrant to enter and search premises may be executed by any constable<sup>7</sup>; and such a warrant may authorise persons to accompany any constable who is executing it<sup>8</sup>. Entry and search under a warrant must be within three months from the date of its issue and at a reasonable hour unless this might frustrate the purpose of the search<sup>9</sup>. If the warrant is an all premises warrant, no premises which are not specified in it may be entered or searched unless a police officer of at least the rank of inspector has in writing authorised them to be entered<sup>10</sup>. No premises may be entered or searched for the second or any subsequent time under a warrant which authorises multiple entries unless a police officer of at least the rank of inspector has in writing authorised that entry to those premises<sup>11</sup>.

The officers executing a search warrant authorising a search of premises and their occupants may lawfully restrict the movement of persons to one room while another room is searched<sup>12</sup>.

1 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(5) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 114(1), (3), (5)). A warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended) (see PARA 873 ante) may authorise entry to and search of premises on more than one occasion if, on the application, the justice of the peace is satisfied that it is necessary to authorise multiple entries in order to achieve the purpose for which the warrant is issued. No premises may be entered or searched on any subsequent occasions without the prior written authority of an officer of the rank of inspector who is not involved in the investigation. All other warrants authorise entry on one occasion only: Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 6.3A. If the warrant specifies that it authorises multiple entries, it must also specify whether the number of entries authorised is unlimited, or limited to a specified maximum: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(5A) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 114(1), (3), (6)). Where a warrant under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8 (as amended) (see PARA 873 ante) or Sch 1 para 12 (as amended) (see PARA 879 ante) authorises entry to and search of all premises occupied or controlled by a specified person, no premises which are not specified in the warrant may be entered and searched without the prior written authority of an officer of the rank of inspector who is not involved in the investigation: Code B para 3B. As to the application of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 15, 16 (both as amended) see PARA 872 note 2 ante. When the extent or complexity of a search means that it is likely to take a long time, the officer in charge of the search may consider using the seize and sift powers referred to in PARA 890 et seq post: see Code B para 6.3.

2 For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 872 note 5 ante.

3 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(6)(a) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 113(1), (8)). See R (on the application of Paul da Costa & Co (a firm)) v Thames Magistrates' Court [2002] STC 267, DC.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(6)(b).

The making of copies, and their certification under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(8) (see the text and note 6 infra) should be carried out by the justice or judge who issues the warrant, although he can delegate the issuing process to court staff: R v Chief Constable of Lancashire, ex p Parker [1993] QB 577, 97 Cr App Rep 90, DC.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 15(8).

7 Ibid s 16(1). As to the meaning of 'constable' see PARA 857 note 2 ante. The warrant must be executed by a constable; there is no power for the police to delegate the task to a government agency: R v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset and Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce, ex p South West Meat Ltd [1992] Crim LR 672, DC.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(2). A person so authorised has the same powers as the constable whom he accompanies in respect of the execution of the warrant, and the seizure of anything to which the warrant relates; but he may exercise those powers only in the company, and under the supervision, of a constable: s 16(2A), (2B) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 2).

9 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(3) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 114(1), (8)(a)); and Code B paras 6.1, 6.2.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

880 The warrant

NOTE 3--The practice of police officers completing a box on each copy warrant specifying the sets of premises to be searched and the person who is in occupation or control of the premises, although in accordance with Home Office guidance, is unlawful: R (on the application of Bhatti) v Croydon Magistrates' Court [2010] EWHC 522 (Admin), (2010) 174 JP 213, DC.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(v) Effect of and Execution of Warrants/881. Preliminary procedure.

881. Preliminary procedure.

The officer in charge must first try to communicate with the occupier, or any other person entitled to grant access to the premises, explain the authority under which entry is sought and ask the occupier to allow entry, unless:

- 1086 (1) the premises to be searched are known to be unoccupied<sup>1</sup>;
- 1087 (2) the occupier and any other person entitled to grant access are absent<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1088 (3) there are reasonable grounds for believing that alerting the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access would frustrate the object of the search or endanger officers or other people<sup>3</sup>.

Where the occupier of premises<sup>4</sup> which are to be entered and searched is present at the time when a constable seeks to execute a warrant to enter and search them, the constable must:

- 1089 (a) identify himself to the occupier and, if not in uniform, produce to him documentary evidence<sup>5</sup> that he is a constable<sup>6</sup>;
- 1090 (b) produce the warrant<sup>7</sup> to him<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1091 (c) supply him with a copy of it<sup>9</sup>.

Where the occupier of such premises is not present at the time when a constable seeks to execute such a warrant, but some other person who appears to the constable to be in charge of the premises is present, the above provision<sup>10</sup> has effect as if any reference to the occupier were a reference to that other person<sup>11</sup>.

If there is no person present who appears to the constable to be in charge of the premises, he must leave a copy of the warrant in a prominent place on the premises<sup>12</sup>.

Reasonable and proportionate force may be used if necessary to enter premises if the officer in charge is satisfied that the premises are those specified in any warrant, or in the exercise of powers to enter and search to make an arrest<sup>13</sup>, to enter and search premises where a person was arrested (or was immediately before arrest)<sup>14</sup>, or to enter and search premises occupied or controlled by an arrested person<sup>15</sup>, if:

- 1092 (i) the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access has refused a request to allow entry to his premises<sup>16</sup>;
- 1093 (ii) it is impossible to communicate with the occupier or any other person entitled to grant access<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1094 (iii) any of the specified conditions in heads (1) to (3) above applies<sup>18</sup>.

If an officer conducts a search<sup>19</sup> the officer must, unless it is impracticable to do so, provide the occupier with a copy of a Notice of Powers and Rights in a standard format:

- 1095 (A) specifying whether the search is made under warrant, with consent, or in the exercise of powers to enter and search to make an arrest, to enter and search

- premises where a person was arrested (or was immediately before arrest), or to enter and search premises occupied or controlled by an arrested person<sup>20</sup>;
- 1096 (B) summarising the extent of the powers of search and seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>21</sup>;
- 1097 (C) explaining the rights of the occupier, and the owner of the property seized<sup>22</sup>;
- 1098 (D) explaining that compensation may be payable in appropriate cases for damage caused entering and searching premises, and giving the address to which to send a compensation application<sup>23</sup>;
- 1099 (E) stating that Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises is available at any police station<sup>24</sup>.

If the occupier is present, copies of the Notice and warrant must, if practicable, be given to him before the search begins, unless the officer in charge of the search reasonably believes this would frustrate the object of the search or endanger officers or other people. If the occupier is not present, copies of the Notice and warrant must be left in a prominent place on the premises or appropriate part of the premises and indorsed<sup>25</sup> with the name of the officer in charge of the search, the date and time of the search. The warrant must be indorsed to show this has been done<sup>26</sup>.

1 Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 6.4(i).

2 Code B para 6.4(ii).

3 Code B para 6.4(iii).

4 For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 872 note 5 ante.

5 Unless head (3) in the text applies, where the premises are occupied, the officer must, before the search begins: (1) identify himself, show his warrant card, if not in uniform, and state the purpose of and grounds for the search; (2) identify and introduce any person (who should carry identification for production on request) accompanying the officer on the search and briefly describe that person's role in the process: Code B para 6.5.

Code B para 6.5 is subject to Code B para 2.9 which provides that nothing in Code B requires the identity of officers, or anyone accompanying them during a search of premises, to be recorded or disclosed: (a) in the case of inquiries linked to the investigation of terrorism; or (b) if officers reasonably believe recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger. In these cases officers should use warrant or other identification numbers and the name of their police station; and police staff should use any identification number provided to them by the police force: Code B para 2.9. The purpose of head (b) supra is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to the officers or anyone accompanying them during a search of premises. In cases of doubt, an officer of inspector rank or above should be consulted: Code B Guidance note 2E.

7 The occupier must be given an opportunity to inspect the warrant and not merely be shown that the officer has a warrant: R v Longman [1988] 1 WLR 619, 88 Cr App Rep 148, CA.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(5)(b).

9 Ibid s 16(5)(c). Where there are reasonable grounds to believe that to alert the occupier would frustrate the object of the search, the constable is not required to fulfil the obligation in heads (a)-(c) in the text before entering the premises, but at the very earliest opportunity after entry and before search he should comply with the requirements of those heads: see R v Longman [1988] 1 WLR 619, 88 Cr App Rep 148, CA.

- 16 See Code B para 6.6(i); and PARA 857 ante.
- 17 See Code B para 6.6(ii); and PARA 857 ante.
- 18 See Code B para 6.6(iii); and PARA 857 ante. In such circumstances entry may also be effected by the use of a subterfuge: R v Longman [1988] 1 WLR 619, 88 Cr App Rep 148, CA.
- 19 Ie a search to which Code B applies.
- 20 Code B para 6.7(i). The notice format must provide for authority or consent to be indicated: Code B para 6.7(i).
- 21 Code B para 6.7(ii).
- 22 Code B para 6.7(iii).
- 23 Code B para 6.7(iv). Whether compensation is appropriate depends on the circumstances in each case. Compensation for damage caused when effecting entry is unlikely to be appropriate if the search was lawful, and the force used can be shown to be reasonable, proportionate and necessary to effect entry. If the wrong premises are searched by mistake everything possible should be done at the earliest opportunity to allay any sense of grievance and there should normally be a strong presumption in favour of paying compensation: Code B Guidance note 6A.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(v) Effect of and Execution of Warrants/882. Conduct of searches; standard procedure.

882. Conduct of searches; standard procedure.

A search under a warrant may only be a search to the extent required for the purpose for which the warrant was issued, having regard to the size and nature of whatever is sought<sup>1</sup>. A search under warrant may not continue under the authority of that warrant once all the things specified in it have been found, and a search may not continue under any other power once the object of that search has been achieved<sup>2</sup>. No search may continue once the officer in charge of the search<sup>3</sup> is satisfied that whatever is being sought is not on the premises<sup>4</sup>. This does not prevent a further search of the same premises if additional grounds come to light supporting a further application for a search warrant or exercise or further exercise of another power; for example, when, as a result of new information, it is believed articles previously not found or additional articles are on the premises<sup>5</sup>. Searches must be conducted with due consideration for the property and privacy of the occupier of the premises searched, and with no more disturbance than necessary<sup>6</sup>. Reasonable force may be used when necessary and proportionate because the co-operation of the occupier cannot be obtained or is insufficient for the purpose<sup>7</sup>.

A friend, neighbour or other person must be allowed to witness the search if the occupier wishes unless the officer in charge of the search has reasonable grounds for believing the presence of the person asked for would seriously hinder the investigation or endanger officers or other people. A search need not be unreasonably delayed for this purpose<sup>8</sup>.

If premises have been entered by force, the officer in charge of the search must, before leaving them, make sure that they are secure either by arranging for the occupier or his agent to be present or by any other appropriate means<sup>9</sup>.

1 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(8); and Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 6.9. Judicial review is usually an unsatisfactory tool for determining whether material has been seized unlawfully under a warrant; a person complaining of excessive seizure under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(8) should ordinarily rely on a private law remedy: R v Chief Constable of the Warwickshire Constabulary, ex p Fitzpatrick [1998] 1 All ER 65, [1999] 1 WLR 564, DC. The service of pre-prepared questionnaires when executing a search warrant may breach the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(8) if the warrant is only an excuse to enable the investigator to contact witnesses who might not otherwise be traced; the approval for such a course of action should be obtained from the judge at the time of the application for the warrant or, at least, before it is executed: R (on the application of Paul Da Costa & Co) v Thames Magistrates' Court [2002] EWHC 40 (Admin), [2002] STC 267, DC.

2 Code B para 6.9A.

3 The 'officer in charge of the search' means the officer assigned specific duties and responsibilities under Code B. Whenever there is a search of premises to which Code B applies one officer must act as the officer in charge of the search: Code B para 2.10. For the purposes of Code B para 2.10, the officer in charge of the search should normally be the most senior officer present. Some exceptions are:

- 314 (1) a supervising officer who attends or assists at the scene of a premises search may appoint an officer of lower rank as officer in charge of the search if that officer is more conversant with the facts, or a more appropriate officer to be in charge of the search (Code B Guidance note 2F(a));
- 315 (2) when all officers in a premises search are the same rank, the supervising officer if available must make sure one of them is appointed officer in charge of the search, or otherwise the officers themselves must nominate one of their number as the officer in charge (Code B Guidance note 2F(b));

- 316 (3) a senior officer assisting in a specialist role, who need not be regarded as having a general supervisory role over the conduct of the search or be appointed or expected to act as the officer in charge of the search (Code B Guidance note 2F(c)).

Except in head (3) supra, none of the above diminishes the role and responsibilities of a supervisory officer who is present at the search or knows of a search taking place: Code B Guidance note 2F.

4 Code B para 6.9B. It is important that, when possible, all those involved in a search are fully briefed about any powers to be exercised and the extent and limits within which it should be conducted: Code B Guidance note 6B.

5 Code B para 6.9B.

6 See Code B para 6.10; R v Marylebone Magistrates' Court and Metropolitan Police Comr, ex p Amdrell Ltd (t/a Get Stuffed) (1998) 162 JP 719, DC (presence of a film crew deplorable, although warrant was not invalidated); and PARA 857 ante.

7 See Code B para 6.10. In all cases the number of officers and other persons involved in executing the warrant should be determined by what is reasonable and necessary according to the particular circumstances: Code B Guidance note 6C.

8 Code B para 6.11. A record of the action taken should be made on the premises search record including the grounds for refusing the occupier's request: see Code B para 6.11.

A person is not required to be cautioned prior to being asked questions that are solely necessary for the purpose of furthering the proper and effective conduct of a search: see Code B para 6.12; and see Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers; and PARA 908 et seq post. Examples of such questions are questions to discover the occupier of specified premises, to find a key to open a locked drawer or cupboard or to otherwise seek co-operation during the search or to determine if a particular item is liable to be seized: see Code B para 6.12.

If questioning goes beyond what is necessary for the purpose of the exemption in Code C, the exchange is likely to constitute an interview as defined by Code C para 11.1A (see PARA 960 post) and would require the associated safeguards included in Code C para 10 (see PARA 959 post): Code B para 6.12A.

9 Code B para 6.13.

He may also ask to see the index to files held on the premises, and the officers conducting the search may inspect any files which, according to the index, appear to contain any of the material sought<sup>5</sup>. A more extensive search of the premises may be made only: (1) if the person responsible for them refuses to produce the material sought, or to allow access to the index; (2) if it appears that the index is inaccurate or incomplete; or (3) if for any other reason the officer in charge has reasonable grounds for believing that such a search is necessary in order to find the material sought<sup>6</sup>.

(vi) Entry and Search Without Search Warrant

884. Entry for purpose of arrest etc.

A constable<sup>1</sup> may<sup>2</sup> enter and search any premises<sup>3</sup> for the purpose:

- 1100 (1) of executing: (a) a warrant of arrest<sup>4</sup> issued in connection with or arising out of criminal proceedings; or (b) a warrant of commitment<sup>5</sup> issued under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980<sup>6</sup>;
  - 1101 (2) of arresting a person for an indictable offence<sup>7</sup>;
  - 1102 (3) of arresting a person for certain other specified offences<sup>8</sup>;
  - 1103 (4) of arresting<sup>9</sup> any child or young person who has been remanded or committed<sup>10</sup> to local authority accommodation<sup>11</sup>;
  - 1104 (5) of arresting a person for an offence to which the powers of arrest as to rabies<sup>12</sup> applies<sup>13</sup>;
  - 1105 (6) of recapturing any person who is, or is deemed for any purpose to be, unlawfully at large while liable to be detained:
- 43
- 71. (a) in a prison, remand centre, young offender institution or secure training centre<sup>14</sup>, or
  - 72. (b) in pursuance of provisions<sup>15</sup> dealing with children and young persons guilty of grave crimes, in any other place<sup>16</sup>;
- 44
- 1106 (4) of recapturing any person whatever who is unlawfully at large and whom he is pursuing<sup>17</sup>; or
  - 1107 (5) of saving life or limb or preventing serious damage to property<sup>18</sup>.

Except for the purpose specified in head (5) above, such powers of entry and search:

- 1108 (i) are only exercisable if the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that the person whom he is seeking is on the premises<sup>19</sup>; and
- 1109 (ii) are limited, in relation to premises consisting of two or more separate dwellings, to powers to enter and search: (A) any parts of the premises which the occupiers of any dwelling comprised in the premises use in common with the occupiers of any other such dwelling; and (B) any such dwelling in which the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that the person whom he is seeking may be<sup>20</sup>.

The power of search is only a power to search to the extent that is reasonably required for the purpose for which the power of entry is exercised<sup>21</sup>.

1 See PARA 857 note 2 ante.

2 le subject to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(2)-(6) (as amended) (see the text and notes 8, 18-21 infra) and without prejudice to any other enactment.

3 For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 872 note 5 ante.

4 As to warrants of arrest see PARA 918 et seq post.

5 It is issued under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 76 (as amended): see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 860.

For the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post. The power of entry under this provision is exercisable only where a constable not only has reasonable grounds for suspecting or believing, but does in fact suspect or believe, that an indictable offence has been committed: see Chapman v DPP (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 190 at 196, DC, per Bingham LJ.

8 See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(c) (amended by the Public Order Act 1986 s 40(2), (3), Sch 2 para 7, Sch 3; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(2), Sch 10 para 53(a); and the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 58(a)); Code B para 4.1.

The specified offences are offences under: (1) the Public Order Act 1936 s 1 (as amended) (prohibition of uniforms in connection with political objects: see PARA 380 ante); (2) the Criminal Law Act 1977 ss 6-8 or s 10 (as amended) (entering and remaining on property: see PARA 602 et seq ante); (3) the Public Order Act 1986 s 4 (as amended) (fear or provocation of violence: see PARA 558 ante); (4) the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 4 (as amended) (driving when under the influence of drink or drugs: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 975) or s 163 (as amended) (failure to stop when required to do so by a constable in uniform: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 646); (5) the Transport and Works Act 1992 s 27 (offences involving drink or drugs: see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 377); or (6) the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 76 (as amended) (failure to comply with interim possession order: see PARA 606 ante). The powers of search conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17 (as amended) are only exercisable for the purposes of an offence under the Criminal Law Act 1977 ss 6-8 or s 10 (as amended) or the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 76 (as amended) by a constable in uniform: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 Sch 10 para 53(b)).

9 It is in pursuance of the Children and Young Persons Act 1969 s 32(1A) (as added and amended): see PARA 927 post.

10 It is under ibid s 23(1) (as substituted and amended): see PARA 1200 post.

11 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(ca) (added by the Prisoners (Return to Custody) Act 1995 s 2(1)); Code B para 4.1.

14 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(cb)(i) (s 17(1)(cb) added by the Prisoners (Return to Custody) Act 1995 s 2(1)); Code B para 4.1.

15 It is the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 92: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 78.

16 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(cb)(ii) (as added (see note 14 supra); and amended by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 95); Code B para 4.1.

17 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(d) (amended by the Prisoners (Return to Custody) Act 1995 s 2(1)); Code B para 4.1. A constable cannot exercise the power of entry and search under this head unless the pursuit is almost contemporaneous with the entry into the premises, since there must be an act of pursuit, ie a chase, however short in time and distance, before the power of entry and search under this head can be exercised; it is insufficient for the police to form an intention to arrest and to put it into practice by resorting to the premises where they believe that the person sought might be found: D'Souza v DPP [1992] 4 All ER 545, 96 Cr App Rep 278, HL. A person absent without leave from a hospital where he has been detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 is 'unlawfully at large' for the purposes of head (4) in the text: D'Souza v DPP supra.

18 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(e); Code B para 4.1. Unless the circumstances make it impossible, impracticable or undesirable, a police officer exercising his power to enter premises by the use of reasonable force pursuant to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17 (as amended) and s 117 (see PARA 857 ante) should give any occupant present the reason for exercising that power: O'Loughlin v Chief Constable of Essex [1998] 1 WLR 374, CA. Where the real reason is to arrest someone inside for an indictable offence (see head (2) in the text), it is insufficient for the constable to tell the occupant that he wishes to 'speak to' that person about the offence: O'Loughlin v Chief Constable of Essex supra. All the rules of common law under which a constable has power to enter premises without a warrant have been abolished: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(5). However, nothing in s 17(5) affects any power of entry to deal with or prevent a breach of the peace: s 17(6). As to arrest for breach of the peace see PARA 930 post. Section 17 (as amended) applies to entry and search in the absence of consent; if police officers are invited onto premises by an occupier or other person with authority to do so, who has been told by them of the reason for their entry, they are lawfully on the premises and do not have to comply with s 17 (as amended): Riley v DPP (1990) 91 Cr App Rep 14, DC; Hobson v Chief Constable of Cheshire Constabulary [2003] EWHC 3011 (Admin), 168 JP 111.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(vi) Entry and Search Without Search Warrant/885. Entry and search after arrest.

885. Entry and search after arrest.

A constable<sup>1</sup> may<sup>2</sup> enter and search any premises<sup>3</sup> occupied or controlled by a person who is under arrest for an indictable offence<sup>4</sup> if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that there is on the premises evidence, other than items subject to legal privilege<sup>5</sup>, that relates to that offence or to some other indictable offence which is connected with or similar to that offence<sup>6</sup>. A constable may seize and retain anything for which he may so search<sup>7</sup>.

Such power to search is only a power to search to the extent that is reasonably required for the purpose of discovering such evidence<sup>8</sup>. Such powers to enter, seize and retain may not be exercised unless an officer of the rank of inspector or above<sup>9</sup> has authorised them in writing<sup>10</sup>; except that a constable may conduct such a search before the person is taken to a police station or released on bail<sup>11</sup> without obtaining such an authorisation, if the presence of the person at a place (other than a police station) is necessary for the effective investigation of the offence<sup>12</sup>. If a constable conducts such a search without authorisation, he must inform an officer of the rank of inspector or above that he has made the search as soon as practicable after he has made it<sup>13</sup>.

An officer who authorises a search or who is so informed of a search must make a record in writing of the grounds for the search and of the nature of the evidence that was sought<sup>14</sup>.

If the person who was in occupation or control of the premises at the time of the search is in police detention at the time the record is to be made, the officer must make the record as part of his custody record<sup>15</sup>.

The powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 18 (as amended) and s 19 (as amended) (see PARA 886 post) are limited to domestic offences but the common law power to search the entire house where a person arrested under an arrest warrant is at the time, and to seize any articles providing evidence against him, has not been abolished and can be applied in respect of a non-domestic (ie extradition) crime: R (on the application of Rottman) v Metropolitan Police Comr [2002] UKHL 20, [2002] 2 AC 692, [2002] 2 All ER 665.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 18(2). The powers of seizure conferred on the police by s 18(2) and s 19(3) (see PARA 886 notes 4-6 post) extend to the seizure of the whole premises where it is physically possible to seize and retain the premises in their totality, and enables the police to remove premises such as tents, vehicles or caravans to a police station for the purpose of preserving evidence: Cowan v Metropolitan Police Comr [2000] 1 All ER 504, sub nom Cowan v Condon [2000] 1 WLR 254, CA. Money seized under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 19 (as amended) (see PARA 886 post) in relation to suspected drug dealing must be returned if the person entitled to possession is not convicted of a drug trafficking offence:

9 See PARA 858 ante.

10 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 18(4). A constable in possession of such an authorisation who proposes to enter premises by force must, so far as practicable, explain to the occupier the reason why he intends to do so: Linehan v DPP [2000] Crim LR 861, DC. 'Authorised in writing' means more than a mere record of verbal authority. It must be an independent document, ie a proper authority in writing. Although nothing is said in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, such authority should go with the police officers to the premises to be searched: R v Badham [1987] Crim LR 202. Authority should only be given when the authorising officer is satisfied the necessary grounds exist; if possible the authorising officer should record the authority on the Notice of Powers and Rights and, subject to Code B para 2.9 (see PARA 881 note 5 ante), sign the Notice: Code B para 4.3.

11 If released on bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30A (as added): see PARA 933 post.

885 Entry and search after arrest

NOTE 6--The powers of entry and search can only be used where the premises are in fact occupied or controlled by a person under arrest, not where the police merely have a reasonable belief that the suspect occupies or controls the premises: Khan v Metropolitan Police Comr [2008] All ER (D) 27 (Jun), CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(vii) Seizure and Retention of Property/886. Seizure of property.

886. Seizure of property.

A constable<sup>1</sup> who is lawfully on any premises<sup>2</sup> may seize anything which is on the premises if he has reasonable grounds for believing: (1) that it has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence; and (2) that it is necessary to seize it in order to prevent it being concealed, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed<sup>3</sup>.

A constable who is lawfully on any premises may also seize anything which is on the premises if he has reasonable grounds for believing:

- 1110 (a) that it is evidence in relation to an offence<sup>4</sup> which he is investigating or any other offence<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1111 (b) that it is necessary to seize it in order to prevent the evidence being concealed, lost, altered or destroyed<sup>6</sup>.

A constable who is lawfully on any premises may require any information which is stored in any electronic form and is accessible from the premises to be produced in a form in which it can be taken away and in which it is visible and legible or from which it can readily be produced in a visible and legible form if he has reasonable grounds for believing<sup>7</sup>:

- 1112 (i) that it is evidence in relation to an offence which he is investigating or any other offence<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1113 (ii) it has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence<sup>9</sup>, and that it is necessary to do so in order to prevent it being concealed, lost, tampered with or destroyed<sup>10</sup>.

The above provisions are in addition to any power otherwise conferred<sup>11</sup>. No power of seizure conferred on a constable under any enactment (including an enactment contained in an Act passed after the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984) is, however, to be taken to authorise the seizure of an item which the constable exercising the power has reasonable grounds for believing to be subject to legal privilege<sup>12</sup> other than under the provisions relating to additional powers of seizure<sup>13</sup>.

An officer who decides that it is not appropriate to seize property because of an explanation given by the person holding it, but who has reasonable grounds for believing that it has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence by some person, should identify the property to the holder, inform the holder of his suspicions, and explain that, if he disposes of, alters or destroys the property, the holder may be liable to civil or criminal proceedings<sup>14</sup>.

Anything covered by a warrant may also be seized, and so may property covered by the powers in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) (see PARA 890 et seq post): Code B para 7.1. An officer may arrange to photograph, image or copy any document or other article he has the power to seize in accordance with Code B para 7.1: see Code B para 7.5. This is subject to specific restrictions on the examination, imaging or copying of certain property seized under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) (see PARA 891 post): see Code B para 7.5. An officer must have regard to his statutory obligation to retain an original document or other article only when a photograph or copy is not sufficient: see Code B para 7.5. The powers of seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 18(2) (see PARA 885 note 7 ante) and s 19(3) (see the text and notes 4-6 infra) extend to the seizure of the whole premises when it is physically possible to seize and retain the premises in their totality and practical considerations make seizure desirable; eg police may remove premises such as tents, vehicles or caravans to a police station for the purpose of preserving evidence: Code B Guidance note 7B.

4 'Offence' in this provision is confined to a domestic offence: R (on the application of Rottman) v Metropolitan Police Comr [2002] UKHL 20, [2002] 2 AC 692, [2002] 2 All ER 865. See also PARA 885 note 6 ante.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(vii) Seizure and Retention of Property/888. Access and copying.

888. Access and copying.

A constable<sup>1</sup> who seizes anything in the exercise of a power conferred by any enactment, including an enactment contained in an Act passed after the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, must, if so requested by a person showing himself:

- 1117 (1) to be the occupier of premises<sup>2</sup> on which it was seized<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1118 (2) to have had custody or control of it immediately before the seizure<sup>4</sup>, provide that person with a record of what he seized<sup>5</sup>. The officer must provide the record within a reasonable time from the making of the request for it<sup>6</sup>.

If a request for permission to be granted access to anything which:

- 1119 (a) has been seized by a constable<sup>7</sup>; and
- 1120 (b) is retained by the police for the purpose of investigating an offence<sup>8</sup>, is made to the officer in charge of the investigation by a person who had custody or control of the thing immediately before it was so seized or by someone acting on behalf of such a person, the officer must<sup>9</sup> allow the person who made the request access to it under the supervision of a constable<sup>10</sup>.

If a request for a photograph or copy of any such thing is made to the officer in charge of the investigation by a person who had custody or control of the thing immediately before it was so seized, or by someone acting on behalf of such a person, the officer must<sup>11</sup> allow the person who made the request access to it under the supervision of a constable for the purpose of photographing or copying it; or must photograph or copy it, or cause it to be photographed or copied, and supply the photograph or copy to the person who made the request<sup>12</sup>. The photograph or copy must be so supplied within a reasonable time from the making of the request<sup>13</sup>, and at the person's own expense<sup>14</sup>.

A constable may also photograph or copy, or have photographed or copied, anything which he has power to seize, without a request being so made<sup>15</sup>.

There is no duty under the above provisions to grant access to, or to supply a photograph or copy of, anything if the officer in charge of the investigation for the purposes of which it was seized has reasonable grounds for believing that to do so would prejudice:

- 1121 (i) that investigation<sup>16</sup>;
- 1122 (ii) the investigation of an offence other than the offence for the purposes of investigating which the thing was seized<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1123 (iii) any criminal proceedings which may be brought as a result of the investigation of which he is in charge or any such investigation as is mentioned in head (ii) above<sup>18</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(vii) Seizure and Retention of Property/889. Retention of property.

889. Retention of property.

Anything which has been seized by a constable<sup>1</sup> or taken away by a constable<sup>2</sup> may be retained<sup>3</sup> so long as is necessary in all the circumstances<sup>4</sup>. Without prejudice to the generality of the above provision:

- 1124 (1) anything seized for the purposes of a criminal investigation may be retained for use as evidence at a trial for an offence<sup>5</sup> or for forensic examination or for investigation in connection with an offence<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1125 (2) anything may be retained in order to establish its lawful owner, where there are reasonable grounds for believing that it has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence<sup>7</sup>.

Nothing seized on the ground that it may be used:

- 1126 (a) to cause physical injury to any person<sup>8</sup>;
- 1127 (b) to damage property<sup>9</sup>;
- 1128 (c) to interfere with evidence<sup>10</sup>; or
- 1129 (d) to assist in escape from police detention or lawful custody<sup>11</sup>, may be retained when the person from whom it was seized is no longer in police detention or the custody of a court or is in the custody of a court but has been released on bail<sup>12</sup>.

1 The reference in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(1) (see the text to note 4 infra) to anything seized by a constable includes anything seized by a person authorised under s 16(2) (see PARA 880 note 8 ante) to accompany a constable executing a warrant: s 22(7) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 paras 1, 4).

2 The following a requirement made by virtue of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 19 or s 20 (as amended): see PARAS 886-887 ante.

3 See R v Southwark Crown Court, ex p Customs and Excise Comrs [1990] 1 QB 650, [1989] 3 All ER 673, DC.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(1); and see Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 7.14. The police hold property under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22 (as amended) only for the purposes authorised; they owe a duty to maintain the confidentiality of materials seized, subject only to their power to use them for police purposes, but this duty may be overridden where a court orders the police to produce material, which is admissible in evidence in other proceedings: Marcel v Metropolitan Police Comr [1992] Ch 225, [1992] 1 All ER 72, CA. Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22 (as amended) affects any power of a court to make an order under the Police (Property) Act 1897 s 1 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 520): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(5); and see Code B Guidance note 7A. Where appropriate, a person should be advised of this procedure: see Code B Guidance note 7A.

If property is retained, the person who had custody or control of it immediately before seizure must, on request, be provided with a list or description of the property within a reasonable time: Code B para 7.16. That person or his representative must be allowed supervised access to the property to examine it or have it photographed or copied, or must be provided with a photograph or copy, in either case within a reasonable time of any request and at his own expense, unless the officer in charge of an investigation has reasonable grounds for believing this would: (1) prejudice the investigation of any offence or criminal proceedings; or (2) lead to the commission of an offence by providing access to unlawful material such as pornography: Code B para 7.17. A record of the grounds must be made when access is denied: Code B para 7.17.

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22 (as amended) also applies to anything retained by the police under the Immigration Act 1971 s 28H(5) (as added) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 208); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(6) (added by the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 169(1), Sch 14 para 18(1), (3)).

5 As to the meaning of 'trial for an offence' see R v Southwark Crown Court, ex p Customs and Excise Comrs [1990] 1 QB 650, [1989] 3 All ER 673, DC.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(2)(a); and see Code B para 7.14. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(a) does not entitle the police to retain documents obtained by unlawful entry and search: R v Chief Constable of Lancashire, ex p Parker [1993] QB 577, 97 Cr App Rep 90, DC. Nothing may be retained for either of the purposes mentioned in head (1) in the text if a photograph or copy would be sufficient for that purpose: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(4); and see Code B para 7.15.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(2)(b); and see Code B para 7.14. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(2)(b) (see head (2) in the text) does not provide a statutory justification for the retention of property if the police have ceased to investigate the ownership of the property: Gough v Chief Constable of West Midlands Police [2004] EWCA Civ 206, (2004) Times, 4 March. Head (1) in the text applies if inextricably linked material is seized under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 or s 51 (see PARAS 890-891 post). 'Inextricably linked material' is material it is not reasonably practicable to separate from other linked material without prejudicing the use of that other material in any investigation or proceedings. Eg it may not be possible to separate items of data held on computer disk without damaging their evidential integrity. Inextricably linked material must not be examined, imaged, copied or used for any purpose other than for proving the source and/or integrity of the linked material: Code B Guidance note 7H.

NOTE 6--The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22(2) does not preclude the police from retaining property for the purpose of assisting a private prosecution: Scopelight Ltd v Chief Constable of Northumbria Police [2009] EWCA Civ 1156, [2010] 2 All ER 431.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(viii) Additional Powers of Seizure/890. Additional powers of seizure from premises.

(viii) Additional Powers of Seizure

890. Additional powers of seizure from premises.

Where:

- 1130 (1) a person who is lawfully on any premises<sup>1</sup> finds anything on those premises that he has reasonable grounds for believing may be or may contain something for which he is authorised to search on those premises<sup>2</sup>;
  - 1131 (2) a relevant power of seizure<sup>3</sup> or the power described below<sup>4</sup> would entitle him, if he found it, to seize<sup>5</sup> whatever it is that he has grounds for believing that thing to be or to contain<sup>6</sup>; and
  - 1132 (3) in all the circumstances, it is not reasonably practicable for it to be determined, on those premises:
- 45
- 73. (a) whether what he has found is something that he is entitled to seize<sup>7</sup>; or
  - 74. (b) the extent to which what he has found contains something that he is entitled to seize<sup>8</sup>, that person's powers of seizure include power to seize so much of what he has found as it is necessary to remove from the premises to enable that to be determined<sup>9</sup>.
- 46

Where:

- 1133 (i) a person who is lawfully on any premises finds anything on those premises ('the seizable property') which he would be entitled to seize but for its being comprised in something else that he has<sup>10</sup> no power to seize<sup>11</sup>;
- 1134 (ii) the power under which that person would have power to seize the seizable property is a power to which this provision<sup>12</sup> applies<sup>13</sup>; and
- 1135 (iii) in all the circumstances it is not reasonably practicable for the seizable property to be separated, on those premises, from that in which it is comprised<sup>14</sup>, that person's power of seizure includes power to seize both the seizable property and that from which it is not reasonably practicable to separate it<sup>15</sup>.

The factors to be taken into account in considering<sup>16</sup> whether or not it is reasonably practicable on particular premises for something to be determined, or for something to be separated from something else, are confined to the following:

- 1136 (A) how long it would take to carry out the determination or separation on those premises<sup>17</sup>;
- 1137 (B) the number of persons that would be required to carry out that determination or separation on those premises within a reasonable period<sup>18</sup>;
- 1138 (C) whether the determination or separation would (or would if carried out on those premises) involve damage to property<sup>19</sup>;

- 1139 (D) the apparatus or equipment that it would be necessary or appropriate to use for the carrying out of the determination or separation<sup>20</sup>; and
- 1140 (E) in the case of separation, whether the separation would be likely, or if carried out by the only means that are reasonably practicable on those premises would be likely, to prejudice the use of some or all of the separated seizable property for a purpose for which something seized under the power in question is capable of being used<sup>21</sup>.

Where a person exercises such a power of seizure<sup>22</sup>, it is his duty<sup>23</sup>, on doing so, to give to the occupier of the premises a written notice<sup>24</sup>:

- 1141 (aa) specifying what has been seized in reliance on the powers conferred<sup>25</sup>;
- 1142 (bb) specifying the grounds on which those powers have been exercised<sup>26</sup>;
- 1143 (cc) setting out the effect of specified remedies and safeguards<sup>27</sup>;
- 1144 (dd) specifying the name and address of the person to whom notice of an application<sup>28</sup> to the appropriate judicial authority in respect of any of the seized property must be given<sup>29</sup>; and
- 1145 (ee) specifying the name and address of the person to whom an application may be made to be allowed to attend the initial examination required by any arrangements<sup>30</sup> which have been made<sup>31</sup>.

Where it appears to the person exercising such a power of seizure on any premises that the occupier of the premises is not present on the premises at the time of the exercise of the power, but that there is some other person present on the premises who is in charge of the premises, the requirement to give a written notice has effect as if it required the notice to be given to that other person<sup>32</sup>.

Where it appears to the person exercising such a power of seizure that there is no one present on the premises to whom he may give a notice<sup>33</sup>, he must instead, before leaving the premises, attach such a notice in a prominent place to the premises<sup>34</sup>.

1 'Premises' includes any vehicle, stall or moveable structure (including an offshore installation) and any other place whatever, whether or not occupied as land: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(1). 'Vehicle' includes any vessel, aircraft or hovercraft: s 66(1). 'Offshore installation' has the same meaning as in the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 (see s 12 (as amended); and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1681); Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(1).

(60) the power of seizure conferred by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 17, 22 (s 17 as amended) (see PARA 904 post); (61) the powers of seizure conferred by the Extradition Act 2003 ss 156(5), 160(5), 161(4), 162(6), (7), 164(6), (7) (see EXTRADITION vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 1513, 1515, 1517-1518, 1520); (62) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the Human Tissue Act 2004 Sch 5 para 5(1), (2) (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 275); (63) the power of seizure conferred by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 66 (see PARA 1088 post); (64) the power of seizure conferred by the Licensing Act 2003 s 90 (see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 105); (65) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the General Product Safety Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1803, reg 22(4)-(6) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 565); and (66) the power of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 28 (see PARA 425 ante): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50(5), Sch 1 Pt 1 (amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 194(5); the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Sch 11 para 40(6), Sch 12; the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 26(3), 91, Sch 6; the Extradition Act 2003 s 165(2); the Licensing Act 2003 ss 198, 199, Sch 6 para 128, Sch 7; the Human Tissue Act 2004 s 56, Sch 6 para 5(1), (4); the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 68; the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 364(e); the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (Powers of Seizure) Order 2003, SI 2003/934, arts 2(1), (2), (4); and the General Product Safety Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1803, reg 47(2), (4)). Head (66) supra is added as from a day to be appointed: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 Pt 1 (as so amended; prospectively amended by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 28(6)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 Pt 1 (as amended) is further amended so that heads (5), (9) and (17) supra are repealed and replaced by reference to the powers conferred by the Gambling Act 2005 s 317 (not yet in force): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 Pt 1 (as so amended; prospectively amended by the Gambling Act 2005 s 356(1), (4), Sch 16 para 18(1)(a), (b), Sch 17). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The Secretary of State may by order: (a) provide for any power designated by the order to be added to those specified in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 (as amended) or s 63(2) (as amended) (see note 5 infra); (b) make any modification of the provisions of Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) which the Secretary of State considers appropriate in consequence of any provision made by virtue of head (a) supra; (c) make any modification of any enactment making provision in relation to seizures, or things seized, under a power designated by an order under s 69(1) which the Secretary of State considers appropriate in consequence of any provision made by virtue of head (a) supra: see s 69(1). The power to make an order under s 69(1) is exercisable by statutory instrument; and no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 69(3). In s 69, 'modification' includes any exclusion, extension or application: s 69(4).

5     'Seize' is to be construed in accordance with ibid s 63(1) and s 66(5) (as amended) (see PARA 893 note 6 post): see s 66(1). 'Seize' includes 'take a copy of'; and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: ss 63(1)(a), 66(1). Part 2 (as amended) applies as if any copy taken under any power to which any provision of Pt 2 (as amended) applies were the original of that of which it is a copy: ss 63(1)(b), 66(1). For the purposes of Pt 2 (as amended), except s 50 and s 51 (see PARA 891 post), the powers mentioned in s 63(2) (as amended) (powers to obtain hard copies etc of information which is stored in electronic form) are to be treated as powers of seizure; and references to seizure and to seized property are to be construed accordingly: s 63(1)(c). The powers mentioned in s 63(1)(c) are any powers which are conferred by: (1) the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 19(4), 20 (as amended) (see PARAS 886-887 ante); (2) the Firearms Act 1968 s 46(3) (as added and amended) (see PARA 693 ante); (3) the Gaming Act 1968 s 43(5)(aa) (as added and amended); (4) the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 20C(3A) (as added and amended) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1706); (5) the Food Safety Act 1990 s 32(6)(b) (as amended) (see FOOD vol 18(2) (Reissue) PARA 261); (6) the Competition Act 1998 s 28(2)(f) (as amended) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131); and (7) the Nuclear Safeguards Act 2000 s 8(2)(c) (as amended) (see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1579): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 63(2). As from a day to be appointed head (3) above is repealed: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 63(2) (prospectively amended by the Gambling Act 2005 s 356, Sch 17). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 63(1) does not apply to s 50(6) (see note 9 infra) or s 57 (as amended) (see PARA 896 post): s 63(3).

6     Ibid s 50(1)(b).

7     Ibid s 50(1)(c)(i).

8     Ibid s 50(1)(c)(ii).

9     See ibid s 50(1). Without prejudice to any power conferred by s 50 to take a copy of any document, nothing in s 50, so far as it has effect by reference to the power to take copies of documents under the Competition Act 1998 s 28(2)(b) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131), is to be taken to confer any power to seize any document: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50(6).

The powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2) (prospectively amended) (see PARA 856 ante) (application of provisions relating to police officers to officers of Revenue and Customs) have effect in relation to the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) as they have effect in relation to the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 67.

The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) gives officers limited powers to seize property from premises or persons so they can sift or examine it elsewhere. Officers must be careful they only exercise these powers when it is essential and they do not remove any more material than necessary. The removal of large volumes of material, much of which may not ultimately be retainable, may have serious implications for the owners, particularly when they are involved in business or activities such as journalism or the provision of medical services. Officers must carefully consider if removing copies or images of relevant material or data would be a satisfactory alternative to removing originals. When originals are taken, officers must be prepared to facilitate the provision of copies or images for the owners when reasonably practicable: see Code B: Code of Practice for the Searching of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 7.7.

When an officer exercises a power of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 or s 51 (see PARA 891 post) he must provide the occupier of the premises or the person from whom the property is being seized with a written notice: (1) specifying what has been seized under the powers so conferred; (2) specifying the grounds for those powers; (3) setting out the effect of ss 59-61 (see PARAS 898-899 post) covering the grounds for a person with a relevant interest in seized property to apply to a judicial authority for its return and the duty of officers to secure property in certain circumstances when an application is made; (4) specifying the name and address of the person to whom notice of an application to the appropriate judicial authority in respect of any of the seized property must be given, or to whom an application may be made to allow attendance at the initial examination of the property: Code B para 7.12. For the meaning of 'appropriate judicial authority' see PARA 898 note 6 infra.

If the occupier is not present but there is someone in charge of the premises, the notice should be given to him. If no suitable person is available, so that the notice will easily be found it should either be left in a prominent place on the premises or attached to the exterior of the premises: Code B para 7.13.

23    Ie subject to ibid s 50(2), (3): see the text and notes 10-21 supra.

24    The Secretary of State may by regulations made by statutory instrument, after consultation with the Scottish Ministers, provide that a person who exercises a power of seizure conferred by ibid s 50 (see the text and notes 1-21 supra) must give a notice such as is mentioned in s 52(1) to any person, or send it to any place, described in the regulations: s 52(5). Such regulations may make different provisions for different cases: s 52(6). A statutory instrument containing such regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 52(7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made.

Where:

- 1146 (1) a person carrying out a lawful search of any person finds something that he has reasonable grounds for believing may be or may contain something for which he is authorised to search<sup>1</sup>;
  - 1147 (2) a relevant power of seizure<sup>2</sup> or the power described below<sup>3</sup> would entitle him, if he found it, to seize<sup>4</sup> whatever it is that he has grounds for believing that thing to be or to contain<sup>5</sup>; and
  - 1148 (3) in all the circumstances it is not reasonably practicable for it to be determined, at the time and place of the search:
- 47
- 75. (a) whether what he has found is something that he is entitled to seize<sup>6</sup>; or
  - 76. (b) the extent to which what he has found contains something that he is entitled to seize<sup>7</sup>, that person's powers of seizure include power to seize so much of what he has found as it is necessary to remove from that place to enable that to be determined<sup>8</sup>.
- 48

Where:

- 1149 (i) a person carrying out a lawful search of any person finds something ('the seizable property') which he would be entitled to seize but for its being comprised in something else that he has<sup>9</sup> no power to seize<sup>10</sup>;
- 1150 (ii) the power under which that person would have power to seize the seizable property is a power to which this provision<sup>11</sup> applies<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1151 (iii) in all the circumstances it is not reasonably practicable for the seizable property to be separated, at the time and place of the search, from that in which it is comprised<sup>13</sup>, that person's powers of seizure include power to seize both the seizable property and that from which it is not reasonably practicable to separate it<sup>14</sup>.

The factors to be taken into account in considering<sup>15</sup> whether or not it is reasonably practicable, at the time and place of a search, for something to be determined, or for something to be separated from something else, are confined to the following

- 1152 (A) how long it would take to carry out the determination or separation at that time and place<sup>16</sup>;
- 1153 (B) the number of persons that would be required to carry out that determination or separation at that time and place within a reasonable period<sup>17</sup>;
- 1154 (C) whether the determination or separation would (or would if carried out on those premises) involve damage to property<sup>18</sup>;

- 1155 (D) the apparatus or equipment that it would be necessary or appropriate to use for the carrying out of the determination or separation<sup>19</sup>; and
- 1156 (E) in the case of separation, whether the separation would be likely, or if carried out by the only means that are reasonably practicable at that time and place would be likely, to prejudice the use of some or all of the separated seizable property for a purpose for which something seized under the power in question is capable of being used<sup>20</sup>.

Where a person exercises such a power of seizure<sup>21</sup>, it is his duty, on doing so, to give a written notice to the person from whom the seizure is made:

- 1157 (aa) specifying what has been seized in reliance on the powers conferred<sup>22</sup>;
- 1158 (bb) specifying the grounds on which those powers have been exercised<sup>23</sup>;
- 1159 (cc) setting out the effect of specified safeguards and remedies<sup>24</sup>;
- 1160 (dd) specifying the name and address of the person to whom notice of any application<sup>25</sup> to the appropriate judicial authority in respect of any of the seized property must be given<sup>26</sup>; and
- 1161 (ee) specifying the name and address of the person to whom an application may be made to be allowed to attend the initial examination required by any arrangements made<sup>27</sup>.

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

890-892 Additional powers of seizure from premises ... Examination and return of property seized under additional powers of seizure

Certain functions under provisions mentioned in these paragraphs are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property/892. Examination and return of property seized under additional powers of seizure.

(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property

892. Examination and return of property seized under additional powers of seizure.

Where anything has been seized<sup>1</sup> under one of the additional powers of seizure<sup>2</sup>, it is the duty of the person for the time being<sup>3</sup> in possession of the seized property in consequence of the exercise of that power to secure that there are arrangements in force which<sup>4</sup> ensure:

1162 (1) that an initial examination of the property is carried out as soon as reasonably practicable<sup>5</sup> after the seizure<sup>6</sup>;

1163 (2) that that examination is confined to whatever is necessary for determining how much of the property:

77. (a) is property for which the person seizing it had power to search when he made the seizure but is not property the return<sup>7</sup> of which is required<sup>8</sup>;

78. (b) is property the retention of which is authorised<sup>9</sup>; or

1164 (3) that anything which is found, on that examination, not to fall within heads (a) to (c) above is separated from the rest of the seized property and is returned as soon as reasonably practicable after the examination of all the seized property has been completed<sup>12</sup>; and

1165 (4) that, until the initial examination of all the seized property has been completed and anything which does not fall within heads (a) to (c) has been returned, the seized property is kept separate from anything seized under any other power<sup>13</sup>.

1 See PARA 890 note 5 ante.

2 Ie under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 or s 51: see PARAS 890-891 ante.

3 In ibid Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended), in relation to a time when seized property is in any person's possession in consequence of a seizure ('the relevant time'), references to something for which the person making the seizure had power to search are to be construed:

317 (1) where the seizure was made on the occasion of a search carried out on the authority of a warrant, as including anything of the description of things the presence or suspected presence of which provided grounds for the issue of the warrant (s 66(2)(a));

318 (2) where the property was seized in the course of a search on the occasion of which it would have been lawful for the person carrying out the search to seize anything which on that occasion was believed by him to be, or appeared to him to be, of a particular description, as including anything which at the relevant time is believed by the person in possession of the seized property, or (as the case may be) appears to him, to be of that description, and anything which is in fact of that description (s 66(2)(b));

- 319 (3) where the property was seized in the course of a search on the occasion of which it would have been lawful for the person carrying out the search to seize anything which there were on that occasion reasonable grounds for believing was of a particular description, as including anything which there are at the relevant time reasonable grounds for believing is of that description, and anything which is in fact of that description (s 66(2)(c));
- 320 (4) where the property was seized in the course of a search to which neither head (2) nor head (3) supra applies, as including anything which is of a description of things which, on the occasion of the search, it would have been lawful for the person carrying it out to seize otherwise than under s 50 (see PARA 890 ante) or s 51 (see PARA 891 ante) (s 66(2)(d)); and
- 321 (5) where the property was seized on the occasion of a search authorised under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 82 (seizure of items suspected to have been, or to be intended to be, used in commission of certain offences in Northern Ireland), as including anything:
18. (a) which is or has been, or is or was intended to be, used in the commission of an offence such as is mentioned in s 82(3)(a) or (b) (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(2)(e)(i)); or
- 19
19. (b) which at the relevant time the person who is in possession of the seized property reasonably suspects is something falling within head (a) supra (s 66(2)(e)(ii)).
- 20

For the purpose of determining in accordance with s 66(2), in relation to any time, whether or to what extent property seized on the occasion of a search authorised under the Official Secrets Act 1911 s 9 (as amended) (seizure of evidence of offences under that Act having been or being about to be committed: see PARA 500 ante) is something for which the person making the seizure had power to search, s 9(1) (as amended) is to be construed:

- 322 (i) as if the reference in s 9(1) (as amended) to evidence of an offence under that Act being about to be committed were a reference to evidence of such an offence having been, at the time of the seizure, about to be committed (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(3)(a)); and
- 323 (ii) as if the reference in the Official Secrets Act 1911 s 9(1) (as amended) to reasonable ground for suspecting that such an offence is about to be committed were a reference to reasonable ground for suspecting that at the time of the seizure such an offence was about to be committed (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(3)(b)).

References in s 66(2) to a search include references to any activities authorised by virtue of any of: the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s 28(1) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 509); the Fair Trading Act 1973 s 29(1); the Prices Act 1974 Sch para 9 (as amended) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARAS 676-677); the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 162(1) (see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 306-307); the Estate Agents Act 1979 s 11(1) (see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 279); the Weights and Measures Act 1985 s 79 (as amended) and Sch 8 (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES vol 50 (2005 Reissue) PARA 27); the Consumer Protection Act 1987 s 29 (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 557); the Food Safety Act 1990 s 32(5) (see FOOD vol 18(2) (Reissue) PARA 261); the Property Misdescriptions Act 1991 Schedule para 3 (as amended) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 815); the Timeshare Act 1992 Sch 2 para 3 (as amended) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 725); the Human Tissue Act 2004 Sch 5 para 2 (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 275); and the General Product Safety Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1803, reg 22 (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 565); Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(4) (amended by the Human Tissue Act 2004 s 56, Sch 6 para 5(1), (3)); and the General Product Safety Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1803, reg 47(2), (3)).

4 le subject to the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 61: see PARA 899 post.

5 In determining the earliest practicable time for the carrying out of an initial examination of the seized property, due regard must be had to the desirability of allowing the person from whom it was seized, or a person with an interest in that property, an opportunity of being present or (if he chooses) of being represented at the examination: see ibid s 53(4); and Code B: Code of Practice for Searches by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Property para 7.8.

All reasonable steps should be taken to accommodate an interested person's request to be present, provided the request is reasonable and subject to the need to prevent harm to, interference with, or unreasonable delay to the investigatory process. If an examination proceeds in the absence of an interested person who asked to attend or his representative, the officer who exercised the relevant seizure power must give that person a written notice of why the examination was carried out in those circumstances. If it is necessary for security reasons or to maintain confidentiality, officers may exclude interested persons from decryption or other processes which facilitate the examination but do not form part of it: Code B para 7.8A.

What constitutes a relevant interest in specific material may depend on the nature of that material and the circumstances in which it is seized. Anyone with a reasonable claim to ownership of the material and anyone entrusted with its safe keeping by the owner should be considered: Code B Guidance note 7D.

6 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 53(1), (2)(a). See note 13 infra.

7 References to 'return' in relation to seized property, and cognate terms, are to be construed in accordance with ibid s 58 (see PARA 897 post): s 66(1).

8 Ibid s 53(1), (2)(b), (3)(a). As to the requirement to return see s 54; and PARA 893 post. See note 13 infra.

9 Ibid s 53(1), (2)(b), (3)(b). As to the authorisation to retain see s 56; and PARA 895 post. See note 13 infra.

10 References to whether or not it is reasonably practicable to separate part of the seized property from the rest of it are references to whether or not it is reasonably practicable to do so without prejudicing the use of the rest of that property, or a part of it, for purposes for which (disregarding the part to be separated) the use of the whole or of a part of the rest of the property, if retained, would be lawful: ibid s 53(5).

11 Ibid s 53(1), (2)(b), (3)(c). See note 13 infra.

12 Ibid s 53(1), (2)(c). See note 13 infra. It is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to make sure property is returned in accordance with the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 53-55. Material which there is no power to retain must be separated from the rest of the seized property, and returned as soon as reasonably practicable after examination of all the seized property: Code B para 7.9.

Delay is only warranted if very clear and compelling reasons exist, eg the unavailability of the person to whom the material is to be returned, or the need to agree a convenient time to return a large volume of material: Code B para 7.9A.

13 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 53(1), (2)(d). Property seized under s 50 or s 51 (see PARAS 890-891 ante) must be kept securely and separately from any material seized under other powers: Code B para 7.8.

The powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2) (prospectively amended) (see PARA 856 note 6 ante) (application of provisions relating to police officers to officers of Revenue and Customs) have effect in relation to the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) as they have effect in relation to the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 67.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property/893. Obligation to return items subject to legal privilege.

893. Obligation to return items subject to legal privilege.

Where, at any time after a seizure<sup>1</sup> of anything has been made in exercise of:

- 1166 (1) one of the additional powers of seizure<sup>2</sup>;
- 1167 (2) any of the powers of seizure to which the additional powers of seizure apply<sup>3</sup>;
- 1168 (3) any other power of seizure conferred on a constable by or under any enactment<sup>4</sup>,

and:

- 1169 (a) it appears to the person for the time being<sup>5</sup> having possession of the seized property<sup>6</sup> in consequence of the seizure that the property is an item subject to legal privilege<sup>7</sup>, or has such an item comprised in<sup>8</sup> it<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1170 (b) in a case where the item is comprised in something else which has been lawfully seized, it is not comprised in property of a specified<sup>10</sup> type<sup>11</sup>,

it is the duty of that person to secure that the item is returned<sup>12</sup> as soon as reasonably practicable after the seizure<sup>13</sup>.

Property in which an item subject to legal privilege is comprised is of a specified type for the purposes of head (b) above if:

- 1171 (i) the whole or part of the rest of the property is property: (A) for which the person seizing it had power to search when he made the seizure, but is not property which is required to be returned under the obligation to return items subject to legal privilege or the obligation<sup>14</sup> to return excluded and special procedure material<sup>15</sup>; or (B) in respect of which there are reasonable grounds for believing that it was obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence, or that it is evidence in relation to any offence, and that it is necessary for it to be retained in order to prevent it being concealed, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed<sup>16</sup>; and
- 1172 (ii) in all the circumstances, it is not reasonably practicable for that item to be separated from the rest of that property (or, as the case may be, from that part of it) without prejudicing the use of the rest of that property, or that part of it, for purposes for which (disregarding that item) its use, if retained, would be lawful<sup>17</sup>.

6 'Seized property' in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended), in relation to any exercise of a power of seizure, means (subject to s 66(5) (as amended)) anything seized in exercise of that power: s 66(1). References in Pt 2 (as amended) to a power of seizure include references to each of the powers to take possession of items under: (1) the Companies Act 1985 s 448(3) (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1559); (2) the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(5) (see PARA 1091 post); (3) the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 s 40(2) (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 290); (4) the Competition Act 1998 s 28(2)(c) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131); and (5) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 176(5) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 454): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(5) (amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 364(c)).

7 In the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended), 'items subject to legal privilege' is to be construed in accordance with s 65 (as amended): s 66(1). Subject to s 65(2)-(4), (6)-(9), references in Pt 2 (as amended) to an item subject to legal privilege are to be construed for the purposes of the application of that Part to England and Wales in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 10 (see PARA 873 ante): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(1)(a).

In relation to property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of: (1) the power of seizure conferred by the Competition Act 1998 s 28(2) (as amended) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131); or (2) so much of any power of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 (see PARA 890 ante) as is exercisable by reference to that power, references in Pt 2 (as amended) to an item subject to legal privilege are to be read as reference to a privileged communication within the meaning of the Competition Act 1998 s 30 (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 132): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(2).

In relation to property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of: (a) the power of seizure conferred by the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 20(C) (as added and amended); or (b) so much of any power of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 (see PARA 890 ante) as is exercisable by reference to that power, references in Pt 2 (as amended) to an item subject to legal privilege are to be construed in accordance with the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 20C(4A) (as added): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(3); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1706.

In relation to property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of: (i) the power of seizure conferred by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 352(4); or (ii) so much of any power of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 (see PARA 890 ante) as is exercisable by reference to that power, references in Pt 2 (as amended) to an item subject to legal privilege are to be read as references to privileged material within the meaning of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 354(2): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(3A) (added by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2001 s 456 Sch 11 para 40(5)); and PARA 810 ante.

An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of the power of seizure conferred by the Companies Act 1985 s 448(3) (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1559) is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the seizure of that item was in contravention of the Companies Act 1985 s 452(2) (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1564): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(4).

An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of the power of seizure conferred by the Timeshare Act 1992 s 2, Sch 2 para 3(2) is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the seizure of that item was in contravention of the Timeshare Act 1992 Sch 2 para 3(4): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(6); and see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 725.

An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of the power of seizure conferred by the Data Protection Act 1998 Sch 9 para 1 (prospectively amended) is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the seizure of that item was in contravention of the Data Protection Act 1998 Sch 9 para 9: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(7); and see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION vol 8(1) (2003 Reissue) PARA 576.

An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of the power of seizure conferred by the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Sch 3 para 1 (prospectively amended) is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the seizure of that item was in contravention of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Sch 3 para 9: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 65(8); and see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION vol 8(1) (2003 Reissue) PARA 613.

An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of so much of any power of seizure conferred by s 50 (see PARA 890 ante) as is exercisable by reference to a power of seizure conferred by: (A) the Companies Act 1985 s 448(3) (as substituted); (B) the Timeshare Act 1992 Sch 2 para 3(2); (C) the Data Protection Act 1998 Sch 9 para 1; or (D) the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Sch 3 para 1, is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the item would have been taken for the purposes of Pt 2 (as amended) to be an item subject to legal privilege had it been seized under the power of seizure by reference to which the power conferred by s 50 was exercised: see s 65(9).

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

893 Obligation to return items subject to legal privilege

NOTE 6--Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(5) amended: Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 2008 Sch 7 para 20(b), Sch 8 Pt 1; SI 2009/1941.

NOTE 7--An item which is, or is comprised in, property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of the power of seizure conferred by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 227C (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 357) is to be taken for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 to be an item subject to legal privilege if, and only if, the seizure of that item was in contravention of the 2002 Act s 227B(4) (privileged items): 2001 Act s 65(8A) (added by SI 2006/3363).

Also, head (E) the 2002 Act s 227C: 2001 Act s 65(9) (amended by SI 2006/3363).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property/894. Obligation to return excluded and special procedure material.

894. Obligation to return excluded and special procedure material.

Where, at any time after a seizure<sup>1</sup> of anything has been made in the exercise of a specified power of seizure<sup>2</sup>:

- 1173 (1) it appears to the person for the time being<sup>3</sup> having possession of the seized property<sup>4</sup> in consequence of the seizure that the property is excluded material<sup>5</sup> or special procedure material<sup>6</sup>, or has any excluded material or any special procedure material comprised in it<sup>7</sup>;
- 1174 (2) its retention is not authorised<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1175 (3) in a case where the material is comprised<sup>9</sup> in something else which has been lawfully seized, it is not comprised in property falling within head (a) or head (b) below<sup>10</sup>,

it is the duty of that person to secure that the item is returned<sup>11</sup> as soon as reasonably practicable after the seizure<sup>12</sup>.

For the purpose of head (3) above, property is excepted if it is property in which any excluded or special procedure material is comprised and:

- 1176 (a) the whole or a part of the rest of the property is property for which the person seizing it had power to search when he made the seizure but is not property the return of which is required by the above provisions or by provisions relating to legal privilege<sup>13</sup>, and, in all the circumstances, it is not reasonably practicable for that material to be separated from the rest of that property (or, as the case may be, from that part of it) without prejudicing the use of the rest of that property, or that part of it, for purposes for which (disregarding that material) its use, if retained, would be lawful<sup>14</sup>; or
- 1177 (b) the whole or a part of the rest of the property is property the retention of which is authorised by specified provisions<sup>15</sup>, and, in all the circumstances, it is not reasonably practicable for that material to be separated from the rest of that property (or, as the case may be, from that part of it) without prejudicing the use of the rest of that property, or that part of it, for purposes for which (disregarding that material) its use, if retained, would be lawful<sup>16</sup>.

1 See PARA 890 note 5 ante.

2 Is a power to which the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 55 (as amended) applies, namely: (1) the power of seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(2) (see PARA 873 ante); (2) the power of seizure conferred by the Official Secrets Act 1911 s 9(1) (see PARA 500 ante); (3) the power of seizure conferred by the Children and Young Persons (Harmful Publications) Act 1955 s 3(1) (as amended) (see PRESS, PRINTING AND PUBLISHING (Reissue) vol 36(2) PARA 422); (4) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the Obscene Publications Act 1959 s 3(1), (2) (as amended) (see PARA 751 ante); (5) the power of seizure conferred by the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 s 51 (as amended); (6) the power of seizure conferred by the Firearms Act 1968 s 46 (as added and amended) (see PARA 693 ante); (7) the power of seizure conferred by the Theft Act 1968 s 26(3) (see PARA 306 ante); (8) the power of seizure conferred by the Gaming Act 1968 s 43(5); (9) the power of seizure conferred by the Immigration Act 1971 s 28D(3) (as added) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION

AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (Reissue) PARA 207); (10) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the provisions of the Biological Weapons Act 1974 s 4(1)(b)-(d) (see WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 471); (11) the power of seizure conferred by the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976 s 19 (as amended); (12) the power of seizure conferred by the Protection of Children Act 1978 s 4(2) (as amended) (see PARA 759 ante); (13) the power of seizure conferred by the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981 s 2(3) (as amended) (see PARA 768 ante); (14) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the provisions of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 7(1) (see PARA 352 ante), s 24(1) (see PARA 550 ante); (15) the power of seizure conferred by the Video Recording Act 1984 s 17(2) (see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 291); (16) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 s 109(4) (as amended), s 200(3A) (as added and amended), s 297B (as added) (see COPYRIGHT, DESIGN RIGHTS AND RELATED RIGHTS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 441, 493, 720); (17) the power of seizure conferred by the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 14(4) (see PARA 358 ante); (18) the power of seizure conferred by the Trade Marks Act 1994 s 92A(4) (as added) (see TRADE MARKS AND TRADE NAMES vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 145); (19) the power of seizure conferred by the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 s 56(5) (see PARA 785 ante); (20) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 1, 3 (prospectively amended) (see PARA 409 ante); (21) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 15, 19 (prospectively amended), so far only as the power in question is conferred by reference to Sch 5 para 1 (see PARA 409 ante); (22) the power of seizure conferred by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 352(4) (see PARA 810 ante); (23) the power of seizure conferred by the Licensing Act 2003 s 90 (see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 105): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 55(4), Sch 1 Pt 3 (amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 456, 457, Sch 11 para 40(7), Sch 12; the Licensing Act 2003 ss 198, 199, Sch 6 paras 119, 128, Sch 7; and the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (Powers of Seizure) Order 2003, SI 2003/934, art 3). As from a day to be appointed the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 Pt 3 (as amended) is further amended so that heads (5) and (11) above are repealed and replaced with reference to the powers conferred by the Gambling Act 2005 s 317 (not yet in force): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 Pt 3 (as so amended; prospectively further amended by the Gambling Act 2005 s 356, Sch 16 para 18(1), Sch 17). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The Secretary of State may add further powers of seizure to those listed in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 (as amended): see s 69; and PARA 890 note 3 ante.

3 See PARA 892 note 3 ante.

4 See PARA 893 note 6 ante.

5 References to excluded material in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) are to be construed in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 12 (see PARA 875 ante): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(6)(a).

6 References to special procedure material in ibid Pt 2 (as amended) are to be construed in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 14 (see PARA 876 ante): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 66(6)(b). In its application to the powers of seizure conferred by the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 s 56(5) (see PARA 785 ante) or the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 352(4) (see PARA 810 ante), the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 has effect with the omission of every reference to special procedure material: s 55(5) (amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 546, 547, Sch 11 para 40(2), Sch 12). In the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 55 (as amended), except in its application to: (1) the power of seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(2) (see PARA 873 ante); (2) each of the powers of seizure conferred by the provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 1, 3 (Sch 5 para 3 prospectively amended) (see PARA 409 ante); (3) the power of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 15, 19 (prospectively amended) so far only as the power in question is conferred by reference to Sch 5 para 1 (see PARA 413 ante), 'special procedure material' means special procedure material consisting of documents or records other than documents: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 55(6).

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property/895. Property seized by constables etc.

895. Property seized by constables etc.

The retention of:

- 1178 (1) property seized<sup>1</sup> on any premises<sup>2</sup> by a constable<sup>3</sup> who was lawfully on the premises<sup>4</sup>;
- 1179 (2) property seized on any premises by a relevant person who was on the premises accompanied by a constable<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1180 (3) property seized by a constable carrying out a lawful search of any person<sup>6</sup>, is authorised to the extent that there are reasonable grounds for believing: (a) that it is property obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence, and that it is necessary for it to be retained in order to prevent its being concealed, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed<sup>7</sup>; or (b) that it is evidence in relation to any offence, and that it is necessary for it to be retained in order to prevent its being concealed, lost, altered or destroyed<sup>8</sup>.

1 See PARA 890 note 5 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 890 note 1 ante.

3 See PARA 857 note 2 ante.

4 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 56(1)(a). This includes property seized on any premises: (1) by a person authorised under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 16(2) (see PARA 880 note 8 ante) to accompany a constable executing a warrant; or (2) by a person accompanying a constable under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(6) (see PARA 1091 note 6 post) in the execution of a warrant under s 2(4) (see PARA 1091 note 4 post): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 56(4A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 para 14). See note 8 infra.

5 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 56(1)(b). The reference to a relevant person's being on any premises accompanied by a constable is a reference only to a person who was so on the premises under the authority of a warrant under the Companies Act 1985 s 448 (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1559) authorising him to exercise together with a constable the powers conferred by s 448(3) (as substituted): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 56(5). ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(ix) Return or Retention of Seized Property/896. Retention of seized items.

896. Retention of seized items.

Specified provisions<sup>1</sup> ('the relevant provisions') about the retention of property which has been seized apply in relation to any property seized<sup>2</sup> in exercise of an additional power<sup>3</sup> as if the property had been seized under the power of seizure by reference to which the additional power of seizure was exercised in relation to that property<sup>4</sup>.

1 The specified provisions to which the relevant provisions apply are: (1) the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22 (as amended) (see PARA 889 ante); (2) the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 20CC(3) (as added) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1707); (3) the Companies Act 1985 s 448(6) (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1559); (4) the Weights and Measures Act 1985 Sch 8 para 4 (see WEIGHTS AND MEASURES vol 50 (2005 Reissue) PARA 216); (5) the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 s 40(4) (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 290); (6) the Knives Act 1997 s 5(4) (see PARA 703 ante); (7) the Data Protection Act 1998 Sch 9 para 7(2) (see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION vol 8(1) (2003 Reissue) PARA 575); (8) the Competition Act 1998 s 28(7) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131); (9) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 176(8) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 454); (10) the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Sch 3 para 7(2) (see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION vol 8(1) (2003 Reissue) PARA 613); (11) the Human Tissue Act 2004 Sch 5 para 5(4): see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 57(1) (amended by the Human Tissue Act 2004 s 56, Sch 6 para 5(1), (2); and the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 364).

2 For the meaning of 'seized' see PARA 890 note 5 ante.

897. Person to whom seized property is to be returned.

Where anything has been seized<sup>1</sup> in exercise of any power of seizure, and there is an obligation under the specified provisions<sup>2</sup> for the whole or any part of the seized property<sup>3</sup> to be returned, the obligation to return it is an obligation to return it to the person from whom it was seized<sup>4</sup>. However, where:

- 1181 (1) any person is obliged under the specified provisions to return anything that has been seized to the person from whom it was seized<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1182 (2) the person under that obligation is satisfied that some other person has a better right to that thing than the person from whom it was seized<sup>6</sup>, his duty to return it is, instead, a duty to return it to that other person or, as the case may be, to the person appearing to him to have the best right to the thing in question<sup>7</sup>.

Where different persons claim to be entitled to the return of anything that is required to be returned under the specified provisions, that thing may be retained for as long as is reasonably necessary for the determination<sup>8</sup> of the person to whom it must be returned<sup>9</sup>.

References in Pt 2 (as amended) to the person from whom something has been seized, in relation to a case in which the power of seizure was exercisable by reason of that thing's having been found on any premises, are references to the occupier of the premises at the time of the seizure: s 58(4). For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 890 note 1 ante. References in s 58 to the occupier of any premises at the time of a seizure, in relation to a case in which: (1) a notice in connection with the entry or search of the premises in question, or with the seizure, was given to a person appearing in the occupier's absence to be in charge of the premises; and (2) it is practicable, for the purpose of returning something that has been seized, to identify that person but not to identify the occupier of the premises, are references to that person: s 58(5).

The powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2) (prospectively amended) (see PARA 856 note 6 ante) (application of provisions relating to police officers to officers of Revenue and Customs) have effect in relation to the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) as they have effect in relation to the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 67.

and return property apply equally to all copies, images or other material created because of seizure of the original property: Code B Guidance note 7E.

UPDATE

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(x) Remedies and Safeguards/898. Application to the appropriate judicial authority.

(x) Remedies and Safeguards

898. Application to the appropriate judicial authority.

Where anything has been seized<sup>1</sup> in exercise, or purported exercise, of a relevant power of seizure, namely:

- 1183 (1) one of the additional powers of seizure<sup>2</sup>;
- 1184 (2) any of the powers of seizure to which the additional powers apply<sup>3</sup>;
- 1185 (3) any other power of seizure conferred on a constable by or under any enactment<sup>4</sup>, any person with a relevant interest<sup>5</sup> in the seized property may apply to the appropriate judicial authority<sup>6</sup> for the return<sup>7</sup> of the whole or part of the seized property on one or more of the following grounds<sup>8</sup>:

- 1186 (a) that there was no power to make the seizure<sup>9</sup>;
- 1187 (b) that the seized property is or contains an item subject to legal privilege that is not comprised in<sup>10</sup> property inextricably linked<sup>11</sup> to other seizable property<sup>12</sup>;
- 1188 (c) that the seized property is or contains any excluded material or special procedure material which:

- 80. (i) has been seized under a power to which the obligation to return excluded and special procedure material<sup>13</sup> applies<sup>14</sup>;
- 81. (ii) is not comprised in property in respect of which the obligation to return does not apply<sup>15</sup>; and
- 82. (iii) is not property whose retention is authorised by the provisions relating to property seized by a constable or a relevant person accompanying him<sup>16</sup>;

- 1189 (d) that the seized property is or contains something seized under an additional power of seizure<sup>17</sup> which is not inextricably linked to property which the police may retain<sup>18</sup>.

On such an application, the appropriate judicial authority must, if satisfied as to any of the matters mentioned in heads (a) to (d) above, order the return of so much of the seized property as is property in relation to which the authority is so satisfied; and to the extent that that authority is not so satisfied, it must dismiss the application<sup>19</sup>.

On an application: (A) by a person with a relevant interest; or (B) on an application by the person for the time being<sup>20</sup> having possession of anything in consequence of its seizure under a relevant power of seizure; or (C) on an application by a person with a relevant interest in anything seized under an additional power of seizure<sup>21</sup>, made on the grounds that the requirements to secure arrangements for the initial examination of seized property and for the separation and subsequent return of property not inextricably linked with it have not been or are not being complied with<sup>22</sup>, the appropriate judicial authority may give such directions as the authority thinks fit as to the examination, retention, separation or return of the whole or any part of the seized property<sup>23</sup>.

On any such application<sup>24</sup>, the appropriate judicial authority may authorise the retention of any property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of a relevant power of seizure, and would otherwise fall to be returned, if that authority is satisfied that the retention of the property is justified<sup>25</sup> on grounds that (if the property were returned) it would immediately become appropriate:

- 1190 (aa) to issue, on the application of the person who is in possession of the property at the time of the application under this provision, a warrant in pursuance of which, or of the exercise of which, it would be lawful to seize the property<sup>26</sup>; or
- 1191 (bb) to make an order under specified provisions<sup>27</sup> under which the property would fall to be delivered up or produced to the person mentioned in head (aa) above<sup>28</sup>.

If a person fails to comply with any order or direction made or given by a judge of the Crown Court in exercise of any jurisdiction under these provisions, the authority may deal with him as if he had committed a contempt of the Crown Court; and any enactment relating to contempt of the Crown Court has effect in relation to the failure as if it were such a contempt<sup>29</sup>.

2 I.e. the powers of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 50, 51, and the powers of seizure conferred by Sch 1 Pts 1, 2 (as amended) (see PARAS 890-891 ante): s 59(10)(a).

3 Ibid s 59(10)(b). These powers of seizure are listed in Sch 1 Pts 1, 2 (as amended): see PARAS 890-891 ante.

4 Ibid s 59(1), (10)(c). This includes an enactment passed after the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001: s 59(1), (10)(c).

5 References in ibid s 59 to a person with a relevant interest in seized property are references to: (1) the person from whom it was seized; (2) any person with an interest in the property; or (3) any person who had custody or control of the property immediately before the seizure: s 59(1), (11). For the purposes of head (2) supra, the persons who have an interest in seized property are, in the case of property which is or which contains an item subject to legal privilege, taken to include the person in whose favour that privilege is conferred: s 59(1), (12).

6 I.e. in England and Wales, a judge of the Crown Court, except in relation to the seizure of items (and in relation to items seized) under:

324 (1) the powers of seizure conferred by the Companies Act 1985 s 448(3) (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1559) or the Competition Act 1998 s 28(2) (as amended) (see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 131);

325 (2) the power of seizure conferred by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 352(4), if the power is exercisable for the purposes of a civil recovery investigation (see PARAS 804, 810 ante);

326 (3) any power of seizure conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 (see PARA 890 ante), so far as that power is exercisable by reference to any power mentioned in head (1) supra, in which cases the appropriate judicial authority in relation to England and Wales is a judge of the High Court: ss 64(1)-(3), 66(1) (s 64(3) amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 ss 456, 457, Sch 11 para 40(4), Sch 12).

7 See PARA 892 note 7 ante.

8 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 59(1), (2).

The powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2) (prospectively amended) (see PARA 856 note 6 ante) (application of provisions relating to police officers to officers of Revenue and Customs) have effect in relation to the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) as they have effect in relation to the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 67.

15 Ibid s 59(1), (3)(c)(ii). See s 55(2), (3); and PARA 894 ante.

16 Ibid s 59(1), (3)(c)(iii). See s 56 (as amended); and PARA 895 ante.

17 It is under ibid s 50 or s 51: see PARAS 890-891 ante.

18 Ibid s 59(1), (3)(d). Head (d) in the text refers to property which does not fall within s 53(3): see PARA 892 ante. As to procedural rules in relation to applications under s 59 see the Crown Court Rules 1982, SI 1982/1109, r 39 (amended by SI 2003/639; SI 2003/1664).

When an officer involved in the investigation has reasonable grounds to believe a person with a relevant interest in property seized under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 or s 51 (see PARAS 890-891 ante) intends to make an application under s 59 for the return of any legally privileged, special procedure or excluded material, the officer in charge of the investigation should be informed as soon as practicable and the material seized should be kept secure in accordance with s 61 (see PARA 899 post): Code B: Code of Practice for Searches of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property Found by Police Officers on Persons and Premises para 7.10. Officers should consider reaching agreement with owners and/or other interested parties on the procedure for examining a specific set of property, rather than awaiting the judicial authority's determination; agreement can sometimes give a quicker and more satisfactory route for all concerned and minimise costs and legal complexities: Code B Guidance note 7C.

27 It is an order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9, Sch 1 para 4 (prospectively amended) (see PARA 878 note 24 ante); the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 20BA (as added) (see INCOME TAX vol 23(1) (Reissue) PARA 1704); or the Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 para 5 (prospectively amended) (see PARA 410 ante).

28 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 59(1), (7)(b). Where any property which has been seized in exercise, or purported exercise, of a relevant power of seizure has parts ('part A' and 'part B') comprised in it such that:

327 (1) it would be inappropriate, if the property were returned, to take any action such as is mentioned in s 59(7) in relation to part A (s 59(8)(a));

328 (2) it would (or would but for the facts mentioned in head (1) supra) be appropriate, if the property were returned, to take such action in relation to part B (s 59(8)(b)); and

329 (3) in all the circumstances, it is not reasonably practicable to separate part A from part B without prejudicing the use of part B for purposes for which it is lawful to use property seized under the power in question (s 59(8)(c)), the facts mentioned in head (1) supra are not to be taken into account by the appropriate judicial authority in deciding whether the retention of the property is justified on grounds falling within s 59(1), (7): see s 59(1), (8).

855-907 Enforcement Procedures

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43) creates a new civil order aimed at preventing serious crime: see PARA 907A.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) makes provision for a new civil preventative order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender: see PARA 907B.

898 Application to the appropriate judicial authority

NOTE 6--2001 Act s 64(3) further amended: Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch 10 para 27.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/12. ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(x) Remedies and Safeguards/899. Duty to secure.

899. Duty to secure.

Where property has been seized<sup>1</sup> in exercise, or purported exercise, of any additional power of seizure<sup>2</sup>, a duty to secure arises<sup>3</sup> in relation to the seized property if:

- 1192 (1) a person entitled to do so makes an application<sup>4</sup> for the return of the property<sup>5</sup>;
  - 1193 (2) notice of the application is given to a relevant person<sup>6</sup>;
  - 1194 (3) at least one of the following two conditions is satisfied:
- 53
- 83. (a) the application is made on the grounds that the seized property<sup>7</sup> is or contains an item subject to legal privilege that is not comprised in<sup>8</sup> inextricably linked property<sup>9</sup>;
  - 84. (b) the seized property was seized by a person who had, or purported to have, power<sup>10</sup> to seize it by virtue only of one or more of the specified powers<sup>11</sup>, and the application: (i) is made on the ground that the seized property is or contains something which is not of a specified type<sup>12</sup>; and (ii) states that the seized property is or contains special procedure material<sup>13</sup> or excluded material<sup>14</sup>.

In relation to property seized by a person who had, or purported to have, power under an additional power to seize it by virtue only of one or more of the powers of seizure conferred by certain Acts, the condition in head (b) above is satisfied only if the application states that the seized property is or contains excluded material (or, in some cases, special procedure material consisting of documents or records other than documents)<sup>15</sup>.

The duty to secure<sup>16</sup> is a duty of the person for the time being having possession<sup>17</sup>, in consequence of the seizure, of the seized property to secure that arrangements are in force that ensure that the seized property (without being returned) is not, at any time after the giving of the notice of the application<sup>18</sup> for the return of the property, either examined or copied, or put to any use to which its seizure would otherwise<sup>19</sup> entitle it to be put, except with the consent of the applicant or in accordance with the directions of the appropriate judicial authority<sup>20</sup>. Nothing in any such arrangements<sup>21</sup> is to be taken to prevent the giving of a notice<sup>22</sup> for the disclosure of material protected by encryption etc in respect of any information contained in the seized material<sup>23</sup>.

13 For the meaning of 'special procedure material' see PARA 876 ante.

14 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 60(1), (3). For the meaning of 'excluded material' see PARA 875 ante. The officer in charge of the investigation is responsible for making sure property is properly secured. Securing involves making sure the property is not examined, copied, imaged or put to any other use except at the request, or with the consent, of the applicant or in accordance with the directions of the appropriate judicial authority. Any request, consent or directions must be recorded in writing and signed by both the initiator and the officer in charge of the investigation: Code B: Code of Practice for Searches of Premises by Police Officers and the Seizure of Property found by Police Officers on Persons or Premises para 7.11. The mechanics of securing property vary according to the circumstances; 'bagging up', ie placing material in sealed bags or containers and strict subsequent control of access is the appropriate procedure in many cases: Code B Guidance note 7F. When material is seized under the powers of seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, the duty to retain it under the code of practice issued under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1994 is subject to the provisions on retention of seized material in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 22 (as amended) (see PARA 889 ante): Code B Guidance note 7G.

The powers conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 114(2) (prospectively amended) (see PARA 856 note 6 ante) (application of provisions relating to police officers to officers of Revenue and Customs) have effect in relation to the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (ss 50-70) (as amended) as they have effect in relation to the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 67.

15 In relation to property seized by a person who had, or purported to have, power under ibid Pt 2 (as amended) to seize it by virtue only of one or more of the powers of seizure conferred by the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 s 56(5) (see PARA 785 ante) or the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 352(4) (see PARA 810 ante) the condition in head (b) in the text is satisfied only if the application states that the seized property is or contains excluded material: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 60(4) (amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 456, 457, Sch 11 para 40(3), Sch 12).

In relation to property seized by a person who had, or purported to have, power under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 2 (as amended) to seize it by virtue only of one or more of the powers of seizure specified in Sch 1 Pt 3 (as amended) (see PARA 894 note 2 ante) but not by virtue of:

334 (1) the power of seizure conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 8(2) (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 60(5)(a); and see PARA 873 ante);

335 (2) either of the powers of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 1, 3 (prospectively amended) (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 60(5)(c); and see PARA 409 ante);

336 (3) either of the powers of seizure conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 paras 15, 19 (prospectively amended) so far as they are conferred by reference to Sch 5 para 1 (Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 60(5)(a); and see PARA 413 ante), the condition in head (b) in the text is satisfied only if the application states that the seized property is or contains excluded material or special procedure material consisting of documents or records other than documents: see s 60(5).

'Documents' includes information recorded in any form: see s 66(1).

20 Ibid s 61(1). For the meaning of 'appropriate judicial authority' see PARA 898 note 6 ante. Section 61(1) does not have effect in relation to any time after the withdrawal of the application to which the notice relates: s 61(2).

21 le arrangements for the purposes of ibid s 61(1): see the text and notes 16-20 supra.

23 Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 61(3). However, s 61(1) (see the text and notes 16-20 supra) applies to anything disclosed for the purpose of complying with such a notice as it applies to the seized material in which the information in question is contained: see s 61(3). Section 59(9) (see PARA 898 text and note 29 ante) applies in relation to any jurisdiction conferred on the appropriate judicial authority by s 61 as it applies in relation to the jurisdiction conferred by s 59: s 61(4).

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(x) Remedies and Safeguards/900. Use of inextricably linked property.

900. Use of inextricably linked property.

There are special provisions which apply to property, other than property which is for the time being required to be secured<sup>1</sup>, if it has been seized under an additional power of seizure<sup>2</sup> or a specified power of seizure<sup>3</sup>, and is inextricably linked property<sup>4</sup>. It is the duty of the person for the time being having possession<sup>5</sup>, in consequence of the seizure, of the inextricably linked property to ensure that arrangements are in force which secure that that property (without being returned) is not at any time, except with the consent of the person from whom it was seized, either examined or copied, or put to any other use<sup>6</sup>. However, this does not require that such arrangements should prevent inextricably linked property from being put to any use to the extent that such use is necessary for facilitating the use, in any investigation or proceedings, of property in which the inextricably linked material is comprised<sup>7</sup>.

1    Ie under the provisions of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 61: see PARA 899 ante.

2    Ie if it has been seized under any power conferred by ibid s 50 or s 51: see PARAS 890-891 ante.

3    Ie under a power specified in ibid Sch 1 Pt 1 or Sch 1 Pt 2 (as amended): see PARAS 890-891 ante.

4    Ibid s 62(1). Property is inextricably linked property for the purposes of s 62 if it falls within s 62(6)-(8): s 62(5).

Property falls within s 62(6) if: (1) it has been seized under a power conferred by s 50 or s 51 (see PARAS 890-891 ante); and (2) but for s 53(3)(c) (see PARA 892 head (2)(c) ante), arrangements under s 53(2) (see PARA 892 heads (1)-(4) ante) in relation to the property would be required to ensure the return of the property as mentioned in s 53(2)(c) (see PARA 892 head (3) ante): see s 62(6); and PARA 892 ante.

Property falls within s 62(7) if: (a) it has been seized under a power to which s 54 (see PARA 893 ante) applies; and (b) but for s 54(1)(b) (see PARA 893 head (b) ante), the person for the time being having possession of the property would be under a duty to secure its return as mentioned in s 54(1): see s 62(7); and PARA 893 ante.

Property falls within s 62(8) if: (i) it has been seized under a power of seizure to which s 55 (as amended) (see PARA 894 ante) applies; and (ii) but for s 55(1)(c) (see PARA 894 head (3) ante), the person for the time being having possession of the property would be under a duty to secure its return as mentioned in s 55(1): see s 62(8); and PARA 894 ante.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(4) POWERS OF ENTRY, SEARCH AND SEIZURE/(xi) Action Following Search/902. Indorsements on, and return of, warrants.

902. Indorsements on, and return of, warrants.

A constable executing a search warrant must make an indorsement on it stating:

- 1206 (1) whether the articles or persons sought were found<sup>1</sup>;
- 1207 (2) whether any articles were seized, other than articles which were sought and, unless the warrant is a warrant specifying one set of premises only, he must do so separately in respect of each set of premises entered and searched, which he must in each case state in the indorsement<sup>2</sup>.

In addition, on each occasion when premises are searched under a warrant, the warrant authorising the search on that occasion must be indorsed to show:

- 1208 (a) the date and time at which it was executed and, if present, the name of the occupier or if the occupier is not present the name of the person in charge of the premises<sup>3</sup>;
- 1209 (b) the names of the officers who executed it and any authorised persons who accompanied them<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1210 (c) whether a copy, together with a copy of the Notice of Powers and Rights, was handed to the occupier or indorsed<sup>5</sup> and left on the premises and, if so, where<sup>6</sup>.

A warrant must be returned to the appropriate person<sup>7</sup>:

- 1211 (i) when it has been executed<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1212 (ii) in the case of a specific premises warrant which has not been executed, or an all premises warrant, or any warrant authorising multiple entries, upon the expiry of the specified period of three months from the date of the warrant's issue or sooner<sup>9</sup>.

The appropriate person is: (A) if the warrant was issued by a justice of the peace<sup>10</sup>, the designated officer for the local justice area in which the justice was acting when he issued the warrant; and (B) if it was issued by a judge<sup>11</sup>, the appropriate officer of the court from which he issued it<sup>12</sup>.

A warrant which is so returned must be retained for 12 months from its return by the designated officer for the local justice area, if it was returned under head (i) above, and by the appropriate officer of the court, if it was returned under head (ii) above<sup>13</sup>.

If during the period for which a warrant is to be retained the occupier of premises<sup>14</sup> to which it relates asks to inspect it, he must be allowed to do so<sup>15</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(5) INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL PROVISION OF EVIDENCE/903. Assistance in obtaining evidence abroad.

(5) INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL PROVISION OF EVIDENCE

903. Assistance in obtaining evidence abroad.

If it appears to a judicial authority<sup>1</sup> in the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>: (1) that an offence has been committed or that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed; and (2) that proceedings in respect of the offence have been instituted or that the offence is being investigated, the judicial authority may request assistance<sup>3</sup> in obtaining outside the United Kingdom any evidence<sup>4</sup> specified in the request for use in the proceedings or investigation<sup>5</sup>.

A designated prosecuting authority<sup>6</sup> may itself request assistance under these provisions if: (a) it appears to the authority that an offence has been committed or that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed; and (b) the authority has instituted proceedings in respect of the offence in question or it is being investigated<sup>7</sup>.

A request for assistance may be sent to a court exercising jurisdiction in the place where the evidence is situated, or to any authority recognised by the government of the country in question as the appropriate authority for receiving requests of that kind<sup>8</sup>. Alternatively, if it is a request by a judicial authority or a designated prosecuting authority it may be sent to the Secretary of State for forwarding to the relevant court or authority<sup>9</sup>. In cases of urgency, a request for assistance may be sent to the International Criminal Police Organisation, or to any body or person competent to receive it under any provisions adopted under the Treaty on European Union, for forwarding to the relevant court or authority<sup>10</sup>.

Evidence obtained pursuant to a request for assistance<sup>11</sup> may not, without the consent of the appropriate overseas authority<sup>12</sup>, be used for any purpose other than that specified in the request<sup>13</sup>. When the evidence is no longer required for that purpose (or for any other purpose for which such consent has been obtained), it must be returned to the appropriate overseas authority, unless that authority indicates that it need not be returned<sup>14</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect<sup>15</sup>. If it appears to a judicial authority in the United Kingdom, on an application made by a constable<sup>16</sup>, that: (i) proceedings in respect of a listed offence have been instituted or such an offence is being investigated; (ii) there are reasonable grounds to believe that there is evidence in a participating country which satisfies the statutory requirements<sup>17</sup>; and (iii) a request has been made, or will be made, for the evidence to be sent to the authority making the request, then the judicial authority may make a domestic freezing order in respect of the evidence<sup>18</sup>. A domestic freezing order is an order for protecting evidence which is in the participating country pending its transfer to the United Kingdom<sup>19</sup>.

1 The judicial authorities are: (1) in relation to England and Wales, any judge or justice of the peace; (2) in relation to Northern Ireland, any judge or resident magistrate: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 7(4).

2 In relation to England and Wales and Northern Ireland, by a prosecuting authority; (2) where proceedings have been instituted, by the person charged in those proceedings: s 7(3). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

3 Ibid s 7(1); CrimPR 32.1-32.3.

4 'Evidence' for this purpose includes information in any form and articles, and giving evidence includes answering a question or producing any information or article: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 51(1).

5 Ibid s 7(2).

6 'Designated' means designated by an order made by the Secretary of State: ibid s 7(5). See the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 (Designation of Prosecuting Authorities) Order 2004, SI 2004/1034 (amended by SI 2004/1747; SI 2005/1130). As to the making of orders under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 Pt 1 (ss 1-51) (as amended) see PARA 917 note 14 post.

7 Ibid s 7(5). If a request for assistance is made in reliance on art 2 of the Protocol to the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention, established by Council Act of 16 October 2001 (2001/C326/01) (requests for information on banking transactions) in connection with the investigation of an offence, the request must state the grounds on which the person making the request considers the evidence specified in it to be relevant for the purposes of the investigation: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 7(7), 51(1). As to the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention see PARA 916 note 4 post.

8 Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 8(1).

9 Ibid s 8(2).

10 Ibid s 8(3).

11 Ibid s 9(1). Such requests are made under s 7: see the text and notes 1-7 supra.

12 For these purposes, the appropriate overseas authority means the authority recognised by the government of the country in question as the appropriate authority for receiving requests of the kind in question: ibid s 9(6).

13 Ibid s 9(2).

14 Ibid s 9(3).

15 The provisions of ibid ss 10-12 are to come into force on a day to be appointed by order under s 94. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

16 Ibid s 10(4). See note 15 supra. As to the judicial authorities see s 10(5); and see note 1 supra.

The Treasury may by order provide for any function conferred on a constable under ss 10, 11, 13-26 to be exercisable instead in prescribed circumstances by an officer of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs or a person acting under the direction of such an officer: see s 27(1)(b); the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7); and the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 (Exercise of Functions) Order 2005, SI 2005/425, arts 9-12. The Secretary of State may by order provide for any function conferred on a constable under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 13-26 (except s 16(2)(b), (4)(b)) to be exercisable instead in prescribed circumstances by a prescribed person: s 27(2)(b), (3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made.

17 The requirements are that the evidence: (1) is on premises specified in the application in the participating country; (2) is likely to be of substantial value (whether by itself or together with other evidence) to the proceedings or investigation; (3) is likely to be admissible in evidence at a trial for the offence; and (4) does not consist of or include items subject to legal privilege: ibid s 10(3). See note 15 supra.

18 Ibid s 10(1). As to the procedure for forwarding the freezing order see s 11. Freezing orders may be varied or revoked: see s 12. See note 15 supra.

19 Ibid s 10(2). See note 15 supra. As to overseas freezing orders see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 486.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(5) INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL PROVISION OF EVIDENCE/904. Assisting overseas authorities to obtain evidence.

904. Assisting overseas authorities to obtain evidence.

Where a request for assistance in obtaining evidence in a part of the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> is received by the territorial authority<sup>2</sup> for that part, the authority may, if specified conditions<sup>3</sup> are met, arrange for the evidence to be obtained<sup>4</sup>; or direct that a search warrant be applied for<sup>5</sup>. The request for assistance may be made only by: (1) a court exercising criminal jurisdiction, or a prosecuting authority, in a country outside the United Kingdom; (2) any other authority in such a country which appears to the territorial authority to have the function of making such requests for assistance; (3) any international authority<sup>6</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>7</sup> where an overseas freezing order<sup>8</sup> made by a court or authority in a participating country is received<sup>9</sup> by the territorial authority for the part of the United Kingdom in which the evidence to which the order relates is situated, the following provisions apply<sup>10</sup>.

In relation to England and Wales, the Secretary of State must<sup>11</sup>:

- 1213 (a) by a notice nominate a court in England and Wales to give effect to the overseas freezing order<sup>12</sup>;
- 1214 (b) send a copy of the overseas freezing order to the nominated court and to the chief officer of police for the area in which the evidence is situated<sup>13</sup>; and
- 1215 (c) tell the chief officer which court has been nominated<sup>14</sup>.

The nominated court is to consider the overseas freezing order on its own initiative within a period prescribed by rules of court<sup>15</sup>. Before giving effect to the freezing order the nominated court must give the chief officer of police an opportunity to be heard<sup>16</sup>. The court may decide not to give effect to the freezing order only if in its opinion one of the following conditions is met<sup>17</sup>. The first condition is that if the person whose conduct is in question were charged in the participating country with the offence to which the overseas freezing order relates or in the United Kingdom with a corresponding offence, he would be entitled to be discharged under any rule of law relating to previous acquittal or conviction<sup>18</sup>. The second condition is that giving effect to the overseas freezing order would be incompatible with any of the Convention rights<sup>19</sup>.

The nominated court is to give effect to the overseas freezing order by issuing a warrant authorising a constable to enter the premises to which the overseas freezing order relates and search the premises to the extent reasonably required for the purpose of discovering any evidence to which the order relates and to seize and retain any evidence for which he is authorised to search<sup>20</sup>. So far as the overseas freezing order relates to excluded material<sup>21</sup> or special procedure material<sup>22</sup> the court is to give effect to the order by making a production order<sup>23</sup>. The constable may take away any material produced to him under a production order<sup>24</sup>. Where a person fails to comply with a production order the court may<sup>25</sup> issue a warrant<sup>26</sup> in respect of the material to which the production order relates<sup>27</sup>.

The nominated court may postpone giving effect to an overseas freezing order in respect of any evidence in order to avoid prejudicing a criminal investigation which is taking place in the United Kingdom, or if, under an order made by a court in criminal proceedings in the United Kingdom, the evidence may not be removed from the United Kingdom<sup>28</sup>.

Any evidence seized by or produced to the constable<sup>29</sup> is to be retained by him until he is given a notice<sup>30</sup> or authorised to release it<sup>31</sup>. If the overseas freezing order was accompanied by a request for the evidence to be sent to a specified court or authority<sup>32</sup> or the territorial authority subsequently receives such a request, the territorial authority may by notice require the constable to send the evidence to the court or authority that made the request<sup>33</sup>.

On an application made by a specified person<sup>34</sup> the nominated court may authorise the release of any evidence retained by a constable<sup>35</sup> if in its opinion either of the conditions specified above is met or the overseas freezing order has ceased to have effect in the participating country<sup>36</sup>. If the territorial authority decides not to give a notice in respect of any evidence retained by a constable<sup>37</sup>, the authority must give the constable a notice authorising him to release the evidence<sup>38</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 The territorial authority in relation to evidence in England and Wales (or Northern Ireland), is the Secretary of State: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 28(9). The Treasury may by order provide for any function conferred on the Secretary of State (whether or not in terms) under ss 10, 11, 13-26 to be exercisable instead in prescribed circumstances by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs: see s 27(1)(a); the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7); and the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 (Exercise of Functions) Order 2005, SI 2005/425, arts 3-8. The Secretary of State may by order provide for any function conferred on him under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 13-26 to be exercisable instead in prescribed circumstances by a prescribed person: s 27(2)(a). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where the Secretary of State receives a request under s 13 for evidence to be obtained from a financial institution in connection with the investigation of an offence in reliance on the Protocol to the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention, established by Council Act of 16 October 2001 (2001/C326/01), art 2 (requests for information on banking transactions) (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 42(1)(b)), and the institution, or an employee of the institution, discloses the information that the request mentioned in s 42(1)(b) has been received (s 42(3)(a)), the information that the investigation to which the request relates is being carried out (s 42(3)(b)), or the information that, in pursuance of the request, information has been given to the authority which made the request (s 42(3)(c)), the institution or (as the case may be) the employee is guilty of an offence (s 42(2)). An institution guilty of this offence is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine (s 42(4)(b)), and on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (s 42(4)(a)); and any other person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both (s 42(5)(b)), and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both (s 42(5)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed the maximum term of imprisonment specified under s 42(5)(a) is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. For the meaning of 'financial institution' see PARA 814 note 1 ante. As to the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention see PARA 916 note 4 post.

3 Ie the conditions in the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 14: see PARA 905 post.

4 Ibid s 13(1)(a). As to the obtaining of evidence under s 15 see PARA 906 post.

5 Ibid s 13(1)(b). As to the power to obtain search warrants under or by virtue of s 16 or s 17 see PARA 907 post.

6 Ibid s 13(2). The international authorities are: (1) the International Criminal Police Organisation; (2) any other body or person competent to make a request of the kind to which s 13 applies under any provisions adopted under the Treaty on European Union (Maastricht, 7 February 1992; TS 12 (1994); Cm 2485): Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 13(3).

7 The provisions of ibid ss 20-25 (overseas freezing orders: see the text and notes 8-38 infra) are to be brought into force as from a day to be appointed by the Secretary of State by order made by statutory instrument under s 94(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Ie an order for protecting, pending its transfer to the participating country, evidence which is in the United Kingdom and may be used in any proceedings or investigation in the participating country and in respect of which the following requirements (ie those of ibid s 20(3)-(7)) are met: s 20(2). See note 7 supra.

The order must have been made by: (1) a court exercising criminal jurisdiction in the country; (2) a prosecuting authority in the country; (3) any other authority in the country which appears to the territorial authority to have the function of making such orders: s 20(3). The order must relate to: (a) criminal proceedings instituted in the participating country in respect of a listed offence; (b) a criminal investigation being carried on there into such an offence: s 20(4). The order must be accompanied by a certificate which gives the specified information, but a certificate may be treated as giving any specified information which is not given in it if the territorial authority has the information in question: s 20(5). The certificate must: (i) be signed by or on behalf of the court or authority which made or confirmed the order; (ii) include a statement as to the accuracy of the information given in it; (iii) if it is not in English, include a translation of it into English, or if appropriate, Welsh: see s 20(6). The signature may be an electronic signature: see s 20(6). The order must be accompanied by a request for the evidence to be sent to a court or authority mentioned in s 13(2) (see heads (1)-(3) in the text) unless the certificate indicates when such a request is expected to be made: s 20(7). References to an overseas freezing order include its accompanying certificate: s 20(8). As to domestic freezing orders see s 10 (not yet in force); and PARA 903 ante.

905. Powers to arrange for evidence to be obtained.

The territorial authority<sup>1</sup> may arrange for evidence to be obtained<sup>2</sup> if the request for assistance in obtaining the evidence is made in connection with: (1) criminal proceedings or a criminal investigation, being carried on outside the United Kingdom<sup>3</sup>; (2) administrative proceedings, or an investigation into an act punishable in such proceedings, being carried on there; (3) clemency proceedings, or proceedings on an appeal before a court against a decision in administrative proceedings, being carried on, or intended to be carried on, there<sup>4</sup>. In a case within head (1) or head (2) above, the authority may arrange for the evidence to be so obtained only if the authority is satisfied: (a) that an offence under the law of the country in question has been committed or that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that such an offence has been committed; and (b) that proceedings in respect of the offence have been instituted in that country or that an investigation into the offence is being carried on there<sup>5</sup>.

The territorial authority is to regard as conclusive a certificate as to the matters mentioned in heads (a) and (b) above issued by any authority in the country in question which appears to be the appropriate authority to do so<sup>6</sup>. If it appears to the territorial authority that the request for assistance relates to a fiscal offence in respect of which proceedings have not yet been instituted, the authority may not arrange for the evidence to be so obtained unless: (i) the request is from a country which is a member of the Commonwealth or is made pursuant to a treaty to which the United Kingdom is a party; or (ii) the authority is satisfied that if the conduct constituting the offence were to occur in a part of the United Kingdom, it would constitute an offence in that part<sup>7</sup>.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(5) INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL PROVISION OF EVIDENCE/907. Extension of statutory search powers and issue of warrants.

907. Extension of statutory search powers and issue of warrants.

The powers of entry, search and seizure under Part 2 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> are extended so as to apply in relation to any conduct which: (1) constitutes an offence under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>; and (2) would, if it occurred in England and Wales, constitute an indictable offence<sup>3</sup>.

A justice of the peace may issue a warrant<sup>4</sup> if he is satisfied, on an application made by a constable, that<sup>5</sup>: (a) criminal proceedings have been instituted against a person in a country outside the United Kingdom or a person has been arrested in the course of a criminal investigation carried on there<sup>6</sup>; (b) the conduct constituting the offence which is the subject of the proceedings or investigation would, if it occurred in England and Wales, constitute an indictable offence<sup>7</sup>; and (c) there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that there is on premises<sup>8</sup> in England and Wales occupied or controlled by that person evidence relating to the offence<sup>9</sup>.

Such a warrant may authorise a constable: (i) to enter the premises in question and search the premises to the extent reasonably required for the purpose of discovering any evidence relating to the offence; (ii) to seize and retain any evidence for which he is authorised to search<sup>10</sup>. Any evidence seized by a constable<sup>11</sup> is to be sent to the court or authority which made the request for assistance or to the territorial authority for forwarding to that court or authority<sup>12</sup>. So far as may be necessary in order to comply with the request for assistance, where the evidence consists of a document, the original or a copy is to be sent, and where the evidence consists of any other article, the article itself or a description, photograph or other representation of it is to be sent<sup>13</sup>.

907A Serious crime prevention orders.

1. General

The High Court in England and Wales may make an order if (1) it is satisfied that a person has been involved in serious crime (whether in England and Wales or elsewhere: see further Serious Crime Act 2007 s 2(4)-(7)); and (2) it has reasonable grounds to believe that the order would protect the public by preventing, restricting or disrupting involvement by the person in serious crime in England and Wales; and such an order may contain (a) such prohibitions, restrictions or requirements; and (b) such other terms as the court considers appropriate for the purpose of protecting the public by preventing, restricting or disrupting involvement by the person concerned in serious crime in England and Wales: see Serious Crime Act 2007 s 1. 'The public' includes a section of the public or a particular member of the public: s 42. The powers of the court in respect of an order under s 1 are subject to ss 6-15 (safeguards: see PARAS 907A.2, 907A.3).

For the purposes of the Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 1 (ss 1-43), a person has been involved in serious crime in England and Wales if he (i) has committed a serious offence in England and Wales; (ii) has facilitated the commission by another person of a serious offence in England and Wales; or (iii) has conducted himself in a way that was likely to facilitate the commission by himself or another person of a serious offence in England and Wales (whether or not such an offence was committed): s 2(1). 'Conduct' includes omissions and statements: s 42. In Pt 1 'a serious offence in England and Wales' means an offence under the law of England and Wales which, at the time when the court is considering the application or matter in question (A) is specified, or falls within a description specified, in Sch 1 Pt 1; or (B) is one which, in the particular circumstances of the case, the court considers to be sufficiently serious to be treated for the purposes of the application or matter as if it were so specified: s 2(2). For the purposes of Pt 1, involvement in serious crime in England and Wales is any one or more of the following (aa) the commission of a serious offence in England and Wales; (bb) conduct which facilitates the commission by another person of a serious offence in England and Wales; (cc) conduct which is likely to facilitate the commission, by the person whose conduct it is or another person, of a serious offence in England and Wales (whether or not such an offence is committed): s 2(3).

As to applications for and relating to serious crime prevention orders see CPR Pt 77 (added by SI 2007/3543).

Supplementary provision is made with respect to the involvement in serious crime (Serious Crime Act 2007 s 4) and examples of the type of provision that may be made by a serious crime prevention order are set out (s 5).

2. General safeguards in relation to orders

An individual under the age of 18 may not be the subject of a serious crime prevention order: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 6. A person may not be the subject of a serious crime prevention order if the person falls within a description specified by order of the Secretary of State: s 7. A serious crime prevention order may be made only on an application by (1) the Director of Public Prosecutions; (2) the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions; or (3) the Director of the Serious Fraud Office: s 8. A safeguard is provided where the making, variation or discharge of an order or not making a variation to an order or discharging it would be likely to have a significant adverse effect on someone who is not the subject of the order; the court has the power to allow such persons to make representations at the hearing in relation to the making, variation or discharge of an order: s 9. Provision is also made to ensure that the subject of the serious crime prevention order has notice of its existence: s 10. See further CPR 77.2 and CPR 77.3 (added by SI 2007/3543).

3. Information safeguards

A serious crime prevention order may not require a person to answer questions, or provide information, orally: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 11. A serious crime prevention order may not require a person (1) to answer any privileged question; (2) to provide any privileged information; or (3) to produce any privileged document; but this does not prevent an order from requiring a lawyer to provide the name and address of a client of his: s 12. Restrictions are placed on the extent to which an order can require the production of excluded material and banking information: s 13. A serious crime prevention order may not require a person (a) to answer any question; (b) to provide any information; or (c) to produce any document; if the disclosure concerned is prohibited under any other enactment: s 14. A statement made by a person in response to a requirement imposed by a serious crime prevention order may not be used in evidence against him in any criminal proceedings unless condition A or B is met: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 15(1). Condition A is that the criminal proceedings relate to an offence under s 25 (see PARA 907A.7): s 15(2). Condition B is that (i) the criminal proceedings relate to another offence; (ii) the person who made the statement gives evidence in the criminal proceedings; (iii) in the course of that evidence, the person makes a statement which is inconsistent with the statement made in response to the requirement imposed by the order; and (iv) in the criminal proceedings evidence relating to the statement made in response to the requirement imposed by the order is adduced, or a question about it is asked, by the person or on his behalf: s 15(3).

4. Duration, variation and discharge of orders

A serious crime prevention order (1) must specify when it is to come into force and when it is to cease to be in force, (2) is not to be in force for more than five years beginning with the coming into force of the order and (3) can specify different times for the coming into force, or ceasing to be in force, of different provisions of the order: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 16. An order may be varied either on application by the relevant application authority (for which see s 10(4)), by the subject of the order or by a third party: s 17. Similarly, an order may be discharged either on application by the relevant application authority, by the subject of the order or by a third party: s 18. See further CPR 77.3 and CPR 77.4 (added by SI 2007/3543).

5. Extension of jurisdiction to Crown Court

Where the Crown Court in England and Wales is dealing with a person who (1) has been convicted by or before a magistrates' court of having committed a serious offence in England and Wales and has been committed to the Crown Court to be dealt with; or (2) has been convicted by or before the Crown Court of having committed a serious offence in England and Wales, the Crown Court may, in addition to dealing with the person in relation to the offence, make an order if it has reasonable grounds to believe that the order would protect the public by preventing, restricting or disrupting involvement by the person in serious crime in England and Wales: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 19(1), (2). For the meaning of 'the public' see PARA 907A.1. Such an order may contain (a) such prohibitions, restrictions or requirements; and (b) such other terms as the court considers appropriate for the purpose of protecting the public by preventing, restricting or disrupting involvement by the person concerned in serious crime in England and Wales: s 19(5). The powers of the court in respect of an order under s 19 are subject to ss 6-15 (safeguards: see PARAS 907A.2, 907A.3): s 19(6). An order must not be made under s 19 except (i) in addition to a sentence imposed in respect of the offence concerned; or (ii) in addition to an order discharging the person conditionally: s 19(7). An order under s 19 is also called a serious crime prevention order: s 19(8). See R v Hancox [2010] EWCA Crim 102, [2010] All ER (D) 41 (Feb).

Provision is made for the two cases in which the Crown Court can vary the terms of a serious crime prevention order, namely on the conviction for a serious offence of a person already subject to an order (Serious Crime Act 2007 s 20), or the conviction of a person for breach of an order (s 21). The fact that a serious crime prevention order has been made or varied by the High Court does not prevent it from being varied by the Crown Court in accordance with Pt 1 (ss 1-43); and the fact that a serious crime prevention order has been made or varied by the Crown Court does not prevent it from being varied or discharged by the High Court in accordance with Pt 1: s 22(1), (2). A refusal by the Crown Court to make or vary an order does not preclude an application to the High Court to make or vary an order in relation to the same offence: s 22(3), (4).

6. Appeals

An appeal may be made to the Court of Appeal in relation to a decision of the High Court (1) to make a serious crime prevention order; (2) to vary, or not to vary, such an order; or (3) to discharge or not to discharge such an order by any person who was given an opportunity to make representations in the proceedings concerned by virtue of the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 9 (see PARA 907A.2); and this is without prejudice to the rights of other persons to make appeals, by virtue of the Senior Courts Act 1981 s 16, in relation to any judgments or orders of the High Court about serious crime prevention orders: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 23. Detailed provision is also made relating to the rights of appeal against a decision of the Crown Court: s 24. See also Serious Crime Act 2007 (Appeals under Section 24) Order 2008, SI 2008/1863.

7. Enforcement

A person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a serious crime prevention order commits an offence: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 25(1). A person who commits an offence under s 25 is liable (1) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both: s 25(2). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. In proceedings for an offence under s 25, a copy of the original order or any variation of it, certified as such by the proper officer of the court which made it, is admissible as evidence of its having been made and of its contents to the same extent that oral evidence of those things is admissible in those proceedings: s 25(4).

The court before which a person is convicted of an offence under s 25 may order the forfeiture of anything in his possession at the time of the offence which the court considers to have been involved in the offence: s 26.

The Director of Public Prosecutions, the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions or the Director of the Serious Fraud Office may present a petition to the court for the winding up of a company, partnership or relevant body if (a) the company, partnership or relevant body has been convicted of an offence under s 25 in relation to a serious crime prevention order; and (b) the Director concerned considers that it would be in the public interest for the company, partnership or (as the case may be) relevant body to be wound up: s 27 (amended by SI 2009/1941). Supplementary provision relating to the power to wind up companies is made: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 29.

8. Particular types of persons

Provision is made with respect to the application of serious crime prevention order provisions to particular types of persons, namely bodies corporate including limited liability partnerships (Serious Crime Act 2007 s 30); other partnerships (s 31); unincorporated associations (s 32); overseas bodies (s 33); and providers of information society services (s 34).

9. Supplementary

Proceedings before the High Court in relation to serious crime prevention orders are civil proceedings; one consequence of this is that the standard of proof to be applied by the court in such proceedings is the civil standard of proof: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 35. Proceedings before the Crown Court arising by virtue of s 19, 20 or 21 (see PARA 907A.5) are civil proceedings; one consequence of this is that the standard of proof to be applied by the court in such proceedings is the civil standard of proof and two other consequences of this are that the court (1) is not restricted to considering evidence that would have been admissible in the criminal proceedings in which the person concerned was convicted; and (2) may adjourn any proceedings in relation to a serious crime prevention order even after sentencing the person concerned: s 36.

The functions of the Director of Public Prosecutions, the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions and the Director of the Serious Fraud Office under Pt 1 (ss 1-43) are set out: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 37, Sch 2.

A person who complies with a requirement imposed by a serious crime prevention order to answer questions, provide information or produce documents does not breach (a) any obligation of confidence; or (b) any other restriction on making the disclosure concerned (however imposed); but see ss 11-14 (PARA 907A.3) (which limit the requirements that may be imposed by serious crime prevention orders in connection with answering questions, providing information or producing documents): s 38.

A serious crime prevention order against a body corporate, partnership or unincorporated association may authorise a law enforcement agency to enter into arrangements with (i) a specified person; or (ii) any person who falls within a specified description of persons to perform specified monitoring services or monitoring services of a specified description: s 39. Provision is also made with respect to costs in relation to authorised monitors: s 40.

Law enforcement officers are provided with powers to take copies of and retain documents: s 41.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(5) INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION AND MUTUAL PROVISION OF EVIDENCE/907B Violent offender orders.

907B Violent offender orders.

The Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) provides for a new civil order, a violent offender order, which is designed to protect the public from the current risk of serious violent harm posed by a qualifying offender. For transitional provisions and savings see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 27 paras 31, 32.

1. General

A violent offender order is an order made in respect of a qualifying offender which (1) contains such prohibitions, restrictions or conditions authorised by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 102 (see PARA 907B.3) as the court making the order considers necessary for the purpose of protecting the public from the risk of serious violent harm caused by the offender, and (2) has effect for such period of not less than two, nor more than five, years as is specified in the order (unless renewed or discharged under the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 103 (see PARA 907B.3)): Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 98(1). 'Qualifying offender' has the meaning given by the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 99(1) (see PARA 907B.2): Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 117(1). 'The offender', in relation to a violent offender order or an interim violent offender order, means the person in respect of whom the order is made: s 117(1). 'Interim violent offender order' means an order made under the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 104 (see PARA 907B.3); s 117(1). For the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) any reference to protecting the public from the risk of serious violent harm caused by a person is a reference to protecting (a) the public in the United Kingdom, or (b) any particular members of the public in the United Kingdom, from a current risk of serious physical or psychological harm caused by that person committing one or more specified offences s 98(2). In Pt 7 'specified offence' means (i) manslaughter; (ii) an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 4 (soliciting murder); (iii) an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 (wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm); (iv) an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 20 (malicious wounding); (v) attempting to commit murder or conspiracy to commit murder; or (vi) a relevant service offence (see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 98(4), (5)): s 98(3).

2. Qualifying offenders

In the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Pt 7 (ss 98-117) 'qualifying offender' means a person aged 18 or over who is within the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 99(2) or (4): s 99(1). A person is within s 99(2) if (whether before or after the commencement of Pt 7 (ie 3 August 2009: see SI 2009/1842)) (1) the person has been convicted of a specified offence and either a custodial sentence of at least 12 months was imposed for the offence, or a hospital order was made in respect of it (with or without a restriction order), (2) the person has been found not guilty of a specified offence by reason of insanity and the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 99(3) applies, or (3) the person has been found to be under a disability and to have done the act charged in respect of a specified offence and s 99(3) applies: s 99(2). For the meaning of 'specified offence' see PARA 907B.1. For the meaning of 'custodial sentence',

'hospital order' and 'restriction order' see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 117(1), (2). Section 99(3) applies in the case of a person head (2) or (3) if the court made in respect of the offence (a) a hospital order (with or without a restriction order), or (b) a supervision order: s 99(3). For the meaning of 'supervision order' see s 117(1). A person is within s 99(4) if, under the law in force in a country outside England and Wales (and whether before or after the commencement of Pt 7) (i) the person has been convicted of a relevant offence and either (A) a sentence of imprisonment or other detention for at least 12 months was imposed for the offence, or (B) an order equivalent to that mentioned in head (a) was made in respect of it, (ii) a court exercising jurisdiction under that law has made in respect of a relevant offence a finding equivalent to a finding that the person was not guilty by reason of insanity, and has made in respect of the offence an order equivalent to one mentioned in s 99(3), or (iii) such a court has, in respect of a relevant offence, made a finding equivalent to a finding that the person was under a disability and did the act charged in respect of the offence, and has made in respect of the offence an order equivalent to one mentioned in s 99(3): s 99(4). 'Country' includes territory: s 117(1). As to 'relevant offence' for these purposes see s 99(5)-(8).

3. Applications for and making of violent offender orders

Provision is made setting out who may apply for a violent offender order to be made, and in what circumstances: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 100. As to violent offender orders generally see PARA 907B.1. The conditions which must be met before a court can make a violent offender order are set out: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 101. A violent offender order may contain prohibitions, restrictions or conditions preventing the offender (1) from going to any specified premises or any other specified place (whether at all, or at or between any specified time or times); (2) from attending any specified event; (3) from having any, or any specified description of, contact with any specified individual: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 102. For the meaning of 'the offender' see PARA 907B.1. The offender subject to a violent offender order or various specified chief officers of police may apply for an order to be varied, renewed or discharged, subject to the five year maximum limit: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 103. The court may make an interim order when an application for a violent offender order is made (or has been made) under s 100: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 104. As to provision for the form in which applications for violent offender orders and interim violent offender orders must be made see the Magistrates' Courts (Violent Offender Orders) Rules 2009, SI 2009/2197. Provision is made with respect to notice of applications: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 105. Appeals may be made to the Crown Court against the making of a violent offender order or an interim order, or against a decision to make or refuse an order varying or discharging a violent offender order or an interim order: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 106.

4. Notification requirements

All offenders subject to full or interim violent offender orders (see PARA 907B.1) will also be subject to notification requirements: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 107. The information the offender needs to supply to the police when he or she first makes a notification and the timescales within which he or she is required to provide that information are set out: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 108. For the meaning of 'the offender' see PARA 907B.1. The requirements on a relevant offender to notify the police when there are changes to his notified details are set out: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 109. An offender must re-notify the police of the details set out in s 108 within a defined period of each notification date, unless during this period he re-notifies, because of a change of circumstances, under s 109: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 110. The Secretary of State may make regulations setting out notification requirements for relevant offenders who travel outside the United Kingdom: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 111. See the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 (Violent Offender Orders) (Notification Requirements) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2019, which relate to determination of proposed point of arrival (reg 3); notification to be given before leaving the United Kingdom (reg 4); additional information to be disclosed (reg 5); timing of a notification (reg 6); change to information disclosed in a notification (reg 7); notification to be given on return to the United Kingdom (reg 8); information to be disclosed in a notification (reg 9); giving a notification (reg 10); and frequency of notification under the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 110 (SI 2009/2019 reg 11). Provision is made with respect to the method of notification: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 112.

5. Supplementary

The failure, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any prohibition, restriction or condition of a full or interim violent offender order (see PARA 907B.1) is a criminal offence; and a failure to comply with a notification requirement, without reasonable excuse, is also an offence: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 113. Provision is made as to the supply of information to the Secretary of State (see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 114) and the supply of information by the Secretary of State (see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 115). The Secretary of State may make regulations requiring those who are responsible for an offender while he is being detained (ie serving a sentence of imprisonment or a term of service detention, or detained in a hospital) to notify other relevant authorities of the fact that they have become so responsible, of his release or transfer to another institution: see Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 116. 'Service detention' has the meaning given by the Armed Forces Act 2006 s 374: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 117(1).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(1) CODES OF PRACTICE/908. Codes of practice.

13. ARREST AND DETENTION

(1) CODES OF PRACTICE

908. Codes of practice.

A constable's powers relating to the arrest, detention, treatment and questioning of persons, and to identification procedures, are governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and by the following codes of practice: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers<sup>2</sup>; Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers<sup>3</sup>; Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects; Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects; and Code G: Code of Practice for the Statutory Power of Arrest by Police Officers<sup>4</sup>. These codes apply to any arrest made by a police officer after midnight on 31 December 2005<sup>5</sup>, to identification procedures and interviews carried out after midnight on 31 December 2005<sup>6</sup>, and to persons in police detention after midnight on 24 July 2006<sup>7</sup>; and, except in the case of identification procedures, they apply to procedures and periods of detention notwithstanding that such procedures or periods of detention may have commenced before that time<sup>8</sup>. Codes D, E, F, G came into operation on 1 January 2006, and Code C came into operation on 25 July 2006<sup>9</sup>.

Whenever Code C requires a person to be given certain information, he does not have to be given it if at the time he is incapable of understanding what is said to him, is violent or may become violent, or is in urgent need of medical attention, but he must be given it as soon as practicable<sup>10</sup>. Code C applies<sup>11</sup> to persons in custody at police stations whether or not they have been arrested<sup>12</sup>, and to those removed to a police station as a place of safety under the legislation relating to mental health<sup>13</sup>; persons detained under the legislation relating to terrorism<sup>14</sup> are not, however, subject to any part of Code C<sup>15</sup>.

1     le the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pts III-V (ss 24-65) (as amended): see PARA 909 et seq post.

Nothing in Pt IV (ss 34-52) (as amended) (detention) affects:

- 337   (1)   the powers conferred on immigration officers by the Immigration Act 1971 s 4, Sch 2 (as amended) (administrative provisions as to control on entry etc: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 140 et seq) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 51(a));
- 338   (2)   the powers conferred by or by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41, Sch 7 (powers of arrest and detention and control of entry and procedure for removal: see PARA 430 et seq ante) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 51(b) (substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (4)));
- 339   (3)   any duty of a police officer under the Army Act 1955 ss 129, 190, 202 (as amended) or the Air Force Act 1955 ss 129, 190, 202 (as amended) (duties of governors of prisons and others to receive prisoners, deserters, absentees and persons under escort: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 515; PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 638) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 51(c)(i), (ii));

- 340 (4) any duty of a police officer under the Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 107 (duties of governors of civil prisons etc: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 478; PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 638) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 51(c)(iii)); or
- 341 (5) any right of a person in police detention to apply for a writ of habeas corpus or other prerogative remedy (s 51(d)).

2 A reference to a police officer in Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers includes a designated person acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by his designation (Code C para 1.13(b)); a 'designated person' is a person other than a police officer designated under the Police Reform Act 2002 Pt 4 (ss 38-77) (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) who has specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on him (Code C para 1.13(a)).

The provisions of Code C do not apply to persons in custody:

- 342 (1) arrested on warrants issued in Scotland by officers under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 136(2) (as amended) (see PARA 921 post), or arrested or detained without warrant by officers from a police force in Scotland under s 137(2) (see PARA 928 post); in these cases, police powers and duties and the person's rights and entitlements whilst at a police station in England or Wales are the same as those in Scotland (Code C para 1.12(i));
- 343 (2) arrested under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 142(3) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 150) in order to have their fingerprints taken (Code C para 1.12(ii));
- 344 (3) whose detention is authorised by an immigration officer under the Immigration Act 1971 (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156 et seq) (Code C para 1.12(iii));
- 345 (4) who are convicted or remanded prisoners held in police cells on behalf of the Prison Service under the Imprisonment (Temporary Provisions) Act 1980 (see PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 538) (Code C para 1.12(iv));
- 346 (5) detained for searches under stop and search powers except as required by Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search (see PARA 859 et seq ante) (Code C para 1.12(vi)).

Special provision in connection with the detention, treatment and questioning of terror suspects corresponding to that made by Code C is made by Code H: Code of Practice in connection with the Detention, Treatment and Questioning by Police Officers of Persons under Section 41 of, and Schedule 8 to, the Terrorism Act 2000: see PARA 421 et seq ante.

Nothing in Code C prevents a custody officer, or other officer given custody of a detainee, from allowing police staff who are not designated persons to carry out individual procedures or tasks at the police station if the law allows: Code C para 1.15. However, the officer remains responsible for making sure the procedures and tasks are carried out correctly in accordance with the codes of practice. Any such person must be:

- 347 (a) a person employed by a police authority maintaining a police force and under the control and direction of the chief officer of that force (Code C para 1.15(a));
- 348 (b) a person employed by a person with whom a police authority has a contract for the provision of services relating to persons arrested or otherwise in custody (Code C para 1.15(b)).

As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

3 Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers concerns the principal methods used by police to identify persons in connection with the investigation of offences and the keeping of accurate and reliable criminal records: Code D para 1.1.

4 Code G: Code of Practice for the Statutory Power of Arrest by Police Officers deals with statutory police powers to arrest persons suspected of involvement in a criminal offence: Code G para 1.1(b).

The codes must be readily available at all police stations for consultation by police officers, police staff, detained persons and members of the public: see Code C para 1.2; Code D para 2.1; Code E para 1.1; Code F para 1.1; Code G para 1.5. The notes for guidance included in the codes are not provisions of the codes (Code C para 1.3; Code D para 2.2; Code E para 1.2; Code F para 1.2; Code G para 1.6). Provisions in the Annexes to Code C and Code D are provisions of the code: Code C para 1.3; Code D para 2.2.

908 Codes of practice

NOTE 1--Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 51(c) repealed: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 17.

NOTE 9--Revised Codes of Practice C, D and E came into operation on 1 February 2008: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2008, SI 2008/167.

(2) VOLUNTARY ATTENDANCE AT POLICE STATION

909. Voluntary attendance at police station.

Where for the purpose of assisting with an investigation a person attends voluntarily at a police station or at any other place where a constable<sup>1</sup> is present or accompanies a constable to a police station or any such other place without having been arrested<sup>2</sup> he is entitled to leave at will unless he is placed under arrest<sup>3</sup> and he must be informed at once that he is under arrest if a decision is taken by a constable to prevent him from leaving at will<sup>4</sup>. If he is so informed, he should be brought as soon as practicable before the custody officer, who is responsible for making sure that he is notified of his rights in the same way as other detainees<sup>5</sup>; and, if he is not placed under arrest but is cautioned<sup>6</sup>, the officer who gives the caution must at the same time inform him that he is not under arrest, that he is not obliged to remain at the police station but that, if he remains at the police station, he may obtain legal advice if he wishes<sup>7</sup>. He must be told that the right to legal advice includes the right to speak with a solicitor on the telephone and he must be asked if he wants to do so<sup>8</sup>.

1 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

2 Although certain sections of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see eg Code C para 9; and PARA 958 post) apply specifically to persons in custody at police stations, those there voluntarily to assist with an investigation should be treated with no less consideration, eg they should be offered refreshments at appropriate times, and they enjoy an absolute right to obtain legal advice or communicate with any person outside the police station: Code C Guidance note 1A.

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 29(a); Code C para 3.21. Code C does not affect the principle that all citizens have a duty to help police officers to prevent crime and discover offenders. This is a civic rather than a legal duty; but when a police officer is trying to discover whether, or by whom, an offence has been committed he is entitled to question any person from whom he thinks useful information can be obtained, subject to the restrictions imposed by Code C. A person's declaration that he is unwilling to reply does not alter this entitlement: Code C Guidance note 1K.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 29(b); Code C para 3.21.

6 Ie under Code C para 10: see PARA 959 post.

7 Code C para 3.21. If a person who is attending a police station voluntarily asks about his entitlement to legal advice, he must be given a copy of the notice explaining the arrangements for obtaining legal advice: Code C para 3.22. As to the notice see Code C para 3.2; and PARA 948 post.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(i) In general/910. Meaning of 'arrest'.

(3) ARREST

(i) In general

910. Meaning of 'arrest'.

Arrest<sup>1</sup> consists in the seizure or touching of a person's body with a view to his restraint; words may, however, amount to arrest if, in the circumstances of the case, they are calculated to bring, and do bring, to a person's notice that he is under compulsion and he thereafter submits to the compulsion<sup>2</sup>.

An arrest may be effected with or without a warrant<sup>3</sup>.

1 There is nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to indicate that those acts which served to effect an arrest at common law have either been changed or abolished: R v Brosch [1988] Crim LR 743, CA. Whether an arrest once made is to be treated as valid or not is a separate matter and is addressed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28 (see PARA 931 post): R v Brosch supra. As to voluntary attendance at a police station see PARA 909 ante.

2 Alderson v Booth [1969] 2 QB 216, 53 Cr App Rep 301, DC. Whether on the facts of a particular case it has been made clear to a person that he is under arrest is a matter of fact for the jury: see R v Inwood [1973] 2 All ER 645, 57 Cr App Rep 529, CA.

3 As to arrest with warrant see PARA 918 et seq post; and as to arrest without warrant see PARA 924 et seq post.

911. Privilege from arrest.

No person, except the Queen<sup>1</sup>, a foreign head of state<sup>2</sup> and, in certain circumstances, a foreign ambassador<sup>3</sup>, is privileged from arrest on a criminal charge<sup>4</sup>.

No place affords any protection from arrest<sup>5</sup>.

1 See PARA 41 ante.

2 See PARA 43 ante.

3 See PARA 42 ante.

4 Members of Parliament are not privileged from criminal process (see Wellesley v Duke of Beaufort (1831) 2 Russ & M 639); nor are advocates, witnesses etc (see Re Freston (1883) 11 QBD 545, CA; Ex p Lyne (1822) 3 Stark 132).

5 The privilege of sanctuary was abolished by 21 Jac 1 (Continuance of Acts) (1623-24) s 7 (repealed). See also Erskine May Parliamentary Practice (23rd Edn, 2004) p 119-121; and PARLIAMENT vol 78 (2010) PARA 1085.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/912. Issue of summons to defendant or warrant of arrest.

(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions

912. Issue of summons to defendant or warrant of arrest.

On an information<sup>1</sup> being laid before a justice of the peace that a person has, or is suspected of having, committed an offence, the justice may issue:

- 1216 (1) a summons directed to that person requiring him to appear before a magistrates' court to answer the information<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1217 (2) a warrant to arrest that person and bring him before a magistrates' court<sup>3</sup>.

No warrant may be so issued unless the information is in writing<sup>4</sup>; nor may a warrant be issued for the arrest of any person who has attained the age of 18 unless the offence to which the warrant relates is an indictable offence<sup>5</sup> or is punishable with imprisonment<sup>6</sup> or the person's address is not sufficiently established for a summons to be served on him<sup>7</sup>. Where the offence charged is an indictable offence, a warrant may be issued at any time notwithstanding that a summons<sup>8</sup> has previously been issued<sup>9</sup>.

A warrant or summons issued by a justice of the peace does not cease to have effect by reason of his death or his ceasing to be a justice of the peace<sup>10</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> An information is a statement by which a justice of the peace is informed of an alleged offence (R v Hughes (1879) 4 QBD 614 at 633, CCR, per Huddleston B) and may be laid by the prosecutor, in person, or by his solicitor or counsel or other person authorised in that behalf (CrimPR 7.1). Failure to name the police officer laying the information does not invalidate it where it is clear that a police officer has laid the information and that officer's identity is easily ascertainable: Rubin v DPP [1990] QB 80, 89 Cr App Rep 44, DC. Subject to any provision of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and any other enactment, an information need not be in writing or on oath: CrimPR 7.2.

An information, other than one substantiated on oath, may be laid before the justices' clerk: Justices' Clerks Rules 2005, SI 2005/545, r 2, Schedule para 1. An information, other than one substantiated on oath, may also be laid before an assistant clerk, provided that that person has been specifically authorised by the justices' clerk for this purpose: r 3(1), Schedule para 1.

Generally speaking, any person may lay the information and make the charge before a justice of the peace, except where a statutory provision restricts the power of making a charge to certain persons, or makes the consent or order of some person a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings: R v Kennedy (1902) 86 LT 753; R v Granatelli (1849) 7 State Tr NS 979; and see also PARAS 1071-1072 post. As from a day to be appointed, however, a public prosecutor does not have the power to lay an information for the purpose of obtaining the issue of a summons under these provisions: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(4). Sections 29, 30 are to be brought into force as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. 'Public prosecutor' means: (1) a police force or a person authorised by a police force to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(a)); (2) the Director of the Serious Fraud Office or a person authorised by him to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(b)); (3) the Director of Public Prosecutions or a person authorised by him to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(c)); (4) the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions or a person authorised by him to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(ca) (added by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(6), Sch 4 para 130)); (5) the Director General of the Serious Organised Crime Agency or a person authorised by him to institute criminal proceedings (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(5)(cb) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 para 196)); (6) the Attorney General or a person authorised by him to institute criminal proceedings (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(5)(d)); (7) a Secretary of State or a person authorised by a Secretary of State to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(e)); (8) the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs or a person authorised by them to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(f), (g); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (7)); or (9) a person specified in an order made by the Secretary of State for these purposes or a person authorised by such a person to institute criminal proceedings (s 29(5)(h)). At the date at which this volume states the law no order had been made for the purposes of s 29(5)(h) (see head (9) supra). 'Police force' in head (1) supra has the meaning given by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(3) (see PARA 1080 note 5 post): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(6). As to the institution of criminal proceedings by a public prosecutor see PARA 915 post. Nothing in s 29 (as amended) affects: (a) the power of a public prosecutor to lay an information for the purpose of obtaining the issue of a warrant under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(4)(a)); (b) the power of a person who is not a public prosecutor to lay an information for the purpose of obtaining the issue of a summons or warrant under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) (Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(4)(b)); or (c) any power to charge a person with an offence whilst he is in custody (s 30(4)(c)).

2 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(1)(a) (s 1(1) substituted by the Courts Act 2003 s 43(1)). A justice of the peace may issue a summons or warrant under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) upon an information being laid before him notwithstanding any enactment requiring the information to be laid before two or more justices: s 1(7). A warrant is not normally issued if a summons will effect the purpose: O'Brien v Brabner (1885) 49 JP Jo 227; Dumbell v Roberts [1944] 1 All ER 326, CA.

Although a proposed defendant to a summons has no locus standi to be heard, when a justice of the peace considers an application for the issue of a summons against him, the justice may, in exercising his discretion whether to issue the summons, hear representations from the proposed defendant if he considers it necessary to do so in order to reach a decision on the issue of the summons: see R v West London Justices, ex p Klahn [1979] 2 All ER 221, [1979] 1 WLR 933, DC; and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 687.

3 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). A warrant of arrest must require the persons to whom it is directed to arrest the relevant person: CrimPR 18.5.

4 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 31(1), 332, Sch 7 Pt 12). As from a day to be appointed it is instead provided that no warrant may be so issued upon an information being laid unless the information is in writing: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(3) (as so amended; prospectively further amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 paras 7, 8(1), (2)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 See PARA 1102 post.

6 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(4)(a) (s 1(4) amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 68, Sch 8 para 6(1)(a)).

7 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(4)(b) (as amended: see note 6 supra). As from a day to be appointed the grounds upon which a warrant may be issued for the arrest of any person who has attained the age of 18 also include the ground that his address is not sufficiently established for a written charge or requisition to be served on him: s 1(4)(b) (as so amended; prospectively further amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 36 para 8(3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Or, as from a day to be appointed, a written charge or requisition: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(6) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 36 para 8(4)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where the offence charged is an indictable offence and a written charge and requisition have previously been issued, a warrant may be issued under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) by a justice of the peace upon a copy of the written charge (rather than an information) being laid before the justice by a public prosecutor (s 1(6A) (prospectively added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 36 para 8(5))) and that for these purposes a copy of a written charge may be laid before, and a warrant under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) may be issued by, a single justice of the peace (s 1(7A) (prospectively added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 36 para 8(6))). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1(6). As to warrants issued by a justice of the peace see further PARA 918 et seq post. As to the issue of summonses and warrants by the Crown Court see PARA 1261 post.

912 Issue of summons to defendant or warrant of arrest

NOTE 1--CrimPR Pt 7 now Criminal Procedure Rules 2010, SI 2010/60, Pt 7. Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 29(1)-(3), (5), (6), 30 in force for certain purposes: SI 2007/1999, SI 2008/1424, SI 2009/2879.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/913. The summons.

913. The summons.

A summons must either be signed by the justice issuing it or state his name and be authenticated by the signature of the clerk of a magistrates' court<sup>1</sup>. A summons requiring a person to appear before a magistrates' court to answer an information must state shortly the matter of the information and must state the time and place at which the accused is required by the summons to appear<sup>2</sup>.

A single summons may be issued against a person in respect of several informations; but the summons must state the matter of each information separately and has effect as several summonses, each issued in respect of one information<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> CrimPR 7.7(1). A summons may be issued by a justices' clerk in his own right: Justices' Clerks Rules 2005, SI 2005/545, r 2, Schedule para 2. A summons may also be issued by an assistant clerk, provided that that person has been specifically authorised by the justices' clerk for this purpose: r 3(1), Schedule para 2. Where a summons is issued by a justice, his facsimile rubber stamp signature may be affixed to it either by the justice or by an employee of the justices' clerk with the justice's general authority: R v Brentford Justices, ex p Catlin [1975] QB 455, [1975] 2 All ER 201, DC. An electronic signature incorporated into the document satisfies the requirement for a signature: CrimPR 7.7(4). The issue of a summons by a justice, justices' clerk or assistant clerk authorised by the justices' clerk is a 'judicial function'; each information must be considered and each summons individually authorised by a justice, justices' clerk or authorised assistant clerk, and a summons cannot be issued on the authority of anyone other than the particular justice, justices' clerk or authorised assistant clerk who has considered the information on which it is based: R v Gateshead Justices, ex p Tesco Stores Ltd [1981] QB 470, [1981] 1 All ER 1027, DC.

914. Service of summonses.

Service of a summons issued by a justice of the peace on a person other than a corporation may be effected by either:

- 1218 (1) delivering it to the person to whom it is directed<sup>1</sup>;
- 1219 (2) leaving it for him with some person at his last known or usual place of abode<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1220 (3) sending it by post in a letter addressed to him at his last known or usual place of abode<sup>3</sup>.

Service of a summons issued by a justice of the peace on a corporation may be effected by delivering it at, or sending it by post to, the registered office of the corporation, if that office is in the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup> or, if there is no registered office in the United Kingdom, any place in the United Kingdom where the corporation trades or conducts its business<sup>5</sup>.

A summons requiring a person to appear before a court in England and Wales may, in such manner as may be prescribed<sup>6</sup>, be served on him in Scotland or Northern Ireland<sup>7</sup>.

1 CrimPR 4.1(1)(a). Voluntary attendance at the court by the defendant cures any lack of process or irregularity in service: R v Hughes (1879) 4 QBD 614, CCR. Cf Pearks, Gunston and Tee Ltd v Richardson [1902] 1 KB 91, DC (attendance to point out an irregularity in service followed by withdrawal from case does not amount to waiver of irregularity). See also R v Essex Justices, ex p Perkins [1927] 2 KB 475, DC (when he attends court the defendant should be informed of the irregularity and of his right to object; without such knowledge there can be no waiver). Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/915. Written charges and requisitions.

915. Written charges and requisitions.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> a public prosecutor<sup>2</sup> is empowered to institute criminal proceedings against a person by issuing a document (a 'written charge') which charges the person with an offence<sup>3</sup>. Where a public prosecutor issues a written charge, there must at the same time be issued a document (a 'requisition') which requires the person to appear before a magistrates' court to answer the written charge<sup>4</sup>. The written charge and requisition must be served on the person concerned, and a copy of both must be served on the court named in the requisition<sup>5</sup>. Where the offence charged is an indictable offence and a written charge and requisition have previously been issued, a warrant of arrest may be issued<sup>6</sup> by a justice of the peace upon a copy of the written charge being laid before the justice by a public prosecutor<sup>7</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 29, 30 are to be brought into force, and the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 4A, 4B are added, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 para 16, as from a day to be appointed by order under s 336(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 For the meaning of 'public prosecutor' see PARA 912 note 1 ante.

3 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(1). See note 1 supra. Except where the context otherwise requires, in any enactment contained in an Act passed before the Criminal Justice Act 2003, any reference (however expressed) which is or includes a reference to an information within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) (or to the laying of such an information) is to be read as including a reference to a written charge (or to the issue of a written charge): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(a). As to informations see PARA 912 note 1 ante. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 was passed (ie received the Royal Assent) on 20 November 2003. The reference in s 30(5) to an enactment contained in an Act passed before the Criminal Justice Act 2003 includes a reference to an enactment contained in that Act as a result of an amendment to that Act made by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 or by any other Act passed in the same session as the Criminal Justice Act 2003: s 30(7). See further MAGISTRATES. The written charge may be issued in spite of the fact that the person on whom it is to be served is outside the United Kingdom: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 4A(1)(a), (2) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra).

4 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(2). See note 1 supra. Except where the context otherwise requires, in any enactment contained in an Act passed before the Criminal Justice Act 2003, any reference (however expressed) which is or includes a reference to a summons under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (as amended) (or to a justice of the peace issuing such a summons) is to be read as including a reference to a requisition (or to a public prosecutor issuing a requisition): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 30(5)(b). See further note 3 supra. The requisition may be issued in spite of the fact that the person on whom it is to be served is outside the United Kingdom: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 4A(1)(b), (2) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra).

5 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(3). See note 1 supra. Where the written charge or requisition is to be served outside the United Kingdom and the prosecutor believes that the person on whom it is to be served does not understand English, the written charge or requisition must be accompanied by a translation of it in an appropriate language (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 4A(3) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)); a written charge or requisition served outside the United Kingdom must in any case be accompanied by a notice giving any information required to be given by rules of court (s 4A(4) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)). If a requisition is served outside the United Kingdom, no obligation under the law of England and Wales to comply with the requisition is imposed by virtue of the service (s 4A(5) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)) and, accordingly, failure to comply with the requisition is not a ground for issuing a warrant to secure the attendance of the person in question (s 4A(6) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)), although the requisition may subsequently be served on the person in question in the United Kingdom (with the usual consequences for non-compliance) (s 4A(7) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)).

A written charge or requisition within the meaning of these provisions may, instead of being served by post, be served on a person outside the United Kingdom in accordance with arrangements made by the Secretary of State (s 4B(1) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)), although where the person is in a participating country (see PARA 917 note 14 post) the written charge or requisition may be served in accordance with those arrangements only if either the correct address of the person is unknown (s 4B(2), (3)(a) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)) or it has not been possible to serve the written charge or requisition by post (s 4B(3)(b) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)) or there are good reasons for thinking that service by post will not be effective or is inappropriate (s 4B(3)(c) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/916. Service of overseas process in the United Kingdom.

916. Service of overseas process in the United Kingdom.

Provision is made in connection with the service of:

- 1221 (1) any process<sup>1</sup> issued or made in a country<sup>2</sup> outside the United Kingdom for the purposes of criminal proceedings<sup>3</sup>;
- 1222 (2) any document issued or made by an administrative authority in a country outside the United Kingdom in administrative proceedings<sup>4</sup>;
- 1223 (3) any process issued or made for the purposes of any proceedings on an appeal before a court in a country outside the United Kingdom against a decision in administrative proceedings<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1224 (4) any document issued or made by an authority in a country outside the United Kingdom for the purposes of clemency proceedings<sup>6</sup>.

Where the Secretary of State receives any such process or other document from the government of, or other authority in, a country outside the United Kingdom, together with a request for the process or document to be served on a person in the United Kingdom<sup>7</sup>, he may cause the process or document to be served by post or, if the request is for personal service, direct the chief officer of police<sup>8</sup> for the area in which that person appears to be to cause it to be personally served on him<sup>9</sup>.

Where any process which is served in a part of the United Kingdom by virtue of these provisions<sup>10</sup> requires a person to appear as a party or attend as a witness<sup>11</sup>, no obligation under the law of that part of the United Kingdom to comply with the process is imposed by virtue of its service<sup>12</sup>. Any such process must be accompanied by a notice stating the effect of this provision<sup>13</sup>, indicating that the person on whom it is served may wish to seek advice as to the possible consequences of his failing to comply with the process under the law of the country where it was issued or made<sup>14</sup>, and indicating that under that law he may not be accorded the same rights and privileges as a party or as a witness as would be accorded to him in proceedings in the part of the United Kingdom in which the process is served<sup>15</sup>.

Where a chief officer of police causes any process or document to be served<sup>16</sup>, he must at once tell the Secretary of State when and how it was served<sup>17</sup> and (if possible) provide him with a receipt signed by the person on whom it was served<sup>18</sup>. Where the chief officer of police is unable to cause any process or document to be served as directed, he must at once inform the Secretary of State of that fact and of the reason<sup>19</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'process', means any summons or order issued or made by a court and includes any other document issued or made by a court for service on parties or witnesses (Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 51(3)(a)) and any document issued by a prosecuting authority outside the United Kingdom for the purposes of criminal proceedings (s 51(3)(b)). 'Court' includes a tribunal: s 51(1). 'Criminal proceedings' include criminal proceedings outside the United Kingdom in which a civil order may be made: s 51(1). 2 'Country' includes territory: ibid s 51(1).

3 Ibid s 1(2)(a).

'Administrative proceedings' means proceedings outside the United Kingdom to which the Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters established by Council Act of 29 May 2000 (2000/C197/01) ('the Mutual Legal Assistance Convention') art 3(1) (proceedings brought by administrative authorities in respect of administrative offences where a decision in the proceedings may be the subject of an appeal before a court) applies: Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 51(1).

5 Ibid s 1(2)(c).

6 Ibid s 1(2)(d). 'Clemency proceedings' means proceedings in a country outside the United Kingdom, not being proceedings before a court exercising criminal jurisdiction, for the removal or reduction of a penalty imposed on conviction of an offence: s 51(1).

917. Service of United Kingdom process abroad.

Any process<sup>1</sup> issued or made for the purposes of criminal proceedings<sup>2</sup> by a court<sup>3</sup> in England and Wales may be issued or made in spite of the fact that the person on whom it is to be served is outside the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup>. Where the process is to be served outside the United Kingdom and the person at whose request it is issued or made believes that the person on whom it is to be served does not understand English, he must inform the court of that fact<sup>5</sup> and provide the court with a copy of the process, or of so much of it as is material, translated into an appropriate language<sup>6</sup>. Process served outside the United Kingdom requiring a person to appear as a party or attend as a witness must not include notice of a penalty<sup>7</sup> and must be accompanied by a notice giving any information required to be given by rules of court<sup>8</sup>. If process requiring a person to appear as a party or attend as a witness is served outside the United Kingdom, no obligation to comply with the process under the law of the part of the United Kingdom in which the process is issued or made is imposed by virtue of the service<sup>9</sup>. Accordingly, failure to comply with the process does not constitute contempt of court and is not a ground for issuing a warrant to secure the attendance of the person in question<sup>10</sup>. However, the process may subsequently be served on the person in question in the United Kingdom (with the usual consequences for non-compliance)<sup>11</sup>.

Process<sup>12</sup> may, instead of being served by post, be served on a person outside the United Kingdom in accordance with arrangements made by the Secretary of State<sup>13</sup>. Where, however, the person is in a participating country<sup>14</sup>, the process may be served in accordance with those arrangements only if either the correct address of the person is unknown<sup>15</sup>, or it has not been possible to serve the process by post<sup>16</sup>, or there are good reasons for thinking that service by post will not be effective or is inappropriate<sup>17</sup>.

14 For the purposes of any provision of the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 Pt 1 (as amended), a 'participating country' is a country other than the United Kingdom which is a member state on a day appointed for the commencement of that provision (s 51(2)(a)) and any other country designated by an order made by the Secretary of State (s 51(2)(b)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. Any power to make an order conferred by Pt 1 (as amended) on the Secretary of State or the Treasury is exercisable by statutory instrument (s 50(1)) which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (s 50(3)). An order may make different provision for different purposes: s 50(2). A statutory instrument containing an order under s 51(2)(b) designating a country other than a member state is not to be made unless a draft of the instrument has been laid before, and approved by resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 50(5)(a).

Section 4 was brought into force on 28 April 2004 by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 (Commencement No 1) Order 2004, SI 2004/786.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/919. Warrant indorsed for bail.

919. Warrant indorsed for bail.

On issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person, a justice of the peace may grant him bail by indorsing the warrant for bail, that is to say, by indorsing the warrant with a direction stating that the person arrested is to be released on bail subject to a duty to appear before such magistrates' court and at such time as may be specified in the indorsement<sup>1</sup>. The indorsement must fix the amounts in which any sureties are to be bound<sup>2</sup>.

Where a warrant has been so indorsed:

1225 (1) where the person arrested is to be released on bail on his entering into a recognisance without sureties, it is not necessary to take him to a police station; but, if he is so taken, he must be released from custody on his entering into the recognisance<sup>3</sup>; and

1226 (2) where he is to be released on his entering into a recognisance with sureties, he must be taken to a police station on his arrest, and the custody officer<sup>4</sup> there must (subject to his approving any surety tendered in compliance with the indorsement) release him from custody as directed in the indorsement<sup>5</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(ii) Summonses and Warrants of Arrest; Written Charges and Requisitions/920. Execution of warrant.

920. Execution of warrant.

A warrant of arrest issued by a justice of the peace remains in force until it is executed or withdrawn or it ceases to have effect in accordance with rules of court<sup>1</sup>. A warrant so issued may be executed anywhere in England and Wales by the persons to whom it was directed<sup>2</sup> or by:

- 1227 (1) a constable<sup>3</sup> acting in his own police area<sup>4</sup>;
- 1228 (2) where the warrant is of a specified type<sup>5</sup>, a civilian enforcement officer<sup>6</sup>;
- 1229 (3) where the warrant is of a specified type<sup>7</sup>, an individual who is, or is the director, partner or employee of, an approved enforcement agency<sup>8</sup>.

A person executing a warrant of arrest must, upon arresting the relevant person<sup>9</sup>:

- 1230 (a) either: (i) if he has the warrant with him, show it to the relevant person<sup>10</sup>; or (ii) otherwise, tell the relevant person where the warrant is and what arrangements may be made to let that person inspect it<sup>11</sup>;
- 1231 (b) explain, in ordinary language, the charge and the reason for the arrest<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1232 (c) unless he is a constable in uniform, show documentary proof of his identity<sup>13</sup>.

A warrant so issued may be executed at any time of the day or night<sup>14</sup>.

1 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 125(1) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 97(4); and by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 238). It seems that a justice of the peace may withdraw his own warrant, and in a proper case the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court has power to order the withdrawal of a warrant: R v Crossman, ex p Chetwynd (1908) 98 LT 760. ## 921. Cross-border execution of warrants.

A warrant issued in England, Wales or Northern Ireland for the arrest of a person charged with an offence<sup>1</sup> may be executed in Scotland, a warrant issued in Scotland or Northern Ireland for the arrest of a person charged with an offence may be executed in England or Wales, and a warrant issued in England or Wales or Scotland for the arrest of a person charged with an offence may be executed in Northern Ireland, by any constable of any police force of the country of issue, by a constable of the British Transport Police Force<sup>2</sup> (except in the case of a warrant being executed in Northern Ireland), or by a constable of the country of execution as well as by any other persons within the directions in the warrant<sup>3</sup>. A person so arrested in pursuance of a warrant must be taken, as soon as reasonably practicable, to any place to which he is committed by, or may be conveyed under, the warrant<sup>4</sup>.

Any other person within the directions in a warrant executing that warrant under these provisions has the same powers and duties, and the person arrested has the same rights, as he would have had if execution had been in the country of issue by the person within those directions<sup>5</sup>.

These provisions apply: (1) as respects a warrant of commitment and a warrant to arrest a witness issued by a judicial authority<sup>6</sup> in England, Wales or Northern Ireland as they apply to a warrant for arrest<sup>7</sup>; (2) as respects a warrant for committal, a warrant to imprison (or to apprehend and imprison) and a warrant to arrest a witness issued by a judicial authority in Scotland as they apply to a warrant for arrest<sup>8</sup>; and (3) as respects a warrant for the arrest of an offender referred back to the court by a youth offender panel<sup>9</sup> as they apply to a warrant issued in England or Wales for the arrest of a person charged with an offence<sup>10</sup>.

923. Discretion of justices to issue summons or warrant of arrest.

If application is made to a justice of the peace to issue a summons or a warrant of arrest, he must exercise a judicial discretion in deciding whether to grant or refuse it<sup>1</sup>. If he declines jurisdiction or refuses to grant a summons for a reason which is bad in law, judicial review by way of a mandatory order may issue to compel him to hear and determine the matter<sup>2</sup>. The discretion whether a more serious charge should be preferred or not in particular circumstances must be left to the prosecutor<sup>3</sup>. If the justice exercises a proper discretion over the application to him, the court will not grant judicial review of his decision refusing to issue a summons<sup>4</sup>. If he refuses to grant a summons or warrant of arrest and assigns several reasons for his refusal, some of which are bad in law, but others good, the court will not grant judicial review<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the impropriety of a justice authorising the issue of a summons without having applied his mind to the information see R v Brentford Justices, ex p Catlin [1975] QB 455 at 464, [1975] 2 All ER 201 at 207, DC, per Lord Widgery CJ. See also R v Highbury Corner Justices, ex p Tawfik [1994] COD 106, DC. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iii) Arrest Without Warrant/924. Constables' power of arrest without warrant.

(iii) Arrest Without Warrant

924. Constables' power of arrest without warrant.

A constable<sup>1</sup> may arrest without a warrant<sup>2</sup>:

- 1233 (1) anyone who is about to commit an offence<sup>3</sup>;
- 1234 (2) anyone who is in the act of committing an offence<sup>4</sup>;
- 1235 (3) anyone whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be about to commit an offence<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1236 (4) anyone whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be committing an offence<sup>6</sup>.

If a constable has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed, he may arrest without a warrant anyone whom he has reasonable grounds to suspect of being guilty of it<sup>7</sup>. If an offence has been committed<sup>8</sup>, a constable may arrest without a warrant anyone who is guilty of the offence<sup>9</sup> and anyone whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be guilty of it<sup>10</sup>.

The power of summary arrest conferred on constables by these provisions<sup>11</sup> is exercisable only if the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that for one of the following reasons it is necessary to arrest the person in question<sup>12</sup>:

- 1237 (a) to enable the name or address of that person to be ascertained (in the case where the constable does not know, and cannot readily ascertain, the person's name or address, or has reasonable grounds for doubting whether a name or address given by the person as his name or address is his real name or address)<sup>13</sup>;
- 1238 (b) to prevent the person in question:
  - 57
  - 87. (i) causing physical injury to himself or any other person<sup>14</sup>;
  - 88. (ii) suffering physical injury<sup>15</sup>;
  - 89. (iii) causing loss of or damage to property<sup>16</sup>;
  - 90. (iv) committing an offence against public decency<sup>17</sup>; or
  - 91. (v) causing an unlawful obstruction of the highway<sup>18</sup>;
  - 58
- 1239 (c) to protect a child or other vulnerable person from the person in question<sup>19</sup>;
- 1240 (d) to allow the prompt and effective investigation of the offence or of the conduct of the person in question<sup>20</sup>; or
- 1241 (e) to prevent any prosecution for the offence from being hindered by the disappearance of the person in question<sup>21</sup>.

1 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

2 A lawful arrest requires two elements: a person's involvement or suspected or attempted involvement in the commission of a criminal offence and reasonable grounds for believing that the person's arrest is necessary: Code G: Code of Practice for the Statutory Power of Arrest by Police Officers para 2.1. Where a constable has to make a spur of the moment decision in an emergency, this is a surrounding circumstance for which allowance must be made: G v Chief Superintendent of Police, Stroud (1988) 86 Cr App Rep 92, DC (arrest on reasonable suspicion that breach of peace was likely (see PARA 930 post)).

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(1)(a) (s 24 substituted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 110(1)); Code G para 2.3. The substitution of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24 has effect in relation to any offence whenever convicted: s 110(4).

4 Ibid s 24(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(1)(c) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(1)(d) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(2) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3. Whether there are reasonable grounds for suspecting a person to be guilty of an offence is to be determined objectively: Castorina v Chief Constable of Surrey [1988] NLJR 180, CA. As to reasonable suspicion see Hussien (Shaabin Bin) v Chong Fook Kam [1970] AC 942, [1969] 3 All ER 1626, PC; and Holgate-Mohammed v Duke [1984] AC 437, 79 Cr App Rep 120, HL; Ward v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary (1986) Times, 26 June, CA; Holtham v Metropolitan Police Comr (1987) Times, 28 November, CA (all decided under the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 2 (repealed)). See also Al Fayed v Metropolitan Police Comr [2004] EWCA Civ 1579, [2005] 1 Archbold News 1. The constable need not have in mind the specific statutory provision, or mentally identify specific offences with technicality or precision, but he must reasonably suspect the existence of facts amounting to an offence of a kind which he has in mind; otherwise he cannot comply with his obligation under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28(3) (see PARA 931 post): Chapman v DPP (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 190, DC; and see also Mossop v DPP [2003] EWHC 126 (Admin), [2003] 6 Archbold News 1, DC. The constable's suspicion need not be based on his own observations but can be based on what he has been told, or on information given to him anonymously; it is not necessary for him to prove what was known to his informant or that any of the facts on which he based his suspicion were in fact true; whether such information provides reasonable grounds for the constable's suspicion depends on the source and context, viewed in the light of the surrounding circumstances: O'Hara v Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary [1997] AC 286, [1997] 1 All ER 129, HL. However, the mere fact that an arresting constable has been instructed by a superior officer to effect the arrest is not capable of amounting to reasonable grounds for the necessary suspicion: O'Hara v Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary supra.

8 See R v Self [1992] 3 All ER 476, 95 Cr App Rep 42, CA.

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(3)(a) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3.

10 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(3)(b) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.3.

11 Ie by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(1)-(3) (as substituted).

12 Ibid s 24(4) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.4. It is an operational decision at the discretion of the arresting officer as to what action he may take at the point of contact with an individual, the necessity criteria or criteria specified in s 24(5) (see heads (a)-(e) in the text) (if any) which apply to the individual, and whether to arrest, report for summons, grant street bail, issue a fixed penalty notice or take any other action that is open to the officer: Code G paras 2.4, 2.7. In applying the criteria the arresting officer has to be satisfied that at least one of the reasons supporting the need for arrest is satisfied: Code G para 2.5. In considering the individual circumstances, the constable must take into account the situation of the victim, the nature of the offence, the circumstances of the suspect and the needs of the investigative process: Code G para 2.8.

13 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(a), (b) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G paras 2.4, 2.9(a), (b). An address is a satisfactory address for service of summons if the person will be at it for a sufficiently long period for it to be possible to serve him with a summons, or if some other person at that address specified by the person will accept service of the summons on his behalf: Code G para 2.9.

14 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(c)(i) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(c)(i).

15 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(c)(ii) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(c)(ii).

16 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(c)(iii) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(c)(iii).

17 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(c)(iv) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(c)(iv). This provision applies only where members of the public going about their normal business cannot reasonably be expected to avoid the person in question: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(6) (as so substituted); Code G para 2.9(c)(iv).

18 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(c)(v) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(c)(v).

19 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(d) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(d).

20 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(e) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(e). This may include: (1) where there are reasonable grounds to believe that the person has made false statements, has made statements which cannot be readily verified, has presented false evidence, may steal or destroy evidence, may make contact with co-suspects or conspirators, or may intimidate, threaten or make contact with witnesses, or where it is necessary to obtain evidence by questioning; (2) where in considering arrest in connection with an indictable offence there is a need to enter and search any premises occupied or controlled by a person, search the person, prevent contact with others, or take fingerprints, footwear impressions, samples or photographs of the suspect; or (3) for ensuring compliance with statutory drug testing requirements: Code G para 2.9(e)(i)-(iii).

The power of arrest must be exercised for a proper purpose, but this does not prevent an arrest on a holding charge, so as to facilitate the investigation of another, more serious offence, provided that the terms of a relevant power of arrest are satisfied: R v Chalkley, R v Jeffries [1998] QB 848, [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 79, CA. If the arresting constable knows that there is no possibility of a charge being made, the arrest is unlawful because the constable has acted on an irrelevant consideration or for an improper purpose: Plange v Chief Constable of South Humberside Police (1992) Times, 23 March, CA.

21 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24(5)(f) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code G para 2.9(f). This may arise if there are reasonable grounds for believing that if the person is not arrested he will fail to attend court or that street bail after arrest would be insufficient to deter the suspect from trying to evade prosecution: Code G para 2.9(f).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iii) Arrest Without Warrant/925. Arrest without warrant: other persons.

925. Arrest without warrant: other persons.

Other than in relation to the statutory offences of incitement to racial hatred and of incitement to religious hatred<sup>1</sup>, a person other than a constable<sup>2</sup> may arrest without a warrant anyone who is in the act of committing an indictable offence<sup>3</sup> and anyone whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be committing an indictable offence<sup>4</sup>. Where an indictable offence has been committed<sup>5</sup>, a person other than a constable may arrest without a warrant anyone who is guilty of the offence<sup>6</sup> and anyone whom he has reasonable grounds for suspecting to be guilty of it<sup>7</sup>.

The power of summary arrest conferred by these provisions<sup>8</sup> on persons other than constables is exercisable only if:

- 1242 (1) the person making the arrest has reasonable grounds for believing that it is necessary to arrest the person in question in order to prevent him from:
- 59
- 92. (a) causing physical injury to himself or any other person<sup>9</sup>;
  - 93. (b) suffering physical injury<sup>10</sup>;
  - 94. (c) causing loss of or damage to property<sup>11</sup>; or
  - 95. (d) making off before a constable can assume responsibility for him<sup>12</sup>; and
- 60
- 1243 (2) it appears to the person making the arrest that it is not reasonably practicable for a constable to make it instead<sup>13</sup>.

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24A(5) (s 24A added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 110(1); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24A(5) prospectively added by the Racial and Religious Hatred Act 2006 s 2). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24A(5) (as added) is to come into force as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. Section 24A (as added) has effect in relation to any offence whenever committed: s 110(4). For the statutory offences of racial or religious hatred see the Public Order Act 1986 Pt 3 (ss 17-29) (as amended) (see PARAS 562-568 ante) or Pt 3A (ss 29A-29M) (as added) (see PARAS 569-576 ante).

As from a day to be appointed, it is provided that s 24A (as added) does not permit a person other than a constable to arrest inside a polling station a person who commits or is suspected of committing an offence under the Representation of the People Act 1983 s 60 (see ELECTIONS AND REFERENDUMS vol 15(4) (2007 Reissue) PARA 733): see the Electoral Administration Act 2006 s 71 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24A(1)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra). See note 3 supra.

5 If the person arrested is subsequently acquitted of the alleged offence for which he was arrested, an arrest will not have been lawful for these purposes because no offence has been committed: R v Self [1992] 3 All ER 476, 95 Cr App Rep 42, CA (decided under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 24 (as originally enacted)).

A person<sup>1</sup> may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime, or in effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders or of persons unlawfully at large<sup>2</sup>.

A person arrested may be handcuffed if he attempts to escape or if it is necessary to prevent his escaping<sup>3</sup>.

A person who assaults any other person with intent to resist or prevent his own arrest or that of another or who causes grievous bodily harm with intent to prevent arrest commits an offence<sup>4</sup>. Where a person uses force in order to escape from arrest, and death results, he may be guilty of manslaughter<sup>5</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iii) Arrest Without Warrant/928. Cross-border powers of arrest.

928. Cross-border powers of arrest.

Any constable<sup>1</sup> of a police force in England and Wales who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed or attempted in England or Wales and that the suspected person is in Scotland or in Northern Ireland may arrest without a warrant the suspected person, wherever he is in Scotland or in Northern Ireland, provided that it appears to the constable that it would have been lawful for him to have arrested the suspected person without warrant had he been in England and Wales<sup>2</sup>. Any constable of a police force in Scotland who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed or attempted in Scotland and that the suspected person is in England or Wales or in Northern Ireland may, as respects the suspected person, wherever he is in England or Wales or in Northern Ireland, exercise the same powers of arrest or detention as it would be competent for him to exercise were the person in Scotland provided that it appears to him that it would have been lawful for him to have exercised those powers had the suspected person been in Scotland<sup>3</sup>. Any constable of a police force in Northern Ireland<sup>4</sup> who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence has been committed or attempted in Northern Ireland and that the suspected person is in England or Wales or in Scotland may arrest without a warrant the suspected person, wherever he is in England or Wales or in Scotland, if the suspected offence is an arrestable offence<sup>5</sup> or if, in the case of any other offence, it appears to the constable that service of a summons is for any specified reason<sup>6</sup> impracticable or inappropriate<sup>7</sup>.

It is the duty of a constable<sup>8</sup> who has arrested or, as the case may be, detained a person under these provisions:

- 1244 (1) if he arrested the person in Scotland, to take him to the nearest convenient designated police station<sup>9</sup> in England or in Northern Ireland or to a designated police station in a police area<sup>10</sup> in England, Wales or Northern Ireland in which the offence is being investigated<sup>11</sup>;
- 1245 (2) if he arrested the person in England or Wales, to take him to the nearest convenient police station in Scotland or to a police station within a sheriffdom in which the offence is being investigated or to the nearest convenient designated police station in Northern Ireland or to a designated police station in Northern Ireland in which the offence is being investigated<sup>12</sup>;
- 1246 (3) if he detained the person in England or Wales, to take the person detained to the nearest convenient police station in Scotland or to a police station within a sheriffdom in which the offence is being investigated or to the nearest convenient designated police station in England or Wales<sup>13</sup>;
- 1247 (4) if he arrested the person in Northern Ireland, to take him to the nearest convenient designated police station in England or Wales or to a designated police station in a police area in England or Wales in which the offence is being investigated or to the nearest convenient police station in Scotland or to a police station within a sheriffdom in which the offence is being investigated<sup>14</sup>; and
- 1248 (5) if he detained the person in Northern Ireland, to take him to the nearest convenient police station in Scotland or to a police station within a sheriffdom in which the offence is being investigated or to the nearest convenient designated police station in Northern Ireland<sup>15</sup>.

These provisions do not prejudice any other power of arrest<sup>16</sup>.

1 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante. The powers conferred on constables by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 137(1), (2) (see the text and notes 2-3 infra) may be exercised by a constable appointed under the British Transport Commission Act 1949 s 53 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 129): Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 137(2A) (added by the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 paras 15, 18).

A constable arresting a person under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 137(1) (as amended) may use reasonable force and has the powers of search conferred by s 139 (as amended) (see PARA 937 post): s 137(8)(a).

3 Ibid s 137(2), (5). A constable arresting a person under s 137(2) has the same powers and duties, and the person arrested has the same rights, as he would have had if the arrest had been in Scotland (s 137(8)(b)); and a constable detaining a person under s 137(2) must act in accordance with the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 ss 14(2)-(8), 15(1), (2), (4)-(6), 18, as modified by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 138(6) (ss 137(8)(c), 138(1), (2), (6) (s 138(2), (6) amended by the Criminal Procedure (Consequential Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1995 s 5, Sch 4 para 93(6))).

4 'Constable of a police force', in relation to Northern Ireland, means a member of the Police Service of Northern Ireland or the Police Service of Northern Ireland Reserve: Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 137(9) (amended by the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000 s 78(2)(c), (d)).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iii) Arrest Without Warrant/930. Common law power of arrest to deal with or prevent breaches of the peace.

930. Common law power of arrest to deal with or prevent breaches of the peace.

A breach of the peace is not a criminal offence in English law<sup>1</sup>.

A constable<sup>2</sup> or an ordinary citizen may at common law arrest without warrant: (1) a person committing a breach of the peace in his presence; (2) a person who he reasonably believes<sup>3</sup> will commit such a breach of the peace in the immediate future, even though at the time of the arrest such person has not committed any breach; and (3) a person who has committed a breach of the peace where it is reasonably believed that a renewal of the breach is threatened<sup>4</sup>. There is no breach of the peace unless an act is done or threatened to be done which: (a) actually harms a person or, in his presence, his property; (b) is likely to cause such harm; or (c) puts a person in fear of such harm<sup>5</sup>. A breach of the peace can occur on private premises, and can do so even if the only people likely to be affected by the conduct are on the premises<sup>6</sup>. The power to arrest for breach of the peace extends to arresting a person whose behaviour is not unlawful but threatens to provoke a breach of the peace by another, provided that his behaviour is unreasonable, that it clearly interferes with the rights of others and that its natural consequence must be not wholly unreasonable violence by the other<sup>7</sup>.

Nothing in the Public Order Act 1986 affects this common law power of arrest<sup>8</sup>.

1 R v County of London Quarter Sessions Appeals Committee, ex p Metropolitan Police Comr [1948] 1 KB 670 at 676, [1948] 1 All ER 72 at 75, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ; Williamson v Chief Constable of the West Midlands [2003] EWCA Civ 337, [2004] 1 WLR 14. Detention of a person who has been arrested for a breach of the peace is consequently not subject to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (ss 34-51) (as amended) or the Bail Act 1976 (see PARAS 1165-1201 post) because these provisions are respectively concerned with the detention of persons arrested for an offence, and bail in relation to those accused or convicted of an offence: Williamson v Chief Constable of the West Midlands supra. Breach of the peace can be regarded as a criminal offence for certain purposes of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) (see art 5(1)(c); and Steel v United Kingdom (1998) 28 EHRR 603, ECtHR), but this does not mean that it must also be an 'offence' for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Williamson v Chief Constable of the West Midlands supra). The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

2 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

3 Where the power of arrest is exercised on the basis of a belief that a breach of the peace is imminent, not only must the belief be honest, albeit mistaken, but it must be founded on reasonable grounds: R v Howell [1982] QB 416, 73 Cr App Rep 31, CA.

4 R v Howell [1982] QB 416, 73 Cr App Rep 31, CA, applied in Foulkes v Chief Constable of Merseyside Police [1998] 3 All ER 705, CA; R v Ramsell (1999) unreported, CA. An apprehended renewal of a breach of the peace must be 'about to occur' (ie 'imminent'): Foulkes v Chief Constable of Merseyside Police supra; R v Ramsell supra. As to restraint falling short of arrest see Albert v Lavin [1982] AC 546, 74 Cr App Rep 150, HL.

A person makes a valid arrest when he reasonably believes a breach of the peace is about to be committed if he says merely, 'I am arresting you for a breach of the peace', and is not to be taken in such a case as referring only to the actual commission of a breach: R v Howell supra.

5 R v Howell [1982] QB 416, 73 Cr App Rep 31, CA, applied in Parkin v Norman [1983] QB 92, [1982] 2 All ER 583, DC; G v Chief Superintendent of Police, Stroud (1988) 86 Cr App Rep 92, DC; Percy v DPP [1995] 3 All ER 124, [1995] 1 WLR 1382, DC; Sutton v Metropolitan Police Comr (1998) unreported, DC. A disturbance which does not relate to violence cannot in itself constitute a breach of the peace: R v Howell supra. See also Wooding

v Oxley (1839) 9 C & P 1 (disturbance by noise at a public meeting not a breach of the peace); Jordan v Gibbon (1863) 8 LT 391 (disturbance caused by quarrel between spouses not a breach of the peace unless violence or threatened violence); Lewis v Chief Constable of Greater Manchester (1991) Independent, 23 October, CA (loud music and screaming not a breach of the peace); Jarrett v Chief Constable of West Midlands Police Force [2003] EWCA Civ 397, [2003] 14 LS Gaz R 29 (agitation or excitement including hysterical waving of handbag not a breach of the peace); R (on the application of Hawkes) v DPP [2005] EWHC 3046 (Admin) (verbal abuse not a breach of the peace; there must be a connection with violence on the part of the defendant). For the purposes of the definition of 'breach of the peace' in R v Howell supra, 'harm' 'must be unlawful harm'; consequently harm resulting from the use of reasonable force to resist an unlawful police search did not constitute a breach of the peace: McBean v Parker [1983] Crim LR 399, DC. Cf R v Chief Constable of Devon and Cornwall, ex p Central Electricity Generating Board [1982] QB 458 at 471, [1981] 3 All ER 826 at 832, CA, per Lord Denning MR (there is a breach of the peace whenever a person lawfully carrying out his work is unlawfully and physically prevented by another from doing it), applied in Addison v Chief Constable of the West Midlands Police [2004] 1 WLR 29n, CA. The concept of 'breach of the peace' and the power of arrest associated with it are sufficiently precise to be 'lawful' and 'prescribed by law' for the purposes of the European Convention on Human Rights art 5 (right to liberty) and art 10 (freedom of expression): Steel v United Kingdom (1998) 28 EHRR 603, ECtHR.

6 McConnell v Chief Constable of Greater Manchester Police [1990] 1 All ER 423, 91 Cr App Rep 88, CA, applied in Chief Constable of Humberside Police v McQuade [2001] EWCA Civ 1330, [2002] 1 WLR 1347.

(iv) Procedure Following Arrest

931. Information to be given on arrest.

Where a person is arrested, otherwise than by being informed that he is under arrest, the arrest is not lawful unless the person arrested is informed that he is under arrest as soon as is practicable after his arrest<sup>1</sup>. No arrest is lawful unless the person arrested is informed of the ground<sup>2</sup> for the arrest at the time of<sup>3</sup>, or as soon as is practicable after, the arrest<sup>4</sup>. Where a person is arrested by a constable<sup>5</sup>, these provisions apply regardless of whether the ground for the arrest is obvious<sup>6</sup>. However, nothing in these provisions is to be taken to require a person to be informed either that he is under arrest<sup>7</sup> or of the ground for the arrest<sup>8</sup> if it was not reasonably practicable for him to be so informed by reason of his having escaped from arrest before the information could be given<sup>9</sup>.

A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be cautioned unless it is impracticable to do so by reason of his condition or behaviour at the time, or he has already been cautioned immediately prior to arrest<sup>10</sup>.

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28(1); Code G: Code of Practice for the Statutory Power of Arrest by Police Officers paras 2.2, 3.3; and see R v Brosch [1988] Crim LR 743, CA (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28 reflects position at common law as set out in Christie v Leachinsky [1947] AC 573, [1947] 1 All ER 567, HL). See also Chapman v DPP (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 190 at 197, DC, per Buplan LJ; Taylor v Chief Constable of Thames Valley Police [2004] EWCA Civ 858, [2004] 3 All ER 503, [2004] 1 WLR 3155.

2 Arresting officers are required to inform the person arrested of the relevant circumstances of the arrest in relation to that person's involvement, suspected involvement or attempted involvement in the commission of an offence and in relation to the reasonable grounds for believing that that person's arrest is necessary: Code G para 2.2.

3 'At the time' of the arrest comprehends a short but reasonable period of time around the moment of arrest, both before and after; whether words were spoken at the time of arrest or not is a question of fact: Nicholas v Parsonage [1987] RTR 199, DC. It is not sufficient to tell a person that he is being arrested because he has not given his name and address as required; there must be an indication in some words of an offence for which the arrest is being made: Nicholas v Parsonage supra. See also Dawes v DPP [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 65, [1994] RTR 209, DC (suspect trapped inside car by automatic activation of device set by police; held he was arrested at the moment that he was so trapped).

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28(3); Code G para 3.3. An arrested person must be given sufficient information to enable him to understand that he has been deprived of his liberty and the reason he has been arrested, eg when a person is arrested on suspicion of committing an offence he must be informed of the suspected offence's nature, when and where it was committed. The suspect must also be informed of the reason or reasons why arrest is considered necessary: Code G Guidance note 3. Vague or technical language should be avoided: Code G Guidance note 3. A person arrested without warrant must be given adequate information of the reason for his arrest; but the question whether a police officer has complied with this obligation must be answered taking into account all the background circumstances; and the officer's conduct must be judged bearing in mind that he is not required to do more than is reasonable in those circumstances: Abbassy v Metropolitan Police Comr [1990] 1 All ER 193, 90 Cr App Rep 250, CA. The reason for the arrest may be given by an officer other than the arresting officer: Dhesi v Chief Constable of West Midlands Police (2000) Times, 9 May, CA.

An arresting officer is under a duty to maintain arrest until it is possible to inform the person arrested of the ground of arrest, but subsequent failure to give this information does not retrospectively make the officer's acts in the intermediate period unlawful: DPP v Hawkins [1988] 3 All ER 673, 88 Cr App Rep 166, DC. An arrest which is unlawful because no reason has been given may subsequently become lawful arrest from the moment that reasons are given: Lewis v Chief Constable of the South Wales Constabulary [1991] 1 All ER 206, CA. A collateral motive for an arrest (as in the case of an arrest to enable an investigation into a more serious offence) on otherwise good and stated grounds does not make it unlawful: R v Chalkley, R v Jeffries [1998] QB 848 at 872-873, [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 79 at 103, CA.

5 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 28(5)(a).

9 Ibid s 28(5).

10 Code G para 3.4. Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 10.1-10.5, 10.7, 10.9 (see PARA 959 post) are applied by Code G paras 3.1-3.7. Nothing in Code G requires a caution to be given or repeated when informing a person not under arrest that he may be prosecuted for an offence, but a court will not be able to draw any adverse inferences under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (see PARA 1552 post) if the person was not cautioned: Code G Guidance note 4. If it appears that a person does not understand the caution, the person giving it should explain it in his own words: Code G Guidance note 5.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iv) Procedure Following Arrest/932. Records of arrest.

932. Records of arrest.

The arresting officer is required to record in his pocket book or by other methods used for recording information the nature and circumstances of the offence leading to the arrest; the reason or reasons why arrest was necessary; the giving of the caution; and anything said by the person at the time of arrest<sup>1</sup>. Such a record should be made at the time of the arrest unless impracticable to do so<sup>2</sup>. If not made at that time, the record should be completed as soon as possible thereafter<sup>3</sup>.

On arrival at the police station, the custody officer<sup>4</sup> must open the custody record<sup>5</sup>. The information given by the arresting officer on the circumstances and reason or reasons for arrest must be recorded as part of the custody record<sup>6</sup>. Alternatively, a copy of the record made by the officer in accordance with the provision described above must be attached as part of the custody record<sup>7</sup>.

The custody record will serve as a record of the arrest<sup>8</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iv) Procedure Following Arrest/933. Arrest elsewhere than at police station.

933. Arrest elsewhere than at police station.

Where a person is, at any place other than a police station, arrested by a constable for an offence<sup>1</sup> or taken into custody by a constable after being arrested for an offence by a person other than a constable<sup>2</sup>, he must be taken to a police station by a constable as soon as practicable after the arrest<sup>3</sup>. This duty is, however, subject to two qualifications:

- 1249 (1) a constable may release on bail a person who is arrested or taken into custody in these circumstances<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1250 (2) a person arrested by a constable at any place other than a police station must be released without bail if, at any time before the arrested person reaches a police station, a constable is satisfied that there are no grounds for keeping him under arrest or releasing him<sup>5</sup> on bail<sup>6</sup>.

A constable who is working in a locality covered by a police station which is not a designated police station<sup>7</sup> and a constable who belongs to a body of constables maintained by an authority other than a police authority<sup>8</sup> may take an arrested person to any police station unless it appears to the constable that it may be necessary to keep the arrested person in police detention for more than six hours<sup>9</sup>.

Any constable may take an arrested person to any police station if:

- 1251 (a) either the constable has arrested him without the assistance of any other constable and no other constable is available to assist him<sup>10</sup> or the constable has taken him into custody from a person other than a constable without the assistance of any other constable and no other constable is available to assist him<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1252 (b) it appears to the constable that he will be unable to take the arrested person to a designated police station without the arrested person injuring himself, the constable or some other person<sup>12</sup>.

If the first police station to which an arrested person is taken after his arrest is not a designated police station, he must be taken to a designated police station not more than six hours after his arrival at the first police station unless he is released previously<sup>13</sup>.

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(1)(a) (s 30(1), (7), (10), (11) substituted, ss 30(1A), (1B), (7A), (10A), 30A-30D added, and s 30(2), (12) amended, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 4). For these purposes, an arrest for failure to answer police bail under s 46A (as added and amended) (see PARA 941 post) is to be treated as an arrest for an offence: s 46A(3)(a) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(2)). This is subject to the obligation in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(2) (as added) (see PARA 941 post): s 46A(3)(a) (as so added).

2 Ibid s 30(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

3 Ibid s 30(1A) (as added: see note 1 supra). Subject to s 30(3), (5) (see the text and notes 7-12 infra), the police station to which an arrested person is taken under s 30(1A) (as added) must be a designated police station: s 30(2) (as amended: see note 1 supra). As to designated police stations see PARA 938 post. The persons who may take an arrested person to a police station include suitably designated escort officers: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 para 34 (as amended); and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529. Where there is any delay the reasons for the delay must be recorded when the arrested person first arrives at a police station or (as the case may be) is released on bail: s 30(11) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

Nothing in s 30(1A) (as added) or s 30A (as added) (see the text and note 4 infra) prevents a constable delaying taking a person to a police station or releasing him on bail if the presence of that person at a place other than a police station is necessary in order to carry out such investigations as it is reasonable to carry out immediately (s 30(10), (10A) (s 30(10) as substituted and s 30(10A) as added: see note 1 supra), although this does not affect the Immigration Act 1971 s 4, Sch 2 para 18(3) (power to take into custody for purpose of ascertaining immigration status: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(13). Even where a constable is justified in delaying taking a person to a police station, he is not entitled to ask a lengthy series of questions which ought properly to be asked at a police station where the relevant provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and the codes of practice apply; if he does, he risks having the answers excluded under s 78 (see PARA 1365 post): R v Khan [1993] Crim LR 54, CA.

Also, nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(1A) (as added) or s 30A (as added) is to be taken to affect: (1) the Immigration Act 1971 Sch 2 paras 16(3) or 18(1) (detention at places other than police stations: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(12)(a) (as amended: see note 1 supra)); (2) the Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 34(1) (as amended) (power of constable to take drunken offender to treatment centre: see PARA 596 ante) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(12)(b) (as so amended)); or (3) any provision of the Terrorism Act 2000 (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30(12)(c) (s 30(12) as so amended; and s 30(12)(c) added by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (2))).

Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 30(1B), 30A(1) (as added: see note 1 supra). Such bail is commonly described as 'street bail'. A person may be released on bail under s 30A(1) (as added) at any time before he arrives at a police station (s 30A(2) (as so added)) and must be required to attend a police station (s 30A(3) (as so added)). No other requirement may be imposed on the person as a condition of bail: s 30A(4) (as so added). The police station which the bailed person is required to attend may be any police station: s 30A(5) (as so added). Nothing in the Bail Act 1976 (see PARA 1165 et seq post) applies in relation to bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30A (as added): s 30C(3) (as so added).

Where a constable grants bail to a person under s 30A (as added) he must give that person a notice in writing before he is released (s 30B(1) (as so added)) stating the offence for which he was arrested (s 30B(2)(a) (as so added)) and the ground on which he was arrested (s 30B(2)(b) (as so added)) and informing him that he is required to attend a police station (s 30B(3) (as so added)). The notice may also specify the police station which the person is required to attend and the time when he is required to attend (s 30B(4) (as so added)), and if it does not include such information the person must subsequently be given a further notice in writing which does contain it (s 30B(5) (as so added)). The person may be required to attend a different police station from that specified in the notice under s 30B(1) or (5) (as added) or to attend at a different time (s 30B(6) (as so added)); and he must be given notice in writing of any such change, although more than one such notice may be given to him (s 30B(7) (as so added)).

A person who has been required to attend a police station is not required to do so if he is given notice in writing that his attendance is no longer required: s 30C(1) (as so added). If a person is required to attend a police station which is not a designated police station he must be either released (s 30C(2)(a) (as so added)) or taken to a designated police station (s 30C(2)(b) (as so added)) not more than six hours after his arrival (s 30C(2) (as so added)).

Nothing in ss 30A-30C (as added) prevents the re-arrest without a warrant of a person released on bail under s 30A (as added) if new evidence justifying a further arrest has come to light since his release: s 30C(4) (as so added).

A constable may arrest without a warrant a person who has been released on bail under s 30A (as added) subject to a requirement to attend a specified police station (s 30D(1)(a) (as so added)) but who fails to attend the police station at the specified time (s 30D(1)(b) (as so added)). For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in a notice under s 30B(1) or (5) (as added) or, if notice of change has been given under s 30B(7) (as added), in that notice (s 30D(3) (as so added)). A person so arrested must be taken to a police station (which may be the specified police station or any other police station) as soon as practicable after the arrest: s 30D(2) (as so added). For the purposes of s 30 (as added) (subject to the obligation in s 30D(2) (as added)) and s 31 (see PARA 934 post), an arrest under s 30D (as added) is to be treated as an arrest for an offence: s 30D(4) (as so added).

5 le under ibid s 30A (as added) (see the text and note 4 supra).

6 Ibid s 30(7) (as substituted: see note 1 supra); s 30(7A) (as added: see note 1 supra). A constable who so releases a person must record the fact that he has done so (s 30(8)) and must make that record as soon as is practicable after the release (s 30(9)).

UPDATE

933 Arrest elsewhere than at police station

NOTE 4--1984 Act s 30A(4) replaced by s 30A(3A), (3B), (4) (substituted by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 6 para 2). Where a constable releases a person on bail under the 1984 Act s 30A(1) no recognisance for the person's surrender to custody must be taken from the person, no security for the person's surrender to custody must be taken from the person or from anyone else on the person's behalf, the person must not be required to provide a surety or sureties for his surrender to custody and no requirement to reside in a bail hostel may be imposed as a condition of bail: s 30A(3A) (as so substituted). Subject to s 30A(3A), where a constable releases a person on bail under s 30A(1) the constable may impose, as conditions of the bail, such requirements as appear to the constable to be necessary to secure that the person surrenders to custody, to secure that the person does not commit an offence while on bail, to secure that the person does not interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice, whether in relation to himself or any other person or for the person's own protection or, if the person is under the age of 17, for the person's own welfare or in the person's own interests: s 30A(3B) (as so substituted). Where a person is released on bail under s 30A(1), a requirement may be imposed on the person as a condition of bail only under s 30A(1)-(3): s 30A(4) (as so substituted).

If the person referred to in s 30B is granted bail subject to conditions under s 30A(3B), the notice also must specify the requirements imposed by those conditions, must explain the opportunities under ss 30CA(1), 30CB(1) for the variation of those conditions, and if it does not specify the police station at which the person is required to attend, must specify a police station at which the person may make a request under s 30CA(1)(b): s 30B(4A) (added by the 2006 Act Sch 6 para 3).

Where a person released on bail under the 1984 Act s 30A(1) is on bail subject to conditions, a relevant officer at the police station at which the person is required to attend, or where no notice under s 30B specifying that police station has been given to the person, a relevant officer at the police station specified under s 30B(4A)(c), may, at the request of the person but subject to s 30A(2), vary the conditions: s 30CA(1) (ss 30CA, 30CB added by the 2006 Act Sch 6 para 4). On any subsequent request made in respect of the same grant of bail, s 30CA(1) confers power to vary the conditions of the bail only if the request is based on information that, in the case of the previous request or each previous request, was not available to the relevant officer considering that previous request when he was considering it: s 30CA(2) (as so added). Where conditions of bail granted to a person under s 30A(1) are varied under s 30CA(1), (1) s 30A(3A) applies; (2) requirements imposed by the conditions as so varied must be requirements that appear to the relevant officer varying the conditions to be necessary for any of the purposes mentioned in s 30A(3B); and (3) the relevant officer who varies the conditions must give the person notice in writing of the variation: s 30CA(3) (as so added). Power under s 30CA(1) to vary conditions is, subject to heads (1), (2), power to vary or rescind any of the conditions and impose further conditions: s 30CA(4) (as so added). 'Relevant officer', in relation to a designated police station, means a custody officer but, in relation to any other police station (a) means a constable, or a person designated as a staff custody officer under the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529), who is not involved in the investigation of the offence for which the person making the request under s 30CA(1) was under arrest when granted bail under s 30A(1), if such a constable or officer is readily available; and (b) if no such constable or officer is readily available, means a constable other than the one who granted bail to the person, if such a constable is readily available and, if no such constable is readily available, means the constable who granted bail: s 30CA(5) (as so added).

Where a person released on bail under s 30A(1) is on bail subject to conditions, a magistrates' court may, on an application by or on behalf of the person, vary the conditions if (i) the conditions have been varied under s 30CA(1) since being imposed under s 30A(3B); (ii) a request for variation under s 30CA(1) of the conditions has been made and refused; or (iii) a request for variation under s 30CA(1) of the conditions has been made and the period of 48 hours beginning with the day when the request was made has expired without the request having been withdrawn or the conditions having been varied in response to the request: s 30CB(1) (as so added). In proceedings on an application for a variation under s 30CB(1), a ground may not be relied on unless in a case falling within head (i) above, the ground was relied on in the request in response to which the conditions were varied under s 30CA(1) or in a case falling within head (ii) or (iii) above, the ground was relied on in the request mentioned in that head, but this does not prevent the court, when deciding the application, from considering different grounds arising out of a change in circumstances that has occurred since the making of the application: s 30CB(2) (as so added). Where conditions of bail granted to a person under s 30A(1) are varied under s 30CB(1), (A) s 30A(3A) applies; (B) requirements imposed by the conditions as so varied must be requirements that appear to the court varying the conditions to be necessary for any of the purposes mentioned in s 30A(3B); and (c) that bail does not lapse but continues subject to the conditions as so varied: s 30CB(3) (as so added). Power under s 30CB(1) to vary conditions is, subject to heads (A), (B), power to vary or rescind any of the conditions and to impose further conditions: s 30CB(4) (as so added).

A person who has been released on bail under s 30A may be arrested without a warrant by a constable if the constable has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person has broken any of the conditions of bail: s 30D(2A) (s 30D(2A), (2B) added, s 30D(4) amended by the 2006 Act Sch 6 para 5). A person arrested under the 1984 Act s 30D(2A) must be taken to a police station, which may be the specified police station mentioned in s 30D(1) or any other police station, as soon as practicable after the arrest: s 30D(2B) (as so added). Reference to obligation in s 30D(2) is now to obligations in s 30D(2), (2B): s 30D(4) (as so amended).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. #### 934. Arrest for further offence.

Where:

1253 (1) a person has been arrested for an offence<sup>1</sup> and is at a police station in consequence of that arrest<sup>2</sup>; and he must be arrested for that other offence<sup>5</sup>.

1254 (2) it appears to a constable<sup>3</sup> that, if he were released from that arrest, he would be liable to arrest for some other offence<sup>4</sup>,

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 31(a)(i). For these purposes, an arrest under s 46A (as added and amended) (power to arrest for failure to answer police bail: see PARA 941 post) is treated as an arrest for an offence (s 46A(3)(b) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(2))); however, an arrest for breach of an injunction with a power of arrest under what is now the Family Law Act 1996 is not an arrest for an offence (Wheeldon v Wheeldon [1997] 3 FCR 769, [1998] 1 FLR 463, CA).

3 Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 31(b).

5 Ibid s 31. The purpose of s 31 is to prevent the release and immediate re-arrest of the accused; there is nothing to prevent the constable delaying arrest under s 31 until such time as the accused's release is imminent: R v Samuel [1988] QB 615 at 622, 87 Cr App Rep 232 at 238, CA, per Hodgson J (obiter); and see also Wheeldon v Wheeldon [1997] 3 FCR 769, [1998] 1 FLR 463, CA. A constable's powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 31 may also be exercised by a suitably designated investigating officer: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 para 21; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(3) ARREST/(iv) Procedure Following Arrest/935. Bail after arrest.

935. Bail after arrest.

A release on bail<sup>1</sup> of a person under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>2</sup> is a release on bail granted in accordance with specified provisions in the Bail Act 1976<sup>3</sup>; but nothing in the Bail Act 1976 prevents the re-arrest<sup>4</sup> without warrant of a person released on bail subject to a duty to attend at a police station if new evidence justifying a further arrest has come to light since his release<sup>5</sup>.

Where a custody officer<sup>6</sup> grants bail to a person subject to a duty to appear before a magistrates' court, he must appoint for the appearance either:

- 1255 (1) a date which is not later than the first sitting of the court after the person is charged with the offence<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1256 (2) where he is informed by the designated officer for the relevant local justice area that the appearance cannot be accommodated until a later date, that later date<sup>8</sup>.

Where a custody officer has granted bail to a person subject to a duty to appear at a police station, the custody officer may give notice in writing to that person that his attendance at the police station is not required<sup>9</sup>.

1 For these purposes, references to 'bail' are references to bail subject to a duty either to appear before a magistrates' court at such time and such place, or to attend at such police station at such time, as the custody officer (see PARA 939 post) may appoint: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(3) (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 46(1)). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(3) (as amended) is subject to s 47(3A), (4) (s 47(3A) as added) (see the text and notes 7-9 infra): s 47(3) (as so amended).

2 le under ibid Pt IV (ss 34-51) (as amended): see PARA 938 et seq post.

3 Ibid s 47(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 27(1); and by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 28, Sch 2 paras 1, 6(1)-(3)). The specified provisions are the Bail Act 1976 s 3 (as amended), s 3A (as added and amended), s 5 (as amended), s 5A (as added and amended) (see PARAS 1167-1168, 1174 post) as they apply to bail granted by a constable: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(1) (as so amended).

The normal powers to impose conditions of bail are available to the custody officer where he releases a person on bail under s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) (see PARA 941 post) or s 38(1) (as amended) (see PARA 944 post) (including that provision as applied by s 40(10) (as amended) (see PARA 944 post)), but not in any other case: s 47(1A) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 27(1)(b); and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 2 paras 1, 6(3)). For the meaning of 'the normal powers to impose conditions of bail' see the Bail Act 1976 s 3(6) (as amended); and PARA 1167 note 19 post (definition applied by Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(1A) (as so added)). No application may be made under the Bail Act 1976 s 5B (as added and amended) (see PARA 1175 post) if a person is released on bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) or s 37C(2)(b) (as added) (see PARAS 941, 943 post): s 47(1B) (s 47(1B)-(1F) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 2 para 6(4)).

Where a person released on bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) or s 37C(2)(b) (as added) is on bail subject to conditions:

360 (1) he is not entitled to make an application under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 43B (as added) (power to grant bail where police bail has been granted: see PARA 1185 post) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(1C), (1D) (as so added));

361 (2) a magistrates' court may, on an application by or on his behalf, vary the conditions of bail (s 47(1E) (as so added)); and

362 (3) where a magistrates' court so varies the conditions of bail, that bail will not lapse but continues subject to the conditions as so varied (s 47(1F) (as so added)).

For the meaning of 'vary' see the Bail Act 1976 s 2(2); and PARA 1167 note 35 post (definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(1E) (as so added)).

4 Where a person who was released on bail under ibid Pt IV (as amended) subject to a duty to attend at a police station is re-arrested, the provisions of Pt IV (as amended) apply to him as they apply to a person arrested for the first time (s 47(7) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(4)(e); and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 2 para 10(b))), although this does not apply to a person who is arrested under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A (as added and amended) (power to arrest for failure to answer police bail: see PARA 941 post) or who has attended a police station in accordance with the grant of bail (and who accordingly is deemed by s 34(7) (see PARA 945 post) to have been arrested for an offence) (s 47(7) (as so amended)).

5 As to custody officers see PARA 939 post.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(2). Where a person who has been granted bail under Pt IV (as amended) and either has attended at the police station in accordance with the grant of bail or has been arrested under s 46A (as added and amended) (see PARA 941 post) is detained at any police station, any time during which he was in police detention prior to being granted bail is to be included as part of any period which falls to be calculated under Pt IV (as amended): s 47(6) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(4)(d); and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 2 para 10(a)). For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 post.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(3A)(a) (s 47(3A) added by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 46(2)).

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(3A)(b) (as added (see note 7 supra); and amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 283).

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47(4). As to the modifications to s 47 when a person is charged with an offence in accordance with the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87(4) (re-trial for serious offences) see PARA 1945 post.

935 Bail after arrest

NOTE 1--References to 'bail' are references to bail subject to a duty (1) to appear before a magistrates' court at such time and such place as the custody officer may appoint; (2) to attend at such police station as the custody officer may appoint at such time as he may appoint for the purposes of (a) proceedings in relation to a live link direction under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 57C (see PARA 1259); and (b) any preliminary hearing in relation to which such a direction is given; or (3) to attend at such police station as the custody officer may appoint at such time as he may appoint for purposes other than those mentioned in head (2) above: 1984 Act s 47(3) (amended by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 46(5)) (in force in specified local justice areas: SI 2007/709, SI 2008/2785).

NOTE 3--Reference to 1984 Act s 37(7)(a) is now to s 37: s 47(1A) (amended by 2006 Act Sch 6 para 6). Reference to 1984 Act s 37(7)(a) or s 37C(2)(b) is now to s 37, 37C(2)(b) or 37CA(2)(b): 1984 Act s 47(1B), (1C) (amended by 2006 Act Sch 6 para 11).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(4) SEARCH UPON ARREST/936. Search upon arrest.

(4) SEARCH UPON ARREST

936. Search upon arrest.

A constable may search an arrested person, in any case where the person to be searched has been arrested at a place other than a police station, if the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that the arrested person may present a danger to himself or others<sup>1</sup>.

A constable also has power in any such case:

1257 (1) to search the arrested person for anything which he might use to assist him to escape from lawful custody<sup>2</sup> or which might be evidence relating to an offence<sup>3</sup>; and

1258 (2) if the offence for which he has been arrested is an indictable offence<sup>4</sup>, to enter and search any premises<sup>5</sup> in which he was when arrested or immediately before he was arrested for evidence relating to the offence<sup>6</sup>.

The power to search conferred by these provisions is only a power to search to the extent that is reasonably required for the purpose of discovering any such thing or any such evidence<sup>7</sup>; and the powers so conferred to search a person are not to be construed as authorising a constable to require a person to remove any of his clothing in public other than an outer coat, jacket or gloves (although they do authorise a search of a person's mouth)<sup>8</sup>.

A constable may not search a person in the exercise of the power conferred by head (1) above unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person to be searched may have concealed on him anything for which a search is so permitted<sup>9</sup>; nor may a constable search premises in the exercise of the power conferred by head (2) above unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that there is evidence for which a search is so permitted on the premises<sup>10</sup>.

In so far as the power of search conferred by head (2) above relates to premises consisting of two or more separate dwellings, it is limited to a power to search:

1259 (a) any dwelling in which the arrest took place or in which the person arrested was immediately before his arrest<sup>11</sup>; and

1260 (b) any parts of the premises which the occupier of any such dwelling uses in common with the occupiers of any other dwellings comprised in the premises<sup>12</sup>.

1 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 32(1). Nothing in s 32 (as amended) is to be taken to affect the power conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 43 (search: see PARA 426 ante): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 32(10) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (3)).

A constable searching a person in the exercise of this power may seize and retain anything he finds, if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person searched might use it to cause physical injury to himself or to any other person: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 32(8). For the additional powers of seizure where a search is made under s 32 (as amended) see the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 51; and PARA 891 ante.

Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 32(2)(a)(i). A constable searching a person in the exercise of the power conferred by s 32(2)(a) may seize and retain anything he finds, other than an item subject to legal privilege, if he has reasonable grounds for believing either that the person might use it to assist him to escape from lawful custody (s 32(9)(a)) or that it is evidence of an offence or has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence (s 32(9)(b)). ARREST AND DETENTION/(4) SEARCH UPON ARREST/937. Powers of search available after arrest under cross-border powers.

937. Powers of search available after arrest under cross-border powers.

Particular search powers are available to a constable in relation to a person arrested in Scotland pursuant to a warrant issued in England, Wales or Northern Ireland<sup>1</sup>, a person arrested in England or Wales pursuant to a warrant issued in Northern Ireland<sup>2</sup>, a person arrested in Northern Ireland pursuant to a warrant issued in England or Wales<sup>3</sup>, a person arrested by an English constable in Scotland or Northern Ireland<sup>4</sup> and a person arrested by a Northern Irish constable in England, Wales or Scotland<sup>5</sup>. A constable may search the person if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person may present a danger to himself or others<sup>6</sup>. A constable may search the person for anything which he might use to assist him to escape from lawful custody<sup>7</sup> or which might be evidence relating to an offence<sup>8</sup>, and may enter and search any premises<sup>9</sup> in which the person was when, or immediately before, he was arrested for evidence relating to the offence for which he was arrested<sup>10</sup>, but this power to search is limited to the extent that is reasonably required for the purpose of discovering any such thing or any such evidence<sup>11</sup>.

The powers conferred by these provisions to search a person are not to be construed as authorising a constable to require a person to remove any of his clothing in public other than an outer coat, jacket, headgear, gloves or footwear but they do authorise a search of a person's mouth<sup>12</sup>.

6    Ibid s 139(1), (2). A constable searching a person pursuant to this power may seize and retain anything he finds, if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person searched might use it to cause physical injury to himself or to any other person: s 139(9). Nothing in s 139 affects the power conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 43 (search: see PARA 426 ante): Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(11) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 9).

7    Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(3)(a)(i). A constable may not search a person in the exercise of the powers conferred by s 139(3)(a) unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person to be searched may have concealed on him anything for which a search is permitted thereunder: s 139(6). A constable searching a person in the exercise of the power conferred by s 139(3)(a) may seize and retain anything he finds, other than an item subject to legal privilege, if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person might use it to assist him to escape from lawful custody (s 139(10)(a)) or that it is evidence of an offence, or has been obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence (s 139(10)(b)). For the meaning of 'item subject to legal privilege', as respects anything in the possession of a person searched in England and Wales, see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 10; and PARA 873 note 8 ante (definition applied by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(12)). For the meaning of 'item subject to legal privilege', as respects anything in the possession of a person searched in Scotland, see the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 412; definition applied by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(12) (amended by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 456, Sch 11 paras 1, 24). For the meaning of 'item subject to legal privilege', as respects anything in the possession of a person searched in Northern Ireland, see the Police and Criminal Evidence

(Northern Ireland) Order 1989, SI 1989/1341 (NI 12) art 12; definition applied by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(12).

8 Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(3)(a)(ii). See note 7 supra.

9 'Premises' includes any place and, in particular, includes any vehicle, vessel, aircraft or hovercraft, any offshore installation, and any tent or movable structure: ibid s 139(12). For the meaning of 'offshore installation' see the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 s 1 (definition applied by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 139(12)).

10 Ibid s 139(3)(b). A constable may not search premises in the exercise of this power unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that there is evidence for which a search is permitted thereunder: s 139(7). In so far as the power of search conferred by s 139(3)(b) relates to premises consisting of two or more separate dwellings, it is limited to a power to search any dwelling in which the arrest took place or in which the person arrested was immediately before his arrest (s 139(8)(a)) and any parts of the premises which the occupier of any such dwelling uses in common with the occupiers of any other dwellings comprised in the premises (s 139(8)(b)).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(5) DETENTION/938. Meaning of 'designated police station'.

(5) DETENTION

938. Meaning of 'designated police station'.

The chief officer of police<sup>1</sup> for each police area<sup>2</sup> must designate the police stations in his area which<sup>3</sup> are to be the stations in that area to be used for the purpose of detaining arrested persons<sup>4</sup>. A chief officer's duty is to designate police stations appearing to him to provide enough accommodation for that purpose<sup>5</sup>. A chief officer may<sup>6</sup> designate a station which was not previously designated and may direct that a designation of a station previously made is to cease to operate<sup>7</sup>.

'Designated police station' means a police station for the time being designated under these provisions<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to chief officers of police and their functions see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 178 et seq.

2 As to police areas see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

4 Ibid s 35(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 paras 1,6).

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 35(2). The Chief Constable of the British Transport Police Force may designate police stations which (in addition to those designated under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 35(1) (as amended)) may be used for the purpose of detaining arrested persons: see s 35(2A) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 paras 11, 12); and the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 73, Sch 5 para 4(1), (2). As to the British Transport Police Force see Pt 3 (ss 18-77); and RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 281 et seq.

6 le without prejudice to the Interpretation Act 1978 s 12 (continuity of duties): see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1343.

939. Custody officers.

One or more custody officers<sup>1</sup> must be appointed for each designated police station<sup>2</sup>. A custody officer for a designated police station must be appointed either:

- 1261 (1) by the chief officer of police<sup>3</sup> for the area<sup>4</sup> in which the designated police station is situated<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1262 (2) by such other police officer as the chief officer of police for that area may direct<sup>6</sup>.

No officer may be appointed a custody officer unless he is of at least the rank of sergeant<sup>7</sup>. However, an officer of any rank may perform the functions of a custody officer at a designated police station if a custody officer is not readily available to perform them<sup>8</sup>.

None of the functions of a custody officer in relation to a person may be performed by an officer who at the time when the function falls to be performed is involved in the investigation of an offence for which that person is in police detention<sup>9</sup> at that time<sup>10</sup>; but nothing in this provision is to be taken to prevent a custody officer:

- 1263 (a) performing any function assigned to custody officers by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>11</sup> or by a code of practice issued under the Act<sup>12</sup>;
- 1264 (b) carrying out the statutory duty<sup>13</sup> imposed on custody officers<sup>14</sup>;
- 1265 (c) doing anything in connection with the identification of a suspect<sup>15</sup>; or
- 1266 (d) doing anything under specified provisions<sup>16</sup> of the Road Traffic Act 1988<sup>17</sup>.

Where an arrested person is taken to a police station which is not a designated police station, or where a person attends a police station which is not a designated station to answer to bail<sup>18</sup>, the functions in relation to him which at a designated police station would be the functions of a custody officer must be performed:

- 1267 (i) by an officer who is not involved in the investigation of an offence for which he is in police detention, if such an officer is readily available<sup>19</sup>; and
- 1268 (ii) if no such officer<sup>20</sup> is readily available, by the officer who took him to the station<sup>21</sup> or any other officer<sup>22</sup>.

Where<sup>23</sup> an officer of a force maintained by a police authority who took an arrested person to a police station is to perform the functions of a custody officer in relation to him, the officer must inform an officer who is attached to a designated police station<sup>24</sup>, and is of at least the rank of inspector<sup>25</sup>, that he is to do so<sup>26</sup>. This duty must be performed as soon as it is practicable to perform it<sup>27</sup>.

1 A custody officer must perform the functions in Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers as soon as practicable, although a custody officer will not be in breach of the code if delay is justifiable and reasonable steps are taken to prevent unnecessary delay: Code C para 1.1A. The custody record must show when a delay has occurred and the reason: Code C para 1.1A. This provision is intended to cover delays which may occur in processing detainees, eg if a large number of suspects are brought into the station simultaneously to be placed in custody, or if interview rooms are all being used, or if there are difficulties contacting an appropriate adult, solicitor or interpreter: Code C Guidance note 1H. For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 post.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(1). For the meaning of 'designated police station' see PARA 938 ante.

3 As to chief officers of police and their functions see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 178 et seq.

4 As to police areas see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(2)(a) (s 36(2) amended, and s 36(2A) added, by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 paras 11, 13(1)-(3)). A custody officer for a police station designated under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 35(2A) (as added) (see PARA 938 ante) must be appointed by the Chief Constable of the British Transport Police Force (s 36(2A)(a) (as so added)) or by such other member of that force as that Chief Constable may direct (s 36(2A)(b) (as so added)). See also the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 73, Sch 5 para 4(1), (2). See Vince v Chief Constable of Dorset [1993] 2 All ER 321, [1993] 1 WLR 415, CA (chief constable's duty is to appoint one custody officer for each designated police station, with discretion (which must be exercised reasonably) to appoint more than one custody officer).

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(2)(b) (as amended: see note 5 supra).

7 Ibid s 36(3). As from a day to be appointed it is instead provided that no person may be appointed a custody officer unless he is either a police officer of at least the rank of sergeant or he is a staff custody officer: s 36(3)(a), (b) (s 36(3) prospectively substituted, and s 36(11) prospectively added, by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 121(1), (2), (6)). For these purposes, 'staff custody officer' means a person who has been designated as such under the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(11) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the delegation of authority by police officers see further PARA 858 ante.

8 Ibid s 36(4). The provision in s 36(4) that any officer can perform the custody officer's duties if one is not 'readily' available does not mean that any officer can perform the custody officer's duties if one is not 'normally' or 'ordinarily' available but that he can do so only if a custody officer is not actually at the station and cannot, without much difficulty, be fetched there: see Vince v Chief Constable of Dorset [1993] 2 All ER 321, [1993] 1 WLR 415, CA. References to a custody officer in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 37-122 (as amended) include references to an officer other than a custody officer who is performing the functions of a custody officer by virtue of s 36(4): s 36(8). As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so that, instead of the reference to an officer other than a custody officer who is performing the functions of a custody officer, there is a reference to a person other than a custody officer who is performing those functions: see s 36(8) (prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 121(1), (5)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

References in Code C to a custody officer include any police officer, or any designated staff custody officer acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by his designation, performing the functions of a custody officer: Code C para 1.9.

9 A person is 'in police detention' if:

363 (1) he has been taken to a police station after being arrested for an offence or after being arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 (see PARA 420 ante) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 118(2)(a) (s 118(2) amended by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 107, Sch 7 para 9(9); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 118(2)(a) substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125, Sch 15 para 5(1), (12)); or

and in either case he is detained there or is detained elsewhere in the charge of a constable (except that a person who is at a court after being charged is not in police detention for these purposes) (s 118(2) (as so amended)). As to voluntary attendance at a police station see PARA 909 ante. Where a person is in another's lawful custody by virtue of the Police Reform Act 2002 Sch 4 para 22, 34(1) or 35(3) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARAS 529, 531) he is treated as in police detention: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 118(2A) (added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 107, Sch 7 para 9(9)).

An individual detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 s 5 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 519) is deemed to be in legal custody throughout the period of his detention and, after having been taken to a designated place, is deemed to be in police detention for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, subject to the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 s 5(8) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 519): s 5(7)(a), (b)(i).

Persons detained under the legislation relating to terrorism (ie the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41, Sch 8 (see PARA 420 et seq ante) and other provisions thereof) are not subject to any part of Code C: Code C para 1.11. Such persons are subject to Code H (see PARA 421 et seq ante): Code C para 1.11.

10 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(5). As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as to provide that none of the functions of a custody officer in relation to a person may be performed by an individual who at the time when the function falls to be performed is involved in the investigation of an offence for which that person is in police detention at that time: see s 36(5) (prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 121(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

This provision is subject to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984s 36(6)-(10) (as amended; prospectively amended) (see the text and notes 11-27 infra) and s 39(2) (see PARA 946 post).

18 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(7A) (s 36(7A), (7B) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 paras 1, 7). The reference in the text to attending a police station which is not a designated station to answer to bail is a reference to attending such a station to answer to bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30A (as added) (see PARA 933 ante) as it applies where a person is taken to such a station: s 36(7A) (as so added).

19 Ibid s 36(7)(a). As from a day to be appointed functions which would be the functions of a custody officer may also be performed under this provision by a staff custody officer: see s 36(7)(a) (s 36(7) prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 121(1), (4)).

20 As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as to refer to a person instead of an officer: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 36(7)(b) (prospectively amended: see note 19 supra).

21 Where ibid s 36(7) (prospectively amended) applies because of s 36(7A) (as added) (see the text and note 18 supra), the reference to the officer who took him to the station is to be read as a reference to the officer who granted him bail: s 36(7B) (as added: see note 18 supra).

22 Ibid s 36(7)(b) (prospectively amended: see note 19 supra). See also note 20 supra.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(5) DETENTION/940. Custody records.

940. Custody records.

When a person is brought to a police station under arrest, is arrested at the police station having attended there voluntarily, or attends a police station to answer bail, he should be brought before the custody officer<sup>1</sup> as soon as practicable after his arrival at the station or, if appropriate, following arrest after attending the police station voluntarily<sup>2</sup>.

A separate custody record must be opened as soon as practicable for each person who is brought to a police station under arrest or is arrested at the police station having attended there voluntarily to answer street bail<sup>3</sup>. All information recorded<sup>4</sup> must be recorded as soon as practicable in the custody record unless otherwise specified<sup>5</sup>. In the case of any action requiring the authority of an officer of a specified rank, his name and rank must be noted in the custody record<sup>6</sup>.

The custody officer is responsible for the accuracy and completeness of the custody record and for ensuring that the record or a copy of the record accompanies a detainee if he is transferred to another police station<sup>7</sup>. The record must show the time of, and reason for, transfer and the time a person is released from detention<sup>8</sup>.

A solicitor or appropriate adult<sup>9</sup> must be permitted to consult a detainee's custody record as soon as practicable after his arrival at the station and at any other time whilst the person is detained<sup>10</sup>. Arrangements for this access must be agreed with the custody officer and may not unreasonably interfere with his duties<sup>11</sup>. When a detainee leaves police detention or is taken before a court he, his legal representative or the appropriate adult must be given, on request, a copy of the custody record as soon as practicable<sup>12</sup>.

All entries in custody and written interviews records must be timed and signed by the maker; and records on a computer must be timed and contain the operator's identification<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

2 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 2.1A. This applies to designated and non-designated police stations: Code C para 2.1A. As to designated police stations see PARA 938 ante. A person is deemed to be 'at a police station' for these purposes if he is within the boundary of any building or enclosed yard which forms part of that police station: Code C para 2.1A. As to codes of practice under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 see further PARA 908 ante.

3 Code C para 2.1. 'Street bail' means bail granted under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30A (as added) (see PARA 933 ante).

4 Ie under Code C.

5 Code C para 2.1. Any audio or video recording made in the custody area is not part of the custody record: Code C para 2.1. When a person is answering street bail, the custody officer should link any documentation held in relation to arrest with the custody record; and any further action must be recorded on the custody record: Code C para 3.25.

6 Code C para 2.2. This is subject to Code C para 2.6A: see note 13 infra.

7 Code C para 2.3.

8 Code C para 2.3.

9 In the case of a juvenile, the 'appropriate adult' is:

- 365 (1) his parent, guardian or, if he is in local authority or voluntary organisation care, or is otherwise being looked after under the Children Act 1989, a person representing that authority or organisation (Code C para 1.7(a)(i));
- 366 (2) a social worker of a local authority (Code C para 1.7(a)(ii)); or
- 367 (3) failing either of the above, some other responsible adult aged 18 or over who is not a police officer or employed by the police (Code C para 1.7(a)(iii)).

In the case of a person who is mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable, the 'appropriate adult' is:

- 368 (a) a relative, guardian or other person responsible for his care or custody (Code C para 1.7(b)(iv));
- 369 (b) someone experienced in dealing with mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable persons but who is not a police officer or employed by the police (Code C para 1.7(b)(v)); or
- 370 (c) failing either of the above, some other responsible adult aged 18 or over who is not a police officer or employed by the police (Code C para 1.7(b)(vi)).

'Mentally vulnerable' applies to any detainee who, because of his mental state or capacity, may not understand the significance of what is said, of questions or their replies: Code C Guidance note 1G. For the meaning of 'mental disorder' see the Mental Health Act 1983 s 1(2); and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 402 (definition applied by Code C Guidance note 1G). When the custody officer has any doubt about the mental state or capacity of a detainee, that detainee should be treated as mentally vulnerable and an appropriate adult called: Code C Guidance note 1G. For further provision in connection with the rights of mentally disordered and mentally vulnerable persons see Code C Annex E.

A person, including a parent or guardian, should not be an appropriate adult if he is suspected of involvement in the offence, is the victim, is a witness, or is involved in the investigation, or if he has received admissions prior to attending to act as the appropriate adult: Code C Guidance note 1B.

If a juvenile's parent is estranged from the juvenile, the parent should not be asked to act as the appropriate adult if the juvenile expressly and specifically objects to his presence: Code C Guidance note 1B: see DPP v Blake [1989] 1 WLR 432, 89 Cr App Rep 179, DC (justices entitled to find that juvenile's estranged father was not an appropriate adult). 'The appropriate adult cannot be a person with whom the juvenile had no empathy': DPP v Blake supra at 440 and 187 per Mann LJ. If a juvenile admits an offence to, or in the presence of, a social worker or member of a youth offending team other than during the time that person is acting as the juvenile's appropriate adult, another appropriate adult should be appointed in the interest of fairness: Code C Guidance note 1C.

In the case of persons who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, it may be more satisfactory if the appropriate adult is someone experienced or trained in their care rather than a relative lacking such qualifications; however, if the detainee prefers a relative to a better qualified stranger or objects to a particular person, his wishes should, if practicable, be respected: Code C Guidance note 1D. A detainee should always be given an opportunity, when an appropriate adult is called to the police station, to consult privately with a solicitor in the appropriate adult's absence if the detainee wants: Code C Guidance note 1E. An appropriate adult is not subject to legal privilege: Code C Guidance note 1E.

The police do not owe a general duty of care to protect an appropriate adult from mental or psychological harm: Leach v Chief Constable of Gloucester Constabulary [1999] 1 All ER 215, [1999] 1 WLR 1421, CA.

10 Code C para 2.4.

11 Code C para 2.4.

12 Code C para 2.4A. This entitlement lasts for a period of 12 months after a person's release: Code C para 2.4A. The detainee, the appropriate adult or the legal representative must be permitted to inspect the original custody record after the detainee has left police detention provided he gives reasonable notice of the request; and any such inspection must be noted in the custody record: Code C para 2.5.

13 Code C para 2.6. Nothing in Code C requires the identity of officers or other police staff to be recorded or disclosed if they reasonably believe recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger: Code C para 2.6A(b). In these cases, they must use their warrant or other identification numbers and the name of their police station: Code C para 2.6A.

The fact and time of a refusal by a detainee to sign a custody record, when asked to do so under Code C, must also be recorded: Code C para 2.7.

941. Duties of custody officer before charge.

Where a person is arrested for an offence<sup>1</sup> either without a warrant<sup>2</sup> or under a warrant not indorsed for bail<sup>3</sup>, the custody officer<sup>4</sup> at each police station where he is detained after his arrest must determine whether he has before him sufficient evidence to charge that person with the offence for which he was arrested and may detain him at the police station for such period as is necessary to enable him to do so<sup>5</sup>.

If the custody officer determines that he does not have such evidence before him, the person arrested must be released either on bail or without bail<sup>6</sup>, unless the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that his detention without being charged is necessary to secure or preserve evidence relating to an offence for which he is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning him<sup>7</sup>. If the custody officer has reasonable grounds for so believing he may authorise the person arrested to be kept in police detention<sup>8</sup>. Where a custody officer authorises a person who has not been charged to be kept in police detention, he must, as soon as is practicable, make a written record of the grounds for the detention<sup>9</sup>.

If the custody officer determines that he has before him sufficient evidence to charge the person arrested with the offence for which he was arrested, the person arrested:

- 1269 (1) must be released without charge and on bail<sup>10</sup> for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>11</sup> to make a decision<sup>12</sup> whether or not to charge or caution the arrested person<sup>13</sup>;
- 1270 (2) must be released without charge and on bail but not for that purpose<sup>14</sup>;
- 1271 (3) must be released without charge and without bail<sup>15</sup>; or
- 1272 (4) must be charged<sup>16</sup>.

If the person arrested is not in a fit state to be so dealt with, he may be kept in police detention until he is<sup>17</sup>. These provisions are subject to the proviso that, in general<sup>18</sup>, a person who at the expiry of 24 hours after the relevant time is in police detention and has not been charged must be released at that time either on bail or without bail<sup>19</sup>. The decision as to how a person is to be dealt with under these provisions must be that of the custody officer<sup>20</sup>.

1 The provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(1)-(6) (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-9 infra) also have effect in relation to a person who has not been charged at the time of review of police detention, and references in s 37(1)-(6) to the person arrested are for those purposes to be read as references to the person whose detention is under review: s 40(8), (8A)(a) (s 40(8) amended, and s 40(8A) added, by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 52(1), (2)). Where, however, a person has been kept in police detention by virtue of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(9) (see the text and note 17 infra) or s 37D(5) (as added) (see PARA 943 post), the provisions of s 37(1)-(6) do not have effect in relation to him, but it is the duty of the review officer to determine whether he is yet in a fit state: s 40(9). See also the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87; and PARA 1945 post.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(1)(a)(i).

3 Ibid s 37(1)(a)(ii). For these purposes, 'indorsed for bail' means indorsed with a direction for bail in accordance with the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 117(2) (see PARA 919 ante): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(15).

4 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. In the application of these provisions in relation to a person who has not been charged at the time of the review (see note 1 supra), this is a reference to the review officer: ibid s 40(8A)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra).

5 Ibid s 37(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 29(1), (4)(a), (5), 168(3), Sch 11). The duty imposed on the custody officer under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(1) (as amended) must be carried out by him as soon as practicable after the person arrested arrives at the police station or, in the case of a person arrested at the police station, as soon as practicable after the arrest: s 37(10).

While a custody officer is to act as an independent filter on decisions to continue detention without charge, he is not required to inquire into the legality of the arrest: DPP v L [1999] Crim LR 752, DC. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(2), (3) (see the text and notes 7, 8 infra) would be unworkable if, in a complicated investigation, a custody officer was required to ask for full details of the evidence or information that had prompted an officer to make an arrest before determining to authorise continued detention without charge: Al Fayed v Metropolitan Police Comr [2004] EWCA Civ 1579, [2004] All ER (D) 391 (Nov).

6 If the offence for which the person is arrested is one in relation to which a sample could be taken under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B (as added) (testing for presence of Class A drugs: see PARA 1031 post) and the custody officer is required in pursuance of this provision to release the person arrested and decides to release him on bail, the detention of the person may be continued to enable a sample to be taken under s 63B (as added): s 37(8A)(a), (8B) (s 37(8A), (8B) added by the Drugs Act 2005 s 23, Sch 1 paras 1, 2). This does not however permit a person to be detained for a period of more than 24 hours after the relevant time: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(8B) (as so added).

7 Ibid s 37(2). As to bail after arrest see PARA 935 ante. See also the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87; and PARA 1945 post.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(3). For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante. See also the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 87; and PARA 1945 post.

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(4). The written record must be made in the presence of the person arrested who must at that time be informed by the custody officer of the grounds for his detention (s 37(5)), although this does not apply where the person arrested is, at the time when the written record is made either incapable of understanding what is said to him (s 37(6)(a)), violent or likely to become violent (s 37(6)(b)), in urgent need of medical attention (s 37(6)(c)), or, in relation to a person who has not been charged at the time of review of detention (see note 1 supra), where the person is asleep (ss 37(6)(aa), 40(8A)(c) (as added: see note 1 supra)). As to the application of s 37(1)-(6) to a person whose detention is under review see PARA 1001 note 4 post.

10 If the offence for which the person is arrested is one in relation to which a sample could be taken under ibid s 63B (as added) (testing for presence of Class A drugs: see PARA 1031 post) and the custody officer decides in pursuance of s 37(7)(a) or (b) (as substituted) (see the text and notes 13, 14 infra) to release the person without charge and on bail, the detention of the person may be continued to enable a sample to be taken under s 63B (as added): s 37(8A)(b), (8B) (as added: see note 6 supra). This does not, however, permit a person to be detained for a period of more than 24 hours after the relevant time: s 37(8B) (as so added).

A constable may arrest without a warrant any person who, having been released on bail under Pt IV (ss 34-51) (as amended) subject to a duty to attend at a police station, fails to attend at that police station at the time appointed for him to do so: s 46A(1). A person who has been released on bail pursuant to s 37(7)(a) (see the text and note 13 infra) may be arrested without warrant by a constable if the constable has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person has broken any of the conditions of bail: s 46A(1A) (s 46A added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(2); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(1A) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 28, Sch 2 paras 1, 5). A person who is so arrested must be taken to the police station appointed as the place at which he is to surrender to custody as soon as practicable after the arrest: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(2) (as so added).

11 Where a person is arrested following a criminal investigation by the Revenue and Customs, references to the Director of Public Prosecutions in ibid s 37 (as amended) and ss 37A, 37B (as added) (see note 13 infra) are to be read as references to the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions: see the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50, Sch 4 para 30; and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 900.

12 Ie under a decision under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37B (as added) (see PARA 942 post).

13 Ibid s 37(7)(a) (s 37(7)(a)-(d) substituted, s 37(7A), (7B) and s 37A added, and s 37(8) amended, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 28, Sch 2 paras 1-3). Where a person is released under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7)(a) (as substituted), it is the duty of the custody officer to inform him that he is being released to enable the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision under s 37B (as added) (see PARA 942 post): s 37(7B) (as so added).

A police officer carrying out the duties imposed on him by s 37 (as amended) and s 38 (as amended) (see PARA 944 post) when charging an arrested person has no power to perform those duties on behalf of a private individual; where such an officer does charge someone, the Director of Public Prosecutions is obliged to take over the conduct of proceedings by virtue of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2) (as amended) (see PARA 1080 post): R v Ealing Justices, ex p Dixon [1990] 2 QB 91, sub nom R v Ealing Magistrates' Court, ex p Dixon [1989] 2 All ER 1050, DC. This decision was not, however, followed in R v Stafford Justices, ex p Customs and Excise Comrs [1991] 2 QB 339, [1991] 2 All ER 201, DC, where it was held that a customs officer investigating an offence, who arrested a person and took him to a police station to be charged by a custody officer under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37, did not thereby surrender the conduct of the prosecution because the charging process is neutral and proceedings can be said to have been 'instituted on behalf of a police force' for the purposes of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3 (as amended) only if the police have carried out the investigation and made the arrest.

The Director of Public Prosecutions may issue guidance for the purpose of enabling custody officers to decide how persons should be dealt with under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7) (as substituted) (s 37A(1)(a) (as so added)), to which custody officers must have regard in deciding how persons should be dealt with under s 37(7) (as substituted) (s 37A(3) (as so added)). The Director of Public Prosecutions may from time to time revise guidance under s 37A (as added): s 37A(2) (as so added). A report under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 9 (report by Director of Public Prosecutions to Attorney General: see PARA 1073 post) must set out the provisions of any guidance issued, and any revisions to guidance made, in the year to which the report relates: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37A(4) (as so added). The Director of Public Prosecutions must publish in such manner as he thinks fit any guidance issued under s 37A (as added) (s 37A(5) (a) (as so added)) and any revisions made to such guidance (s 37A(5)(b) (as so added)). Guidance under s 37A (as added) may make different provision for different cases, circumstances or areas: s 37A(6) (as so added).

A person released on bail under s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) must be released on bail subject to the same conditions (if any) which applied immediately before his arrest: s 37C(4) (as so added). Where a person is so released without charge on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution him or is released on bail under s 37(7)(a) (as substituted), a custody officer may subsequently appoint a different time, or an additional time, at which the person is to attend at the police station to answer bail: s 37D(1) (as so added). The custody officer must give the person notice in writing of the exercise of such power: s 37D(2) (as so added). The exercise of this power does not affect the conditions (if any) to which bail is subject: s 37D(3) (as so added). Where a person so released on bail returns to a police station to answer bail or is otherwise in police detention at a police station, he may be kept in police detention to enable him to be dealt with in accordance with s 37B (as added) or s 37C (as added) (see PARAS 942-943 post) or to enable the power under s 37D(1) (as added) (see PARA 943 post) to be exercised: s 37D(4) (as so added).

If the person is not in a fit state to enable him to be dealt with under these provisions or to enable the power under s 37D(1) (as added) to be exercised, he may be kept in police detention until he is: s 37D(5) (as so added).

Where a person is kept in police detention by virtue of s 37D(4) or (5) (as added), the provisions of s 37(1)-(3), (7) (as amended) and s 40(8) so far as it relates to s 37(1)-(3) (see note 1 supra) do not apply to the offence in connection with which he was released on bail under s 37(7)(a) (as substituted): s 37D(6) (as so added).

14 Ibid s 37(7)(b) (as substituted: see note 13 supra). See notes 10, 13 supra. Where a person is released under s 37(7)(b) (as substituted) or s 37(7)(c) (as substituted) (see the text and note 15 infra) and at the time of his release a decision whether he should be prosecuted for the offence for which he was arrested has not been taken, it is the duty of the custody officer so to inform him: s 37(8) (as amended: see note 13 supra).

15 Ibid s 37(7)(c) (as substituted: see note 13 supra). See note 13 supra.

16 Ibid s 37(7)(d) (as substituted: see note 13 supra). See note 13 supra.

17 Ibid s 37(9).

18 Ie subject to ibid ss 42, 43 (both as amended) (see PARAS 1003-1004 post): s 41(8).

19 See ibid s 41(7); and PARA 1000 post.

20 See ibid s 37(7A) (as added: see note 13 supra).

UPDATE

941 Duties of custody officer before charge

TEXT AND NOTES 10, 11--In head (1) for 'must be released ... purpose' read 'must be released without charge and on bail, or kept in police detention, for the purpose': 1984 Act s 37(7)(a) (amended by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 11).

NOTE 10--The reference in the 1984 Act s 46A(1) to a person who fails to attend at a police station at the time appointed for him to do so includes a reference to a person who (1) attends at a police station to answer to bail granted subject to the duty mentioned in s 47(3)(b) (see PARA 935), but (2) leaves the police station at any time before the beginning of proceedings in relation to a live link direction under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 57C (see PARA 1259) in relation to him, without informing a constable that he does not intend to give his consent to the direction: 1984 Act s 46A(1ZA) (added by 2006 Act s 46(4) (in force in specified local justice areas: SI 2007/709, SI 2008/2785)). Reference to 1984 Act s 37(7)(a) is now to s 37: s 46A(1A) (amended by 2006 Act Sch 6 para 7).

NOTES 13-16--The custody officer has no power to postpone the charging decision under the 1984 Act s 37(7) and detain the suspect while seeking advice as to the appropriate charges: R (on the application of G) v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire Police [2008] EWCA Civ 28, [2008] 4 All ER 594.

NOTE 13--The courts should be reluctant to entertain a challenge by way of judicial review to a decision to caution a person which is inconsistent with a stated police policy: R (on the application of Mondelly) v Metropolitan Police Comr [2006] EWHC 2370 (Admin), (2007) 171 JP 121. 1984 Act s 37(7B) amended: 2006 Act Sch 14 para 9. 1984 Act s 37A(1)(a), (3) amended: 2006 Act Sch 6 para 8(2). 1984 Act s 37D(1) amended: 2006 Act Sch 6 para 9. Where a person released on bail under the 1984 Act s 37(7)(b) or s 37CA(2)(b) returns to a police station to answer bail or is otherwise in police detention at a police station, he may be kept in police detention to enable him to be dealt with in accordance with s 37CA or to enable the power under s 37D(1) to be exercised: s 37D(4A) (s 27D(4A), (5) substituted by 2006 Act Sch 6 para 10(2)). If the person mentioned in the 1984 Act s 37D(4) or (4A) is not in a fit state to enable him to be dealt with as therein mentioned or to enable the power under s 37D(1) to be exercised, he may be kept in police detention until he is: s 37D(5). Section 37D(6) amended: 2006 Act Sch 6 para 10(3).

TEXT AND NOTE 14--The 1984 Act s 37CA applies where a person released on bail under s 37(7)(b) or s 37CA(2)(b) is arrested under s 46A in respect of that bail and is being detained following that arrest at the police station mentioned in s 46A(2): s 37CA(1) (s 37CA added by 2006 Act Sch 6 para 8(1)). The person arrested (1) must be charged; or (2) must be released without charge, either on bail or without bail: 1984 Act s 37CA(2). The decision as to how a person is to be dealt with under s 37CA(2) is to be that of a custody officer: s 37CA(3). A person released on bail under head (2) above, must be released on bail subject to the same conditions, if any, which applied immediately before his arrest: s 37CA(4).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(5) DETENTION/942. Consultation with the Director of Public Prosecutions.

942. Consultation with the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Where a person is released without charge and on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution the arrested person<sup>2</sup>, an officer involved in the investigation of the offence must, as soon as practicable, send specified information<sup>3</sup> to the Director<sup>4</sup>. The Director must then decide whether there is sufficient evidence to charge the person with an offence<sup>5</sup>; and if he decides that there is sufficient evidence so to charge the person he must decide: (1) whether or not the person should be charged<sup>6</sup> and, if so, the offence with which he should be charged<sup>7</sup>; and (2) whether or not the person should be given a caution<sup>8</sup> and, if so, the offence in respect of which he should be given a caution<sup>9</sup>.

The Director must give written notice of his decision to an officer involved in the investigation of the offence<sup>10</sup>. If his decision is that there is not sufficient evidence to charge the person with an offence<sup>11</sup>, or that there is sufficient evidence to charge the person with an offence but that the person should not be charged with an offence or given a caution in respect of an offence<sup>12</sup>, a custody officer must give the person notice in writing that he is not to be prosecuted<sup>13</sup>. If the Director's decision is that the person should be charged with an offence, or given a caution in respect of an offence, the person must be charged or cautioned accordingly<sup>14</sup>. If, however, his decision is that the person should be given a caution in respect of the offence and it proves not to be possible to give the person such a caution, he must instead be charged with the offence<sup>15</sup>.

943. Subsequent detention of person released without charge on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution.

Where a person who has been released without charge on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution him<sup>2</sup> is arrested<sup>3</sup> in respect of that bail<sup>4</sup>, and at the time of his detention following that arrest at the relevant police station<sup>5</sup> the requisite notice<sup>6</sup> has not been given<sup>7</sup>, he must either be charged<sup>8</sup> or released without charge, either on bail or without bail<sup>9</sup>. The decision as to how a person is to be so dealt with must be that of a custody officer<sup>10</sup>.

1 Or, as the case may be, the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions: see PARA 941 note 11 ante.

2 He has been released under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) (see PARA 941 ante) for such purposes.

3 He under ibid s 46A (as added and amended) (power to arrest for failure to answer police bail): see PARA 941 ante.

4 Ibid s 37C(1)(a) (ss 37C, 37D added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 28, Sch 2 paras 1, 3).

5 He the police station specified under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(2) (as added): see PARA 941 ante.

6 He under ibid s 37B(4) (as added): see PARA 942 ante.

7 Ibid s 37C(1)(b) (as added: see note 4 supra). The provisions of s 37C (as added) also apply where such a person, having been so arrested has then been released without charge on bail under s 37C(2)(b) (as added) (see the text and note 9 infra) and subsequently arrested under s 46A (as added) in respect of that bail and at the time of his detention following that arrest at the relevant police station the requisite notice has not been given: s 37C(1) (as so added).

8 Ibid s 37C(2)(a) (as added: see note 4 supra).

9 Ibid s 37C(2)(b) (as added: see note 4 supra). A person released on bail under s 37C(2)(b) (as added) must be released on bail subject to the same conditions (if any) which applied immediately before his arrest: s 37C(4) (as so added). Where a person is so released without charge on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution him or is released on bail under s 37C(2)(b) (as added), a custody officer may subsequently appoint a different time, or an additional time, at which the person is to attend at the police station to answer bail: s 37D(1) (as so added). The custody officer must give the person notice in writing of the exercise of such power: s 37D(2) (as so added). The exercise of this power does not affect the conditions (if any) to which bail is subject: s 37D(3) (as so added). Where a person so released on bail returns to a police station to answer bail or is otherwise in police detention at a police station, he may be kept in police detention to enable him to be dealt with in accordance with s 37B (as added) or s 37C (as added) (see PARAS 941-942 ante) or to enable the power under s 37D(1) (as added) to be exercised: s 37D(4) (as so added).

If the person is not in a fit state to enable him to be dealt with under these provisions or to enable the power under s 37D(1) (as added) to be exercised, he may be kept in police detention until he is: s 37D(5) (as so added).

Where a person is kept in police detention by virtue of s 37D(4) or (5) (as added), the provisions of s 37(1)-(3), (7) (as amended) and s 40(8) so far as it relates to s 37(1)-(3) (see PARA 941 ante) do not apply to the offence in connection with which he was released on bail under s 37C(2)(b): s 37D(6) (as so added).

A person who has been released on bail pursuant to this provision may be arrested without warrant by a constable if the constable has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the person has broken any of the conditions of bail: s 46A(1A) (s 46A added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 29(2); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(1A) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 28, Sch 2 paras 1, 5). A person who is so arrested must be taken to the police station appointed as the place at which he is to surrender to custody as soon as practicable after the arrest: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46A(2) (as so added).

10 Ibid s 37C(3) (as added: see note 4 supra).

UPDATE

943 Subsequent detention of person released without charge on bail for the purpose of enabling the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision about whether or not to charge or caution

NOTE 9--1984 Act s 37D(1) amended: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 6 para 9. 1984 Act s 37D(6) amended: 2006 Act Sch 6 para 10(3). 1984 Act s 46(1A) amended: 2006 Act Sch 6 para 7.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(5) DETENTION/944. Duties of custody officer after charge.

944. Duties of custody officer after charge.

- 1273 (1) if the person arrested is not an arrested juvenile<sup>5</sup>:
- 61
- 96. (a) his name or address cannot be ascertained or the custody officer has reasonable grounds for doubting whether a name or address furnished by him as his name or address is his real name or address<sup>6</sup>;
  - 97. (b) the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the person arrested will fail to appear in court to answer to bail<sup>7</sup>;
  - 98. (c) in the case of a person arrested for an imprisonable offence<sup>8</sup>, the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the detention of the person arrested is necessary to prevent him from committing an offence<sup>9</sup>;
  - 99. (d) in a case where a sample may be taken from the person under the provisions relating to the taking of samples<sup>10</sup>, the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the detention of the person is necessary to enable the sample to be taken from him<sup>11</sup>;
  - 100. (e) in the case of a person arrested for an offence which is not an imprisonable offence, the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the detention of the person arrested is necessary to prevent him from causing physical injury to any other person or from causing loss of or damage to property<sup>12</sup>;
  - 101. (f) the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the detention of the person arrested is necessary to prevent him from interfering with the administration of justice or with the investigation of offences or of a particular offence<sup>13</sup>; or
  - 102. (g) the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the detention of the person arrested is necessary for his own protection<sup>14</sup>;
- 1274 (2) if he is an arrested juvenile<sup>15</sup>:
- 63
- 103. (a) any of the above requirements is satisfied (and, in the case of the requirement relating to the taking of samples<sup>16</sup>, the arrested juvenile has attained the minimum age)<sup>17</sup>; or
  - 104. (b) the custody officer has reasonable grounds for believing that the arrested person ought to be detained in his own interests<sup>18</sup>.

If the release of an arrested person is not so required, the custody officer may authorise him to be kept in police detention<sup>19</sup>. In taking the decisions required by the considerations set out above (except those relating to the ascertainment of the person's name and address and to the detention of a person for his own protection or in his own interests<sup>20</sup>), the custody officer must have regard to the same considerations as those to which a court is required to have regard to in taking the corresponding decisions in considering the matter of bail<sup>21</sup>. Where a custody officer authorises a person who has been charged to be kept in police detention, he must, as soon as practicable, make a written record of the grounds for the detention<sup>22</sup>. The written record must be made in the presence of the person charged who must at that time be informed by the custody officer of the grounds for his detention<sup>23</sup>.

372   (2)   in the case of an arrested juvenile who has attained the age of 12 years, that no secure accommodation is available and that keeping him in other local authority accommodation would not be adequate to protect the public from serious harm from him (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6)(b) (as so substituted; amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 24)), secure that the arrested juvenile is moved to local authority accommodation (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6) (as so substituted)). For the duty of local authorities to receive juveniles in these circumstances see the Children Act 1989 s 21(2)(b); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 863. See further R (on the application of M) v Gateshead Council [2006] EWCA Civ 221, 150 Sol Jo LB 397. In relation to an arrested juvenile charged with a violent offence (ie murder or an offence specified in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 15 Pt 1 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 70)) or a sexual offence (ie an offence specified in Sch 15 Pt 2 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 71)), the reference to protecting the public from serious harm from him is to be construed as a reference to protecting members of the public from death or serious personal injury, whether physical or psychological, occasioned by further such offences committed by him: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6A) (added by the Children Act 1989 s 108(5), Sch 13 para 53(2); substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 59; and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 32 para 44).

A certificate so made in respect of an arrested juvenile must be produced to the court before which he is first brought thereafter: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(7). See also Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 16(7); R v Chief Constable of Cambridgeshire, ex p M [1991] 2 QB 499, 91 Cr App Rep 325, DC (if the custody officer is dissatisfied as to the security of the proposed accommodation, he may refuse transfer to local authority care). For these purposes, 'local authority accommodation' means the accommodation provided by or on behalf of a local authority within the meaning of the Children Act 1989 (see ss 20, 21 (as amended); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 863 et seq) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6A) (as so added and substituted)); and 'secure accommodation' means accommodation provided for the purpose of restricting liberty (s 38(6A) (as so added and substituted)). For the purposes of Pt IV (ss 34-51) (as amended), 'local authority' has the same meaning as in the Children Act 1989 (see s 105(1) (as amended); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 138); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(8) (amended by the Children Act 1989 s 108(5), Sch 13 para 53(3)).

Where an arrested juvenile is moved to local authority accommodation under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6) (as substituted), it is lawful for any person acting on behalf of the local authority to detain him: s 38(6B) (added by the Children Act 1989 Sch 13 para 53(2)).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(5) DETENTION/945. Limitations on police detention.

945. Limitations on police detention.

A person arrested for an offence<sup>1</sup> may not be kept in police detention<sup>2</sup> except in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions<sup>3</sup>. All persons in custody must be dealt with expeditiously, and released as soon as the need for detention no longer applies<sup>4</sup>.

If at any time a custody officer<sup>5</sup>:

- 1275 (1) becomes aware, in relation to any person in police detention, that the grounds for the detention of that person have ceased to apply<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1276 (2) is not aware of any other grounds on which the continued detention of that person could be justified under the statutory provisions<sup>7</sup>, it is the duty of the custody officer to order his immediate release from custody<sup>8</sup>, although a person who appears to the custody officer to have been unlawfully at large when he was arrested is not to be so released<sup>9</sup>.

No person in police detention may be released except on the authority of a custody officer at the police station where his detention was authorised or, if it was authorised at more than one station, a custody officer at the station where it was last authorised<sup>10</sup>.

A person whose release is ordered<sup>11</sup> must be released without bail unless it appears to the custody officer either:

- 1277 (a) that there is need for further investigation of any matter in connection with which he was detained at any time during the period of his detention<sup>12</sup>; or
- 1278 (b) that, in respect of any such matter, proceedings may be taken against him or he may be reprimanded or warned<sup>13</sup>, and, if it so appears, he must be released on bail<sup>14</sup>.

1 A breach of the peace is not an offence for these purposes: Williamson v Chief Constable of West Midlands Police [2003] EWCA Civ 337, [2004] 1 WLR 14.

945 Limitations on police detention

NOTE 3--The 1984 Act s 34(7) does not apply in relation to a person who is granted bail subject to the duty mentioned in s 47(3)(b) (see PARA 935) and who either (1) attends a police station to answer to such bail, or (2) is arrested under s 46A (see PARA 941) for failing to do so, provision as to the treatment of such persons for the purposes of Pt IV (ss 34-51) (see PARA 938 et seq) being made by s 46ZA (see PARA 945A): s 34(8) (added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 46(2) (in force in specified local justice areas: SI 2007/709, SI 2008/2785)).

945A. Persons granted live link bail.

The following provisions are in force in specified local justice areas: SI 2007/709, SI 2008/2785.

An accused person who attends a police station to answer to live link bail is not to be treated as in police detention for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup>. This does not apply in relation to an accused person if (1) at any time before the beginning of proceedings in relation to a live link direction<sup>2</sup> in relation to him, he informs a constable that he does not intend to give his consent to the direction; (2) at any such time, a constable informs him that a live link will not be available for his use for certain purposes<sup>3</sup>; (3) proceedings in relation to a live link direction under certain provisions<sup>4</sup> have begun but he does not give his consent to the direction; or (4) the court determines for any other reason not to give such a direction<sup>5</sup>. If heads (1)-(4) above apply in relation to a person, he is to be treated for certain purposes<sup>6</sup> (a) as if he had been arrested for and charged with the offence in connection with which he was granted bail; and (b) as if he had been so charged at the time when that head first applied to him<sup>7</sup>. An accused person who is arrested<sup>8</sup> for failing to attend at a police station to answer to live link bail, and who is brought to a police station, is to be treated<sup>9</sup> (i) as if he had been arrested for and charged with the offence in connection with which he was granted bail; and (ii) as if he had been so charged at the time when he is brought to the station<sup>10</sup>.

(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS

(i) Initial Procedure

946. Responsibilities in relation to persons detained.

It is the duty of the custody officer<sup>1</sup> at a police station to ensure:

- 1279 (1) that all persons in police detention<sup>2</sup> at that station are treated in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and any code of practice<sup>3</sup> issued under it and relating to the treatment of persons in police detention<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1280 (2) that all matters relating to such persons which are required by the Act or by such codes of practice to be recorded are recorded in the custody records relating to such persons<sup>5</sup>.

If the custody officer, in accordance with any code of practice issued under the Act, transfers or permits the transfer of a person in police detention:

- 1281 (a) to the custody of a police officer investigating an offence for which that person is in police detention<sup>6</sup>; or
- 1282 (b) to the custody of an officer who has charge of that person outside the police station<sup>7</sup>, the custody officer ceases in relation to that person to be subject to the duty relating to the treatment of detained persons<sup>8</sup>; and it is the duty of the officer to whom the transfer is made to ensure that the person is treated in accordance with the provisions of the Act and of any such codes of practice<sup>9</sup>.

If the person detained is subsequently returned to the custody of the custody officer, it is the duty of the officer investigating the offence to report to the custody officer as to the manner in which these provisions and the codes of practice have been complied with while that person was in his custody<sup>10</sup>.

If an arrested juvenile<sup>11</sup> is moved<sup>12</sup> to local authority accommodation<sup>13</sup>, the custody officer ceases in relation to that person to be subject to the duties relating to treatment and the recording of relevant matters<sup>14</sup>.

Where:

- 1283 (i) an officer of higher rank than the custody officer<sup>15</sup> gives directions relating to a person in police detention<sup>16</sup>; and
- 1284 (ii) the directions are at variance with any decision made or action taken by the custody officer in the performance of a duty<sup>17</sup> or with any decision or action which would but for the directions have been made or taken by him in the performance of such a duty<sup>18</sup>, the custody officer must refer the matter at once to an officer of the rank of superintendent or above<sup>19</sup> who is responsible for the police station for which the custody officer is acting as custody officer<sup>20</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(i) Initial Procedure/947. Independent custody visitors for places of detention.

947. Independent custody visitors for places of detention.

- 1285 (1) must secure that the independent custody visitors are independent of both the police authority<sup>6</sup> and the chief officer of police<sup>7</sup> of the police force maintained by that authority<sup>8</sup>;
- 1286 (2) may confer on independent custody visitors such powers as the police authority considers necessary to enable them to carry out their functions under the arrangements<sup>9</sup>;
- 1287 (3) may include provision for access to a detainee to be denied to independent custody visitors<sup>10</sup>.

The Secretary of State must issue, and may from time to time revise, a code of practice as to the carrying out by police authorities and independent custody visitors of their functions under the arrangements<sup>11</sup>. Police authorities and independent custody visitors must have regard to the code of practice for the time being in force in the carrying out of their functions under these provisions<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

2 Police authorities must keep such arrangements under review and from time to time revise them as they think fit: Police Reform Act 2002 s 51(1)(b).

3 For these purposes, 'detainee', in relation to arrangements made under ibid s 51, means a person detained in a police station in the police area of the police authority: s 51(10).

4 Ibid s 51(1)(a). Police authorities must keep such arrangements under review and from time to time revise them as they think fit: s 51(1)(b).

6 Ibid s 51(2)(a).

7 As to chief officers of police and their functions see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 178 et seq.

8 Police Reform Act 2002 s 51(2)(b).

9 Ibid s 51(3). Pursuant to this, arrangements may, in particular, confer on independent custody visitors powers: (1) to require access to be given to each police station (s 51(3)(a)); (2) to examine records relating to the detention of persons there (s 51(3)(b)); (3) to meet detainees there for the purposes of a discussion about their treatment and conditions while detained (s 51(3)(c)); and (4) to inspect the facilities there including, in particular, cell accommodation, washing and toilet facilities, and the facilities for the provision of food (s 51(3)(d)).

10 Ibid s 51(4). Arrangements may include provision for access to a detainee to be denied to independent custody visitors if: (1) it appears to an officer of or above the rank of inspector that there are grounds for denying access at the time it is requested (s 51(4)(a)); (2) the grounds are grounds specified for those purposes in the arrangements (s 51(4)(b)); and (3) the procedural requirements imposed by the arrangements in relation to a denial of access are complied with (s 51(4)(c)). Grounds must not be specified in any arrangements for these purposes unless they are grounds for the time being set out for such purposes in the code of practice issued by the Secretary of State under s 51(6) (see the text and note 11 infra): s 51(5).

11 Ibid s 51(6). Before issuing or revising such a code, the Secretary of State must consult with persons whom he considers to represent the interests of police authorities (s 51(7)(a)), persons whom he considers to represent the interests of chief officers of police (s 51(7)(b)), and such other persons as he thinks fit (s 51(7)(c)). The Secretary of State must lay the code, and any revisions of it, before Parliament: s 51(8).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(i) Initial Procedure/948. Detained persons; normal procedure.

948. Detained persons; normal procedure.

When a person is brought to a police station under arrest or is arrested at the police station having attended there voluntarily, the custody officer<sup>1</sup> must make sure the person is told clearly:

- 1288 (1) about the right to have someone informed of his arrest<sup>2</sup>;
- 1289 (2) about the right to consult privately with a solicitor<sup>3</sup> and that free independent legal advice is available<sup>4</sup>;
- 1290 (3) about the right to consult the codes of practice<sup>5</sup>.

These are rights which may be exercised at any stage during the period in custody<sup>6</sup>. The detainee must also be given a written notice setting out these rights, the arrangements for obtaining legal advice, the right to a copy of the custody record<sup>7</sup> and the caution in the prescribed terms<sup>8</sup>, and an additional written notice briefly setting out his entitlements while in custody<sup>9</sup>. The detainee must be asked to sign the custody record to acknowledge receipt of these notices<sup>10</sup>.

The custody officer must:

- 1291 (a) record on the custody record<sup>11</sup> the offence or offences for which the detainee has been arrested and the reason or reasons for the arrest<sup>12</sup>;
- 1292 (b) note on the custody record any comment the detainee makes in relation to the arresting officer's account<sup>13</sup>;
- 1293 (c) note any comment the detainee makes in respect of the decision to detain him<sup>14</sup>;
- 1294 (d) not put specific questions to the detainee regarding his involvement in any offence, nor in respect of any comments he may make in response to the arresting officer's account or the decision to place him in detention<sup>15</sup>;
- 1295 (e) ask the detainee whether at this time he would like legal advice<sup>16</sup> and wants someone informed of his detention<sup>17</sup>, and to sign the custody record to confirm his decisions in these matters<sup>18</sup>; and
- 1296 (f) determine whether the detainee is, or might be, in need of medical treatment or attention<sup>19</sup>, or whether he requires an appropriate adult<sup>20</sup>, or help to check documentation or an interpreter<sup>21</sup>, and record the decision<sup>22</sup>.

When determining the detainee's needs regarding legal advice, representation or assistance<sup>23</sup> the custody officer is responsible for initiating an assessment to consider whether the detainee is likely to present specific risks to custody staff or himself<sup>24</sup>.

Risk assessments must follow a structured process which clearly defines the categories of risk to be considered and the results must be incorporated in the detainee's custody record<sup>25</sup>. The custody officer is responsible for making sure those responsible for the detainee's custody are appropriately briefed about the risks<sup>26</sup>. If no specific risks are identified by the assessment, that should be noted in the custody record<sup>27</sup>. The custody officer is responsible for implementing the response to any specific risk assessment, for example by reducing opportunities for self-harm, calling a health care professional, or increasing levels of monitoring or observation<sup>28</sup>. Risk assessment is an ongoing process and assessments must always be subject to review if circumstances change<sup>29</sup>.

The notice of entitlements should list the entitlements in Code C, including those relating to visits and contact with outside parties (including special provisions for Commonwealth citizens and foreign nationals), reasonable standards of physical comfort, adequate food and drink, access to toilets and washing facilities, clothing, medical attention, and exercise when practicable; and should mention the provisions relating to the conduct of interviews and the circumstances in which an appropriate adult should be available to assist the detainee and his statutory rights to make representation whenever the period of his detention is reviewed: Code C Guidance note 3A.

In addition to notices in English, translations should be made available in Welsh, the main minority ethnic languages and the principal European languages, whenever they are likely to be helpful: Code C Guidance note 3B. Audio versions of the notice should also be made available: Code C Guidance note 3B.

A citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the Republic of Ireland, must be informed as soon as practicable about his rights of communication with his high commission, embassy or consulate (see PARA 954 post): Code C para 3.3.

24 Code C para 3.6. Chief officers should ensure that arrangements for proper and effective risk assessments required by Code C para 3.6 are implemented in respect of all detainees at police stations in their area: Code C para 3.7. Such assessments should always include a check on the police national computer, to be carried out as soon as practicable, to identify any risks highlighted in relation to the detainee: Code C para 3.6. Although such assessments are primarily the custody officer's responsibility, it may be necessary for him to consult and involve others, for example the arresting officer or an appropriate health care professional: Code C para 3.6; and see further PARA 957 post. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(i) Initial Procedure/949. Detained persons; special groups.

949. Detained persons; special groups.

If the detainee appears deaf or there is doubt about his hearing or speaking ability<sup>1</sup> or ability to understand English, and the custody officer<sup>2</sup> cannot establish effective communication with him, the custody officer must, as soon as practicable, call an interpreter<sup>3</sup> for assistance<sup>4</sup>.

If the detainee is a juvenile<sup>5</sup>, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable<sup>6</sup>, the custody officer must as soon as practicable inform the appropriate adult<sup>7</sup>, who in the case of a juvenile may or may not be a person responsible for the juvenile's welfare, of the grounds for the detainee's detention and his whereabouts, and ask the adult to come to the police station to see the detainee<sup>8</sup>. It is imperative that a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person, detained under the statutory power for a constable to remove to a place of safety a mentally disordered person found in a public place<sup>9</sup>, be assessed as soon as possible<sup>10</sup>. If that assessment is to take place at the police station, an approved social worker and a registered medical practitioner<sup>11</sup> must be called to the station as soon as possible in order to interview and examine the detainee<sup>12</sup>. Once the detainee has been interviewed, examined and suitable arrangements made for his treatment or care, he can no longer be detained under those provisions: a detainee must be immediately discharged from detention under those provisions if a registered medical practitioner, having examined him, concludes that he is not mentally disordered for those purposes<sup>13</sup>.

If the appropriate adult is already at the police station, the normal procedure for detained persons<sup>14</sup> must be complied with in the appropriate adult's presence; and if the appropriate adult is not at the police station when those provisions are complied with, they must be complied with again in his presence when he arrives<sup>15</sup>.

The detainee must be advised that the duties of the appropriate adult include giving advice and assistance and that he can consult privately with the appropriate adult at any time<sup>16</sup>. If the detainee, or appropriate adult on his behalf, asks for a solicitor to be called to give legal advice, the relevant provisions<sup>17</sup> apply<sup>18</sup>.

If the detainee is blind, seriously visually impaired or unable to read, the custody officer must make sure that his solicitor, relative, appropriate adult or some other person likely to take an interest in him and not involved in the investigation is available to help in checking any documentation<sup>19</sup>. Where written consent or signification is required<sup>20</sup>, the person assisting may be asked to sign instead if the detained person prefers<sup>21</sup>.

Action taken under these provisions must be recorded<sup>22</sup>.

1 If a person appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak, or has difficulty orally because of a speech impediment, he must, in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary, be treated as such for the purposes of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers: see Code C para 1.6. 5 If anyone appears to be under the age of 17, he must be treated as a juvenile for these purposes in the absence of clear evidence to show that he is older: Code C para 1.5.

6 For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', see PARA 940 note 9 ante. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a person of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, that person must be treated as such for these purposes: see Code C para 1.4; and R v Lamont [1989] Crim LR 813, CA.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(i) Initial Procedure/950. Additional rights of children and young persons.

950. Additional rights of children and young persons.

Where a child<sup>1</sup> or young person<sup>2</sup> is in police detention<sup>3</sup>, such steps as are practicable must be taken to ascertain the identity of a person responsible<sup>4</sup> for his welfare<sup>5</sup>.

If it is practicable so to ascertain the identity of a person responsible for the welfare of a child or young person, that person<sup>6</sup> must, unless it is not practicable to do so, be informed<sup>7</sup>:

- 1297 (1) that the child or young person has been arrested<sup>8</sup>;
- 1298 (2) why he has been arrested<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1299 (3) where he is being detained<sup>10</sup>.

If it appears that at the time of a child or young person's arrest a supervision order<sup>11</sup> is in force in respect of him, the person responsible for his supervision must also be informed as soon as it is reasonably practicable to do so<sup>12</sup>; and if it appears that at the time of his arrest the child or young person is being provided with the accommodation provided by or on behalf of a local authority<sup>13</sup>, the local authority must also be so informed as soon as it is reasonably practicable to do so<sup>14</sup>.

The rights conferred by these provisions are in addition to the right<sup>15</sup> not to be held incommunicado<sup>16</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'child' see PARA 143 note 2 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'young person' means a person who has attained the age of 14 and is under the age of 17 years: Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 107(1); Criminal Justice Act 1991 (Commencement No 3) Order 1992, SI 1992/333, art 2(4) (providing that the substitution of this definition effected by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 68, Sch 8 para 3 (whereby the upper age was raised to 18: see PARA 143 note 2 ante) does not apply in relation to the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34 (see the text and notes 3-16 infra)). This definition (as saved for these purposes) is re-enacted for the purposes of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 ss 31, 34: see s 31(2) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 Sch 8 para 1(1)). The Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(2)-(11) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 3-16 infra) do not apply, however, to children over the age of 17 years: Re B (A Minor) [1990] FCR 469. As to the position where the child or young person is a ward of court see note 14 infra.

3 For these purposes, the reference to a child or young person who is in police detention includes a reference to a child or young person who has been detained under the terrorism provisions: Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(10) (s 34(2) substituted, and s 34(3)-(11) added, by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 57). For the meaning of 'terrorism provisions' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65 (as amended); and PARA 952 note 4 post (definition applied by the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(11) (as so added)).

4 For these purposes, the persons who may be responsible for the welfare of a child or young person are his parent or guardian (ibid s 34(5)(a) (as added: see note 3 supra)) or any other person who has for the time being assumed responsibility for his welfare (s 34(5)(b) (as so added)). In the case of a child or young person in the care of a local authority (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 844et seq), the reference to a parent or guardian is a reference to that authority: s 34(8) (as so added; and amended by the Children Act 1989 s 108(7), Sch 15). As to adoptive parents see the Adoption and Children Act 2002 ss 67, 68; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARAS 377-378.

5 Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(2) (as substituted: see note 3 supra); Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 3.13. The person responsible for the juvenile's welfare may be: the parent or guardian; if the juvenile is in local authority or voluntary organisation care, or is otherwise being looked after under the Children Act 1989, a person appointed by that authority or organisation to have responsibility for the juvenile's welfare; or any other person who has, for the time being, assumed responsibility for the juvenile's welfare: Code C para 3.13.

6    Ie the person or persons specified in note 5 supra.

7    Where information falls to be given under these provisions, it must be given as soon as it is practicable to do so: Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(4) (as added: see note 3 supra). If it is practicable to give a person responsible for the welfare of the child or young person the information so required, that person must be given it as soon as it is practicable to do so: s 34(6) (as so added).

8    Ibid s 34(3)(a) (as added: see note 3 supra); Code C para 3.13. For these purposes, 'arrest' includes detention under the terrorism provisions (see note 3 supra): see the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(10) (as so added).

9    Ibid s 34(3)(b) (as added: see note 3 supra); Code C para 3.13.

10   Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(3)(c) (as added: see note 3 supra); Code C para 3.13.

11   Ie an order under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 63 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 250) or the Children Act 1989 Pt IV (ss 31-42) (as amended): see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS.

12   Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(7) (as added (see note 3 supra); and amended by the Children Act 1989 s 108(5), Sch 13 para 6(2); and the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 1). If a juvenile is known to be subject to a court order under which a person or organisation is given any degree of statutory responsibility to supervise or otherwise monitor him, reasonable steps must also be taken to notify that person or organisation (the 'responsible officer'). The responsible officer will normally be a member of a youth offending team, except for a curfew order which involves electronic monitoring when the contractor providing the monitoring will normally be the responsible officer: Code C para 3.14. As to youth offending teams see PARA 1703 post. As to curfew orders see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 231.

14   Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(7A) (added by the Children Act 1989 Sch 13 para 6(3)). If the juvenile is in the care of a local authority or a voluntary organisation but is living with his parents or other adults responsible for his welfare then, although there is no legal obligation on the police to inform them, they as well as the authority or organisation should normally be contacted unless suspected of involvement in the offence concerned: Code C Guidance note 3C. Even if the juvenile is not living with his parents, consideration should be given to informing them as well: Code C Guidance note 3C.

As to the appropriate procedure where the juvenile is a ward of court see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at I.5.1, CA. It is not necessary, however, to inform the wardship court of the arrest or detention of a ward of court who is over the age of 17 years; nor is it necessary for a police authority to seek leave to interview a ward or to seek subsequent approval of the wardship court for interviews which have already taken place between the police and a ward of court over the age of 17: Re B (A Minor) [1990] FCR 469.

15   Ie under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56 (as amended): see PARA 952 post.

16   Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(9) (as added: see note 3 supra). As to the detention of children and young persons see also PARA 949 ante.

UPDATE

950 Additional rights of children and young persons

TEXT AND NOTES 12, 14--Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 34(7) further amended, s 34(7B) added, Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 Sch 9 para 1 repealed: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 4 para 2, Sch 28 Pt 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(i) Initial Procedure/951. Detained persons' property.

951. Detained persons' property.

The custody officer<sup>1</sup> is responsible for ascertaining what property a detainee has with him when he comes to the police station<sup>2</sup> or might have acquired for an unlawful or harmful purpose while in custody<sup>3</sup>, and for the safekeeping of any property which is taken from him and which remains at the police station<sup>4</sup>. The custody officer may search the detainee or authorise his being searched to the extent that he considers necessary, provided that a search of intimate parts of the body or involving the removal of more than outer clothing may only be made in accordance with the prescribed procedure<sup>5</sup>. A search may be carried out only by an officer of the same sex as the detainee<sup>6</sup>.

Detainees may retain clothing and personal effects<sup>7</sup> at their own risk unless the custody officer considers that they may use them to cause harm to themselves or others, interfere with evidence, damage property or effect an escape or that they are needed as evidence<sup>8</sup>.

It is a matter for the custody officer to determine whether a record should be made of the property a detained person has with him or had taken from him on arrest<sup>9</sup>. Any record made is not required to be kept as part of the custody record but the custody record should be noted as to where such a record exists<sup>10</sup>. Whenever a record is made, the detainee must be allowed to check and sign the record of property as correct<sup>11</sup>. If a detainee is not allowed to keep any article of clothing or personal effects the reason must be recorded<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

2 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 4.1(a)(i). This applies to the property a detainee has with him when he comes to the police station whether on arrest or re-detention on answering to bail, on commitment to prison custody on the order or sentence of a court, on lodgement at the police station with a view to his production in court from such custody, on transfer from detention at another station or from hospital, on detention under the Mental Health Act 1983 s 135 (as amended) or s 136 (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 549-550), or on remand into police custody on the order of a court: Code C para 4.1(a)(i).

3 Code C para 4.1(a)(ii).

4 Code C para 4.1(b).

5 Code C para 4.1. For the prescribed procedure see Code C Annex A; and PARA 1007 post. As to the searching of detained persons see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54 (as amended); and PARA 1006 et seq post. Section 54 (as amended) and Code C para 4.1 require a detainee to be searched when it is clear that the custody officer will have continuing duties in relation to that detainee or when that detainee's behaviour or offence makes an inventory appropriate: Code C Guidance note 4A. They do not require every detainee to be searched (eg if it is clear that a person will be detained only for a short period and is not to be placed in a cell, the custody officer may decide not to search the person): Code C Guidance note 4A. In such a case, the custody record will be indorsed 'not searched', Code C para 4.4 (see the text and note 9 infra) will not apply, and the detainee will be invited to sign the entry: Code C Guidance note 4A. If the detainee refuses to sign, the custody officer will be obliged to ascertain what property the detainee has in accordance with Code C para 4.1: Code C Guidance note 4A.

6 Code C para 4.1.

7 For these purposes, 'personal effects' are those items which a person may lawfully need, use or refer to while in detention but do not include cash and other items of value: Code C para 4.3.

8 Code C para 4.2. If the custody officer so considers he may withhold such articles as he considers necessary and he must tell the person why: Code C para 4.2.

9 Code C para 4.4. This does not require the custody officer to record on the custody record property in the detainee's possession on arrest if, by virtue of its nature, quantity or size, it is not practicable to remove it to the police station: Code C Guidance note 4B. This provision also does not require items of clothing worn by the person be recorded unless withheld by the custody officer as in Code C para 4.2 (see the text and note 8 supra): Code C Guidance note 4C.

10 Code C para 4.4.

11 Code C para 4.4. Any refusal to sign must be recorded: Code C para 4.4.

12 Code C para 4.5.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ii) Rights of Detained Persons/952. Right not to be held incommunicado.

(ii) Rights of Detained Persons

952. Right not to be held incommunicado.

Where a person has been arrested and is being held in custody<sup>1</sup> in a police station or other premises<sup>2</sup> he is entitled, if he so requests, to have one friend or relative or other person who is known to him or who is likely to take an interest in his welfare told, as soon as is practicable (except to the extent that delay is permitted<sup>3</sup>) and at public expense, that he has been arrested and is being detained there<sup>4</sup>. If the person cannot be contacted, the detainee may choose up to two alternatives, and if they too cannot be contacted the person in charge of detention or the investigation has a discretion to allow further attempts until the information has been conveyed<sup>5</sup>. In any case the person in custody must be permitted to exercise such right within 36 hours from the relevant time<sup>6</sup>.

The rights so conferred<sup>7</sup> on a person detained at a police station or other premises are exercisable whenever he is transferred from one place to another; and they apply to each subsequent occasion on which they are exercisable as they apply to the first such occasion<sup>8</sup>.

The person may receive visits at the custody officer's discretion<sup>9</sup>.

If a friend, relative or person with an interest in the detainee's welfare inquires about his whereabouts, this information must be given if the detainee agrees and the power to delay notification of arrest or to allow access to legal advice<sup>10</sup> does not apply<sup>11</sup>.

The detainee must be given writing materials on request and be allowed to telephone one person for a reasonable time<sup>12</sup>. Either or both these privileges may be denied or delayed if an officer of inspector rank or above considers that sending a letter or making a telephone call may result in any of specified<sup>13</sup> consequences<sup>14</sup>.

Before any letter or message is sent, or telephone call is made, the detainee must be informed that what he says in any letter, call or message (other than in the case of a communication to a solicitor) may be read or listened to and may be given in evidence<sup>15</sup>. A telephone call may be terminated if it is being abused<sup>16</sup>. The costs can be at public expense at the discretion of the custody officer<sup>17</sup>.

Any delay or denial of these rights should be proportionate and should last no longer than necessary<sup>18</sup>.

A record must be kept of: (1) any request made under these provisions and the action taken on it<sup>19</sup>; (2) any letters, messages or telephone calls made or received or visit received<sup>20</sup>; and (3) any refusal by the detainee to have information about himself given to an outside inquirer<sup>21</sup>. The detainee must be asked to countersign the record accordingly, and any refusal must be recorded<sup>22</sup>.

1 See PARA 953 note 2 post.

2 See PARA 872 note 5 ante.

3 Ie by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56 (as amended) (see PARA 955 post). The exercise of such right in respect of each of the persons nominated may be delayed only in accordance with Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Annex B (see PARA 955 post): Code C para 5.2.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56(1); Code C para 5.1. Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56 (as amended) applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions: s 56(10) (substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 14 para 5(1), (5)). 'The terrorism provisions' means the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 and provisions of Sch 7 (see PARA 430 et seq ante) conferring a power of detention: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65 (amended by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 5(1), (10)). As to special provisions relating to persons arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions see PARA 421 ante.

As to the custody officer's duty to inform a person of this right under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56(1) see PARA 948 ante. If the detainee does not know anyone to contact for advice or support or cannot contact a friend or relative, the custody officer should bear in mind any local voluntary bodies or other organisations who might be able to offer help: Code C Guidance note 5C. If it is specifically legal advice that is wanted, then Code C para 6.1 (see PARA 953 post) applies: Code C Guidance note 5C. In some circumstances it may not be appropriate to use the telephone to disclose information under Code C para 5.1: Code C Guidance note 5D. As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

10 See Code C Annex B; and PARAS 955-956 post.

11 Code C para 5.5. In some circumstances it may not be appropriate to use the telephone to disclose information under Code C para 5.5: Code C Guidance note 5D.

12 Code C para 5.6. A person may request an interpreter to interpret a telephone call or translate a letter: Code C Guidance note 5A. The telephone call is in addition to any communication under Code C para 5.1 (see the text and notes 1-4 supra) and Code C para 6.1 (see PARA 953 post): Code C Guidance note 5E.

13 Ie the consequences in Code C Annex B paras 1, 2 (where the person is detained in connection with an indictable offence): Code C para 5.6. As to Code C Annex B see PARAS 955-956 post.

14 Code C para 5.6. Nothing in Code C para 5.6 permits the restriction or denial of the rights in Code C para 5.1 (see the text and notes 1-4 supra) and Code C para 6.1 (see PARA 953 post): Code C para 5.6.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ii) Rights of Detained Persons/953. Right to legal advice.

953. Right to legal advice.

A person arrested<sup>1</sup> and held in custody<sup>2</sup> in a police station or other premises<sup>3</sup> is entitled, if he so requests, to consult a solicitor<sup>4</sup> privately at any time<sup>5</sup>. No police officer should, at any time, do or say anything with the intention of dissuading a detainee from obtaining legal advice<sup>6</sup>. In the case of a juvenile, an appropriate adult<sup>7</sup> should consider whether legal advice from a solicitor is required<sup>8</sup>. If the juvenile indicates that he does not want legal advice, the appropriate adult has the right to ask for a solicitor to attend if this would be in the best interests of the person<sup>9</sup>. However, the detained person cannot be forced to see the solicitor if he is adamant that he does not wish to do so<sup>10</sup>.

A request to consult a solicitor privately and the time at which it was so made must be recorded in the custody record<sup>11</sup>; but such a request need not be recorded in the custody record of a person who makes it at a time while he is at court after being charged with an offence<sup>12</sup>. If a person makes such a request, he must be permitted to consult a solicitor as soon as is practicable<sup>13</sup> except to the extent that delay is permitted<sup>14</sup>. In any case he must be permitted to consult a solicitor within 36 hours from the relevant time<sup>15</sup>.

If a solicitor arrives at the station to see a particular person, that person must, unless the provisions<sup>16</sup> about delay in allowing access to legal advice apply, be so informed whether or not he is being interviewed and asked if he would like to see the solicitor<sup>17</sup>.

A detainee who wants legal advice may not be interviewed<sup>18</sup> or continue to be interviewed until he has received such advice unless:

1301 (2) an officer of the rank of superintendent<sup>22</sup> or above has reasonable grounds for believing<sup>23</sup> that:

105. (a) the consequent delay might: (i) lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an offence; (ii) lead to interference with, or physical harm to, other persons; (iii) lead to serious loss of, or damage to, property; (iv) lead to alerting other persons suspected of having committed an offence but not yet arrested for it; (v) hinder the recovery of property obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence<sup>24</sup>; or

106. (b) when a solicitor, including a duty solicitor, has been contacted and has agreed to attend, awaiting his arrival would cause unreasonable delay to the process of investigation<sup>25</sup>; or

1302 (3) the solicitor the detainee has nominated or selected from a list:

67

107. (a) cannot be contacted<sup>26</sup>;

108. (b) has previously indicated he does not wish to be contacted<sup>27</sup>; or

109. (c) having been contacted, has declined to attend<sup>28</sup>;

68

- 1303 and the detainee has been advised of the Duty Solicitor Scheme, but has declined to ask for the duty solicitor<sup>29</sup>; or
- 1304 (4) the detainee changes his mind about wanting legal advice<sup>30</sup>.

A detainee who has been permitted to consult a solicitor is entitled on request to have the solicitor present while he is interviewed unless one of these exceptions<sup>31</sup> applies<sup>32</sup>. The solicitor may be required to leave the interview only if his conduct is such that the investigating officer is unable properly to put questions to the suspect<sup>33</sup>. If the interviewer considers that a solicitor is acting in such a way, he will stop the interview and consult an officer not below superintendent rank, if one is readily available, and otherwise an officer not below inspector rank who is not connected with the investigation<sup>34</sup>. After speaking to the solicitor, the officer consulted must decide if the interview should continue in the presence of that solicitor; and if he decides that it should not, the suspect must be given the opportunity to consult another solicitor before the interview continues and that solicitor must be given an opportunity to be present at the interview<sup>35</sup>.

If the inspector refuses access to an accredited or probationary representative or a decision is taken that such a person should not be permitted to remain at an interview, the inspector must notify the solicitor on whose behalf the representative was acting and give him an opportunity of making alternative arrangements<sup>36</sup>. The detainee must be informed and the custody record noted<sup>37</sup>.

A record must be made in the interview record if a detainee asks for legal advice and an interview is begun either in the absence of a solicitor or his representative, or the solicitor or his representative has been required to leave an interview<sup>38</sup>.

A detained person must be permitted to consult a solicitor for a reasonable time before any court hearing<sup>39</sup>.

1 Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended) applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions: s 58(12) (substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 14 para 5(1), (6)). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante. As to special provisions in respect of such persons see PARA 421 ante.

2 A person is 'held in custody' for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 56 (as amended) (see PARA 955 post) and s 58 (as amended) (see the text and notes 3-15 infra) only where the stage of proceedings has been reached where his detention in custody has been authorised (ie in the straightforward arrest situation where the suspect has been taken to a designated police station and the custody officer is satisfied that the statutory conditions for detention are made out): R v Kerawalla [1991] Crim LR 451, CA.

3 For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 872 note 5 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'solicitor' means a solicitor who holds a current practising certificate and an accredited or probationary representative included in the register of representatives maintained by the Legal Services Commission: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 6.12.

An accredited or probationary representative sent to provide advice by, and on behalf of, a solicitor must be admitted to the police station for this purpose unless an officer of the rank of inspector or above considers that such a visit will hinder the investigation of crime and directs otherwise: Code C para 6.12A. 'Hindering the investigation' does not include giving proper legal advice to a detainee, as in Code C Guidance note 6D (see note 33 infra): Code C para 6.12A. Once an accredited or probationary representative has been admitted to the police station, Code C paras 6.6-6.10 (see the text and notes 18-34 infra) apply: Code C para 6.12A.

In exercising his discretion under Code C para 6.12A, the officer should take into account in particular: (1) whether the identity and status of the accredited or probationary representative have been satisfactorily established and he is of suitable character to provide legal advice (eg a person with a criminal record is unlikely to be suitable unless the conviction was for a minor offence and not recent); and (2) any other matters in any written letter of authorisation provided by the solicitor on whose behalf the person is attending the police station: Code C para 6.13. A chief constable is not entitled to impose a blanket ban on a probationary police station representative attending at a police station to perform his duty because the role of the police is limited to a consideration of whether the investigation of a specific offence will be hindered and this can only be undertaken on a case by case basis: R (on the application of Thompson) v Chief Constable of Northumbria Constabulary [2001] EWCA Civ 321, [2001] 4 All ER 354, [2001] 1 WLR 1342, approving R v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary, ex p Robinson [1989] 2 All ER 15, [1989] 1 WLR 793, DC. The chief constable can, however, advise that the character of a particular representative is likely to hinder an investigation and an officer can reach a decision, in the light of that advice, as to whether the attendance of a representative at a station might hinder a particular investigation: R (on the application of Thompson) v Chief Constable of Northumbria Constabulary supra. The police have a duty to ensure that arrested persons detained at a police station have access to legal advice but they are not required to concern themselves with the quality of that advice: R (on the application of Thompson) v Chief Constable of Northumbria Constabulary supra.

If an officer of at least inspector rank considers a particular solicitor or firm of solicitors is persistently sending probationary representatives who are unsuited to provide legal advice, he should inform an officer of at least superintendent rank, who may wish to take the matter up with the Law Society: Code C Guidance note 6F.

The right to consult a solicitor is the detainee's right alone; a solicitor has no corresponding right to enter a police station to see a detainee: Rixon v Chief Constable of Kent (2000) Times, 11 April, CA.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58(1). Subject to the application of Code C Annex B (see PARAS 955-956 post), all detainees must be informed that they may at any time consult and communicate privately with a solicitor, whether in person, in writing or by telephone, and that free independent legal advice is available from the duty solicitor: Code C para 6.1. A poster advertising the right to legal advice must be prominently displayed in the charging area of every police station: Code C para 6.3. In addition to a poster in English, a poster or posters containing translations into Welsh, the main minority ethnic languages and the principal European languages should be displayed wherever they are likely to be helpful and it is practicable to do so: Code C Guidance note 6H.

See R v Chief Constable of South Wales, ex p Merrick [1994] 2 All ER 560, [1994] 1 WLR 663, DC (the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended) does not generally apply to a person remanded in custody in the cells of a magistrates' court, although such a person has a common law right to consult a solicitor). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended) does not apply to a person interviewed by a trading standards officer in relation to alleged criminal offences under the Protection of Animals Act 1911: R (on the application of Beale) v South East Wiltshire Magistrates [2002] EWHC 2961 (Admin), 167 JP 41, DC. As to the exclusion at trial of evidence obtained in breach of the right to legal advice see PARA 1545 note 7 post.

A detainee who asks for legal advice should be given an opportunity to consult a specific solicitor or another solicitor from that solicitor's firm or the duty solicitor: Code C Guidance note 6B. If advice is not available by these means, or he does not wish to consult the duty solicitor, the detainee should be given an opportunity to choose a solicitor from a list of those willing to provide legal advice: Code C Guidance note 6B. If this solicitor is unavailable, the detainee may choose up to two alternatives: Code C Guidance note 6B. If these attempts are unsuccessful, the custody officer has discretion to allow further attempts until a solicitor has been contacted and agrees to provide legal advice: Code C Guidance note 6B. Apart from carrying out these duties, an officer must not advise the suspect about any particular firm of solicitors: Code C Guidance note 6B.

13 Whenever a detainee exercises his fundamental right to legal advice by consulting or communicating with a solicitor, he must be allowed to do so in private: Code C Guidance note 6J. If the requirement for privacy is compromised because what is said or written by the detainee or solicitor for the purpose of giving and receiving legal advice is overheard, listened to, or read by others without the informed consent of the detainee, the right will effectively have been denied: Code C Guidance note 6J. When a detainee chooses to speak to a solicitor on the telephone, he should be allowed to do so in private unless this is impractical because of the design and layout of the custody area or the location of telephones: Code C Guidance note 6J. However, the normal expectation should be that facilities will be available, unless they are being used, at all police stations to enable detainees to speak in private to a solicitor either face to face or over the telephone: Code C Guidance note 6J.

14 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58(4). The exercise of the right of access to legal advice may be delayed only as in Code C Annex B (see PARAS 955-956 post): Code C para 6.5. Whenever legal advice is requested, and unless Code C Annex B applies, the custody officer must act without delay to secure the provision of such advice; and if, on being informed or reminded of this right, the detainee declines to speak to a solicitor in person, the officer should point out that the right includes the right to speak with a solicitor on the telephone: Code C para 6.5. If the detainee continues to waive this right the officer should ask him why and any reasons should be recorded on the custody record or the interview record as appropriate: Code C para 6.5. Reminders of the right to legal advice must be given as in Code C para 3.5 (see PARA 948 ante), PARA 11.2 (see PARA 960 post), PARA 15.4 (see PARA 1001 ante), PARAS 16.4, 16.5 (see PARA 1042 post), Annex A para 2B (see PARA 1007 post) and Annex K para 3 (see PARA 1008 post) and Code D: Code of Practice on the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 3.17(ii) (see PARA 1014 post) and PARA 6.3 (see PARA 1028 post): Code C para 6.5. Once it is clear that a detainee does not want to speak to a solicitor in person or by telephone he should cease to be asked his reasons: Code C para 6.5. A detainee is not obliged to give reasons for declining legal advice and should not be pressed to do so: Code C Guidance note 6K.

15 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58(5). For the meaning of 'the relevant time' see PARA 1000 post.

16 In Code C Annex B: see PARAS 955-956 post.

17 Code C para 6.15. This applies even if the detainee has declined legal advice or, having requested it, has subsequently agreed to be interviewed without receiving advice: Code C para 6.15. The solicitor's attendance and the detainee's decision must be noted in the custody record: Code C para 6.15.

18 A person who refuses to supply a specimen unless he can first consult a solicitor does not have a reasonable excuse for the purposes of the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 7(6) (offence of failing to provide a specimen of breath, blood or urine: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 988) (DPP v Billington [1988] 1 All ER 435, 87 Cr App Rep 68, DC; followed in DPP v Whalley [1991] RTR 161, [1991] Crim LR 211, DC), unless the consultation will not delay the taking of the specimen to any significant extent (Kennedy v CPS [2002] EWHC 2297 (Admin), [2004] RTR 77). See also Campbell v DPP [2002] EWHC 1314 (Admin), [2004] RTR 64; Kirkup v DPP [2003] EWHC 2354 (Admin), 168 JP 255; Causey v DPP [2004] EWHC 3164 (Admin), 169 JP 331.

19 In Code C Annex B: see PARAS 955-956 post.

20 In under Code C Annex C: see PARA 1042 post.

21 Code C para 6.6(a).

22 See PARA 858 ante.

23 In considering whether Code C para 6.6(b) applies, the officer should, if practicable, ask the solicitor for an estimate of how long it will take to come to the station and relate this to the time detention is permitted, the time of day (ie whether the rest period under Code C para 12.2 (see PARA 964 post) is imminent) and the requirements of other investigations: Code C Guidance note 6A. If the solicitor is on his way or is to set off immediately, it will not normally be appropriate to begin an interview before he arrives; if it appears necessary to begin an interview before the solicitor's arrival, he should be given an indication of how long the police would be able to wait before these provisions apply so that there is an opportunity to make arrangements for someone else to provide legal advice: Code C Guidance note 6A.

24 Code C para 6.6(b)(i). If this provision applies, once sufficient information has been obtained to avert the risk, questioning must cease until the detainee has received legal advice unless Code C para 6.6(a), (b)(ii), (c) or (d) applies: Code C para 6.7.

25 Code C para 6.6(b)(ii).

26 Code C para 6.6(c)(i).

27 Code C para 6.6(c)(ii).

28 Code C para 6.6(c)(iii).

29 Code C para 6.6(c). In these circumstances the interview may be started or continued without further delay provided that an officer of inspector rank or above has agreed to the interview proceeding: Code C para 6.6(c). The restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Code C Annex C will not apply because the detainee is allowed an opportunity to consult the duty solicitor: Code C para 6.6(c).

30 Code C para 6.6(d). In these circumstances the interview may be started or continued without delay provided that the detainee agrees to do so, in writing or on the interview record made in accordance with Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects or Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects, and an officer of inspector rank or above has inquired about the detainee's reasons for his change of mind and gives authority for the interview to proceed: Code C para 6.6(d). Confirmation of the detainee's agreement, his change of mind, the reasons for it if given and, subject to Code C para 2.6A (see PARA 940 ante), the name of the authorising officer must be recorded in the recorded or written interview record: Code C para 6.6. Code C para 6.6(d) requires the authorisation of an officer of inspector rank or above to the continuation of an interview when a detainee who wanted legal advice changes his mind; and it is permissible for such authorisation to be given over the telephone, if the authorising officer is able to satisfy himself about the reason for the detainee's change of mind and is satisfied that it is proper to continue the interview in those circumstances: Code C Guidance note 6I. In these circumstances the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Code C Annex C will not apply because the detainee is allowed an opportunity to consult a solicitor if he wishes: Code C para 6.6.

31     le one of the exceptions in Code para 6.6: see the text and notes 16-29 supra.

32     Code C para 6.8. The right to consult a solicitor conferred by the Northern Ireland equivalent of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 58 (as amended) does not, in the case of a person detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 s 14(1) (repealed: see now the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41; and PARA 430 et seq ante), extend to the right to the solicitor's attendance during interview, merely to private consultation: R v Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, ex p Begley, R v McWilliams [1997] 4 All ER 833, [1997] 1 WLR 1475, HL.

33     Code C para 6.9. See Code C Guidance note 6D and Code C Guidance note 6E.

Code C Guidance note 6D provides that a detainee has a right to free legal advice and to be represented by a solicitor. The solicitor's only role in the police station is to protect and advance the legal rights of their client. On occasions this may require the solicitor to give advice which has the effect of the client avoiding giving evidence which strengthens a prosecution case. The solicitor may intervene in order to seek clarification, challenge an improper question to his client or the manner in which it is put, advise his client not to reply to particular questions, or if he wishes to give his client further legal advice. Code C para 6.9 only applies if the solicitor's approach or conduct prevents or unreasonably obstructs proper questions being put to the suspect or the suspect's response being recorded. Examples of unacceptable conduct include answering questions on a suspect's behalf or providing written replies for the suspect to quote.

Code C Guidance note 6E provides that an officer who takes the decision to exclude a solicitor must be in a position to satisfy the court the decision was properly made. In order to do this he may need to witness what is happening.

34     Code C para 6.10.

35     Code C para 6.10. See Code C Guidance note 6E; and note 33 supra. The removal of a solicitor from an interview is a serious step and, if it occurs, the officer of superintendent rank or above who took the decision must consider whether the incident should be reported to the Law Society: Code C para 6.11. If the decision to remove the solicitor has been taken by an officer below superintendent rank, the facts must be reported to an officer of superintendent rank or above who must similarly consider whether a report to the Law Society would be appropriate: Code C para 6.11. When the solicitor concerned is a duty solicitor, the report should be both to the Law Society and to the Legal Services Commission: Code C para 6.11.

36     Code C para 6.14.

37     Code C para 6.14.

38     Code C para 6.17. As to interview records see PARA 961 post.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ii) Rights of Detained Persons/954. Rights of citizens of independent Commonwealth countries or foreign nationals.

954. Rights of citizens of independent Commonwealth countries or foreign nationals.

Any citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the Republic of Ireland, may communicate at any time with his high commission, embassy or consulate<sup>1</sup>. The detainee must be informed as soon as practicable of this right, and of his right, upon request, to have his high commission, embassy or consulate told of his whereabouts and the grounds for his detention; any such request should be acted upon as soon as practicable<sup>2</sup>.

If a detainee is a citizen of a country with which a bilateral consular convention or agreement is in force requiring notification of arrest, the appropriate high commission, embassy or consulate must be informed as soon as practicable<sup>3</sup>.

Consular officers may visit one of their nationals who is in police detention to talk to him and, if required, to arrange for legal advice; and such visits must take place out of the hearing of a police officer<sup>4</sup>.

Notwithstanding the provisions of consular conventions, if the detainee is a political refugee whether for reasons of race, nationality, political opinion or religion, or is seeking political asylum, consular officers must not be informed of the arrest of one of their nationals or given access or information about them except at the detainee's express request<sup>5</sup>.

A record must be made when a detainee is informed of his rights<sup>6</sup> and of any communications with a high commission, embassy or consulate<sup>7</sup>.

1 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 7.1. The exercise of the rights in Code C para 7 (see the text and notes 2-7 infra) may not be interfered with even though Code C Annex B (see PARAS 955-956 post) applies: Code C Guidance note 7A; Annex B Guidance note B2.

2 Code C para 7.1.

3 Code C para 7.2. This obligation is subject to Code C para 7.4 (see the text and note 5 infra). ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ii) Rights of Detained Persons/955. Grounds for delay in notifying arrest.

955. Grounds for delay in notifying arrest.

Where a person has been arrested<sup>1</sup> and is being held in custody<sup>2</sup> in a police station or other premises, delay in the exercise of his right to have another person informed that he has been arrested and is being detained there<sup>3</sup> is permitted only in the case of a person who is in police detention for an indictable offence<sup>4</sup> and if an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>5</sup> authorises it<sup>6</sup>. An officer may give such an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable<sup>7</sup>. In any case the detained person must be permitted to exercise his right within 36 hours from the relevant time<sup>8</sup>.

An officer may authorise delay where he has reasonable grounds for believing:

- 1305 (1) that telling the named person of the arrest will lead to interference with or harm to evidence connected with an indictable offence or interference with or physical injury to other persons<sup>9</sup>;
- 1306 (2) that telling the named person of the arrest will lead to the alerting of other persons suspected of having committed such an offence but not yet arrested for it<sup>10</sup>;
- 1307 (3) that telling the named person of the arrest will hinder the recovery of any property obtained as a result of such an offence<sup>11</sup>; or
- 1308 (4) that the person detained for the indictable offence has benefited from<sup>12</sup> his criminal conduct<sup>13</sup> and that the recovery of the value of the property constituting the benefit will be hindered by telling the named person of the arrest<sup>14</sup>.

If delay is so authorised, the detained person must be told the reason for it<sup>15</sup> and the reason must be noted on his custody record<sup>16</sup>; and these duties must be performed as soon as is practicable<sup>17</sup>.

Once the reason for authorising the delay ceases to subsist, there may be no further delay in permitting the exercise of the right to have someone informed when arrested<sup>18</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ii) Rights of Detained Persons/956. Delay in allowing access to legal advice.

956. Delay in allowing access to legal advice.

Where a person has been arrested<sup>1</sup> and is being held in custody<sup>2</sup> in a police station or other premises, his right to consult a solicitor privately at any time<sup>3</sup> may be delayed only in the case of a person who is in police detention<sup>3</sup> for an indictable offence<sup>4</sup> and if an officer of at least the rank of superintendent<sup>5</sup> authorises it<sup>6</sup>. An officer may give such authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable<sup>7</sup>.

An officer may authorise delay where he has reasonable grounds for believing that the exercise of the right to consult a solicitor privately at the time when the person detained desires to exercise it:

- 1309 (1) will lead to interference with or harm to evidence connected with an indictable offence or interference with or physical injury to other persons<sup>8</sup>;
- 1310 (2) will lead to the alerting of other persons suspected of having committed such an offence but not yet arrested for it<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1311 (3) will hinder the recovery of any property obtained as a result of such an offence<sup>10</sup>.

An officer may also authorise delay where he has reasonable grounds for believing that:

- 1312 (a) the person detained for the indictable offence has benefited from his criminal conduct<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1313 (b) the recovery of the value of the property constituting the benefit will be hindered by the exercise of the right to consult a solicitor privately at any time<sup>12</sup>.

Authority to delay a detainee's right to consult privately with a solicitor may be given only if the authorising officer has reasonable grounds to believe that the solicitor whom the detainee wants to consult will, inadvertently or otherwise, pass on a message from the detainee or act in some other way which will have any of the consequences specified above<sup>13</sup>; and in these circumstances the detainee must be allowed to choose another solicitor<sup>14</sup>.

If the detainee wishes to see a solicitor, access to that solicitor may not be delayed on the grounds that the solicitor might advise the detainee not to answer questions or that the solicitor was initially asked to attend the police station by someone else<sup>15</sup>.

If delay is so authorised, the detained person must be told the reason for it<sup>16</sup> and the reason must be noted on his custody record<sup>17</sup>; and these duties must be performed as soon as is practicable<sup>18</sup>.

Once the reason for authorising the delay ceases to subsist, there may be no further delay in permitting the exercise of the right to consult a solicitor privately at any time<sup>19</sup>; and in any case the detained person must be permitted to exercise his right within 36 hours from the relevant time<sup>20</sup>.

When a suspect detained at a police station is interviewed during any period for which access to legal advice has been delayed, the court or jury may not draw adverse inferences from his silence<sup>21</sup>.

A detained person must be permitted to consult a solicitor for a reasonable time before any court hearing<sup>22</sup>.

14 Code C Annex B para 3. A decision to delay access to a specific solicitor is likely to be a rare occurrence and only when it can be shown that the suspect is capable of misleading that particular solicitor and there is more than a substantial risk that the suspect will succeed in causing information to be conveyed which will lead to one or more of the specified consequences: Code C Annex B Guidance note 3.

15 Code C Annex B para 4. In the latter case the detainee must be told that the solicitor has come to the police station at another person's request, and must be asked to sign the custody record to signify whether he wants to see the solicitor: Code C Annex B para 4. The fact the grounds for delaying notification of arrest may be satisfied does not automatically mean the grounds for delaying access to legal advice will also be satisfied: Code C Annex B para 5.

If the grounds for authorising delay cease to apply within the permitted period of delay (see the text and note 20 infra), the detainee must, as soon as practicable, be asked if he wants to exercise his right to consult a solicitor privately at any time, the custody record must be noted accordingly, and the appropriate action must be taken in accordance with Code C: Code C Annex B para 6. Any reply given by a detainee must be recorded and the detainee asked to indorse the record in relation to whether he wants to receive legal advice at this point: Code C Annex B para 14.

(iii) Conditions of Detention; Care and Treatment of Detained Persons

957. Conditions of detention.

So far as is practicable, not more than one person may be detained in each cell<sup>1</sup>. Cells in use must be adequately heated, cleaned and ventilated; and they must be adequately lit, subject to such dimming as is compatible with safety and security to allow persons detained overnight to sleep<sup>2</sup>. No additional restraints may be used within a locked cell unless absolutely necessary, and then only restraint equipment, approved for use in that police force by the chief constable, which is reasonable and necessary in the circumstances having regard to the detainee's demeanour and with a view to ensuring his safety and the safety of others<sup>3</sup>. The use of any restraints on a detainee whilst in a cell, the reasons for it and, if appropriate, the arrangements for enhanced supervision of the detainee while so restrained, must be recorded<sup>4</sup>. Blankets, mattresses, pillows and other bedding supplied must be of a reasonable standard and in a clean and sanitary condition<sup>5</sup>. Access to toilet and washing facilities must be provided<sup>6</sup>.

If it is necessary to remove a detainee's clothes for the purposes of investigation, for hygiene or health reasons or for cleaning, replacement clothing of a reasonable standard of comfort and cleanliness must be provided<sup>7</sup>. A detainee may not be interviewed unless adequate clothing has been offered to him<sup>8</sup>. At least two light meals and one main meal should be offered in any 24-hour period<sup>9</sup>. Drinks should be provided at meal times and upon reasonable request between meals<sup>10</sup>. Whenever necessary, advice should be sought from the appropriate health care professional<sup>11</sup> on medical or dietary matters; and, as far as practicable, meals provided must offer a varied diet and meet any specific dietary needs or religious beliefs that the detainee may have<sup>12</sup>. The detainee may, at the custody officer's discretion, have meals supplied by his family or friends at their expense<sup>13</sup>.

Brief outdoor exercise must be offered daily if practicable<sup>14</sup>.

A juvenile must not be placed in a police cell unless no other secure accommodation is available and the custody officer considers that it is not practicable to supervise him if he is not placed in a cell or that a cell provides more comfortable accommodation than other secure accommodation in the station<sup>15</sup>. A juvenile may not be placed in a cell with a detained adult<sup>16</sup>.

A record must be kept of replacement clothing and meals offered<sup>17</sup>; and, if a juvenile is placed in a cell, the reason must be recorded<sup>18</sup>.

1 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 8.1. The provisions on conditions of detention and treatment in PARAS 8.1-9.17 (see the text and notes 2-18 infra; and PARA 958 post) must be considered as the minimum standards of treatment for such detainees: Code C para 1.12.

5 Code C para 8.3. The provisions in Code C paras 8.3, 8.6 (see the text and notes 9-13 infra) regarding bedding and diet are of particular importance in the case of a person likely to be detained for an extended period: Code C Guidance note 8A.

11 A 'health care professional' means a clinically qualified person working within the scope of practice as determined by the relevant professional body: Code C Guidance note 9A. Whether a health care professional is 'appropriate' depends on the circumstances of the duties he carries out at the time: Code C Guidance note 9A.

12 Code C para 8.6.

13 Code C para 8.6. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(iii) Conditions of Detention; Care and Treatment of Detained Persons/958. Care and treatment of detained persons.

958. Care and treatment of detained persons.

Detainees should be visited at least every hour, but, if no reasonably foreseeable risk was identified in a risk assessment<sup>1</sup>, there is no need to wake a sleeping detainee<sup>2</sup>. Those suspected of being intoxicated through drink or drugs, or of having swallowed drugs<sup>3</sup>, or whose level of consciousness causes concern must, subject to any clinical directions given by the appropriate health care professional<sup>4</sup>, be visited and roused at least every half hour, have their condition assessed in accordance with the prescribed observation list<sup>5</sup>, and have clinical treatment arranged if appropriate<sup>6</sup>.

When arrangements are made to secure clinical attention for a detainee, the custody officer must make sure all relevant information which might assist in the treatment of the detainee's condition is made available to the responsible health care professional; and this applies whether or not the health care professional asks for such information<sup>7</sup>. Any officer or police staff with relevant information must inform the custody officer as soon as practicable<sup>8</sup>.

The custody officer must make sure that a detainee receives appropriate clinical attention as soon as reasonably practicable<sup>9</sup> if the person:

- 1314 (1) appears to be suffering from physical illness<sup>10</sup>;
- 1315 (2) is injured<sup>11</sup>;
- 1316 (3) appears to be suffering from mental disorder<sup>12</sup>; or
- 1317 (4) appears to need clinical attention<sup>13</sup>.

This applies even if the detainee makes no request for clinical attention and whether or not he has already received clinical treatment elsewhere<sup>14</sup>. If the need for attention appears urgent, the nearest available health care professional or an ambulance must be called immediately<sup>15</sup>.

If it appears to the custody officer, or he is told, that a person brought to the police station under arrest may be suffering from an infectious disease or condition, the custody officer must take reasonable steps to safeguard the health of the detainee and others at the station<sup>16</sup>. In deciding what action to take, advice must be sought from an appropriate health care professional<sup>17</sup>. The custody officer has discretion to isolate the person and his property until clinical directions have been obtained<sup>18</sup>.

If a detainee requests a clinical examination, an appropriate health care professional must be called as soon as practicable to assess the detainee's clinical needs<sup>19</sup>. If a safe and appropriate care plan cannot be provided, the police surgeon's advice must be sought<sup>20</sup>. The detainee may also be examined by a medical practitioner of his own choice at his expense<sup>21</sup>. A record must be made in the custody record of any such request for a clinical examination, and of any arrangements made in response<sup>22</sup>.

If a detainee is required to take or apply any medication in compliance with clinical directions prescribed before his detention, the custody officer must contact the appropriate health care professional before the use of the medication<sup>23</sup>. Any such consultation and its outcome must be noted in the custody record<sup>24</sup>. The custody officer is responsible for the safe keeping of any medication and for making sure that the detainee is given the opportunity to take or apply prescribed or approved medication<sup>25</sup>. No police officer may administer or supervise the self-administration of medically prescribed controlled drugs of specified types and forms<sup>26</sup>. A detainee may self-administer such drugs only under the personal supervision of the registered medical practitioner<sup>27</sup> authorising their use<sup>28</sup>. Other specified drugs<sup>29</sup> may be distributed by the custody officer for self-administration if he has consulted the registered medical practitioner authorising their use, which may be done by telephone, and both parties are satisfied that self-administration will not expose the detainee, police officers or anyone else to the risk of harm or injury<sup>30</sup>.

If a detainee has in his possession, or claims to need, medication relating to a heart condition, diabetes, epilepsy or a condition of comparable potential seriousness then, even though these provisions may not apply, the advice of the appropriate health care professional must be obtained<sup>31</sup>.

Whenever the appropriate health care professional is called in accordance with these provisions to examine or treat a detainee, the custody officer must ask for his opinion about any risks or problems which police need to take into account when making decisions about the detainee's continued detention, when to carry out an interview (if applicable), and the need for safeguards<sup>32</sup>.

When clinical directions are given by the appropriate health care professional, whether orally or in writing, and the custody officer has any doubts or is in any way uncertain about any aspect of them, the custody officer must ask for clarification<sup>33</sup>.

In addition to the records already referred to, a record must be made in the custody record of: the injury, ailment, condition or other reason which made it necessary to make arrangements for medical attention<sup>34</sup>; any clinical directions and advice, including any further clarifications, given to police by a health care professional concerning the care and treatment of the detainee in connection with any arrangements<sup>35</sup>; and, if applicable, the responses received when attempting to rouse a person using the procedure in the prescribed observation list<sup>36</sup>.

If a health care professional does not record his clinical findings in the custody record, the record must show where they are recorded<sup>37</sup>, but information which is necessary to custody staff to ensure the effective ongoing care and well being of the detainee must be recorded openly in the custody record<sup>38</sup>.

Subject to the provisions relating to the detainee's property<sup>39</sup>, the custody record must include a record of all medication a detainee has in his possession on arrival at the police station; and a note of any such medication that he claims to need but does not have with him<sup>40</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions prevents the police from calling the police surgeon or, if appropriate, some other health care professional, to examine a detainee for the purposes of obtaining evidence relating to any offence in which the detainee is suspected of being involved<sup>41</sup>.

If a complaint is made by or on behalf of a detainee about his treatment since his arrest, or it comes to notice that a detainee may have been treated improperly, a report must be made as soon as practicable to an officer of inspector rank or above who is not connected with the investigation<sup>42</sup>. If the matter concerns a possible assault or the possibility of the unnecessary or unreasonable use of force, an appropriate health care professional must also be called as soon as practicable<sup>43</sup>.

1 See Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 3.6-3.10; and PARA 948 ante.

2 Code C para 9.3.

3 The provisions of Code C para 9.3 would apply to a person in police custody by order of a magistrates' court under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 152 (as amended) (remands of suspected drug offenders to detention: see PARA 770 ante) to facilitate the recovery of evidence after being charged with drug possession or drug trafficking and suspected of having swallowed drugs: Code C Guidance note 9CA. In the case of the healthcare needs of a person who has swallowed drugs, the custody officer, subject to any clinical directions, should consider the necessity for rousing every half hour (although this does not negate the need for regular visiting of the suspect in the cell): Code C Guidance note 9CA. As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

4 See Code C para 9.13; and the text and note 32 infra. For the meaning of 'health care professional', and as to whether a health care professional is 'appropriate', see PARA 957 note 11 ante.

5 The observation list is contained in Code C Annex H, which provides that when assessing the level of rousability, consideration should be given to rousability, response to questions and response to commands: Code C Annex H para 2. In assessing the level of rousability, Code C Annex H requires the custody officer to consider whether the detainee can be woken by going into the cell, calling his name and shaking him gently; to consider whether the detainee can give appropriate answers to questions such as 'what is your name?', 'where do you live?', and 'where do you think you are?'; and to consider whether he can respond appropriately to commands such as 'open your eyes!' and 'lift one arm, now the other arm!': Code C Annex H para 2. Custody officers are also required to remember to take into account the possibility or presence of other illnesses, injury, or mental condition and that a person who is drowsy and smells of alcohol may also have diabetes, epilepsy, head injury, drug intoxication or overdose, or stroke: Code C Annex H para 3. If any detainee fails to meet any of these criteria, an appropriate health care professional or an ambulance must be called: Code C Annex H para 1.

6 Code C para 9.3. Whenever possible juveniles and mentally vulnerable detainees should be visited more frequently: Code C Guidance note 9B. A detainee who appears drunk or behaves abnormally may be suffering from illness or the effects of drugs or may have sustained injury, particularly a head injury which is not apparent. A detainee needing or dependent on certain drugs, including alcohol, may experience harmful effects within a short time of being deprived of his supply. In these circumstances, when there is any doubt, police should always act urgently to call an appropriate health care professional or an ambulance: Code C Guidance note 9C. The purpose of recording a person's responses when attempting to rouse him using the procedure in Code C Annex H is to enable any change in the individual's consciousness level to be noted and clinical treatment arranged if appropriate: Code C Guidance note 9H.

7 Code C para 9.4.

8 Code C para 9.4.

9 A record must be made in the custody record of any arrangements made in accordance with Code C para 9.5 (see the text and notes 10-13 infra): Code C para 9.15(b). This provision does not require any information about the cause of any injury, ailment or condition to be recorded on the custody record if it appears capable of providing evidence of an offence: Code C Guidance note 9G.

10 Code C para 9.5(a). Code C para 9.5 does not apply to minor ailments or injuries which do not need attention; but all such ailments or injuries must be recorded in the custody record and any doubt must be resolved in favour of calling the appropriate health care professional: Code C Guidance note 9C.

11 Code C para 9.5(b). See note 10 supra.

12 Code C para 9.5(c). As to the meaning of 'mental disorder' see PARA 940 note 9 ante. Code C para 9.5 is not meant to prevent or delay the transfer to a hospital if necessary of a person detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 s 136 (see MENTAL HEALTH VOL 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 550): Code C para 9.6. Whenever practicable, arrangements should be made for persons detained for assessment under the Mental Health Act 1983 s 136 to be taken to a hospital: Code C Guidance note 9D. There is no power under the Mental Health Act 1983 to transfer a person detained under s 136 from one place of safety to another place of safety for assessment: Code C Guidance note 9D. When an assessment under the Mental Health Act 1983 takes place at a police station (see Code C para 3.16; and PARA 949 ante), the custody officer must consider whether an appropriate health care professional should be called to conduct an initial clinical check on the detainee: Code C para 9.6. This applies particularly when there is likely to be any significant delay in the arrival of a suitably qualified medical practitioner: Code C para 9.6.

13 Code C para 9.5(d). See note 10 supra.

14 Code C para 9.5A. The custody officer must also consider the need for clinical attention as set out in Code C Guidance note 9C in relation to detainees suffering the effects of alcohol or drugs: Code C para 9.5B.

15 Code C para 9.5A. See also Code C Guidance note 9C.

16 Code C para 9.7.

- 17 Code C para 9.7. It is important to respect a person's right to privacy, and information about his health must be kept confidential and disclosed only with his consent or in accordance with clinical advice when it is necessary to protect the detainee's health or that of others who come into contact with him: Code C Guidance note 9E.

- 19 Code C para 9.8.
- 20 Code C para 9.8.
- 21 Code C para 9.8.

- 23 Code C para 9.9.
- 24 Code C para 9.9.
- 25 Code C para 9.9.

- 30 Code C para 9.10. When appropriate health care professionals administer drugs or other medications, or supervise their self-administration, it must be within current medicines legislation see (MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AND DRUGS) and the scope of practice as determined by the relevant professional body: Code C para 9.11.
- 31 Code C para 9.12.
- 32 Code C para 9.13.
- 33 Code C para 9.14. It is particularly important that directions concerning the frequency of visits are clear, precise and capable of being implemented: Code C para 9.14. The custody officer should always seek to clarify directions that the detainee requires constant observation or supervision and should ask the appropriate health care professional to explain precisely what action needs to be taken to implement such directions: Code C Guidance note 9F.
- 34 Code C para 9.15(d). This provision does not require any information about the cause of any injury, ailment or condition to be recorded on the custody record if it appears capable of providing evidence of an offence: Code C Guidance note 9G.
- 35 Code C para 9.15(e). See Code C Guidance note 9F; and the text and note 33 supra.
- 36 Code C para 9.15(f). As to the prescribed observation list see Code C Annex H; and note 5 supra. The purpose of recording a person's responses when attempting to rouse them using the procedure in Code C Annex H is to enable any change in the individual's consciousness level to be noted and clinical treatment arranged if appropriate: Code C Guidance note 9H.

42 Code C para 9.2. All officers dealing with detained persons are, of course, under a duty to observe not only these provisions but also those set out in Code C para 9 and Guidance note 9D (see note 12 supra).

43 Code C para 9.2. A record must be made in the custody record of the arrangements made for an examination by an appropriate health care professional under Code C para 9.2 and of any complaint reported thereunder, together with any relevant remarks by the custody officer: Code C para 9.15(a).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(iv) Cautions/959. Cautions.

(iv) Cautions

959. Cautions.

A person whom there are grounds to suspect of an offence<sup>1</sup> must be cautioned before any questions about an offence, or further questions if the answers provide grounds for suspicion, are put to him if the suspect's answers or silence<sup>2</sup> may be given in evidence to a court in a prosecution<sup>3</sup>. A person need not be cautioned if questions are for other necessary purposes, for example:

- 1318 (1) solely to establish his identity or ownership of any vehicle<sup>4</sup>;
- 1319 (2) to obtain information in accordance with any relevant statutory requirement<sup>5</sup>;
- 1320 (3) in furtherance of the proper and effective conduct of a search<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1321 (4) to seek verification of a written record of comments made by a suspect outside the context of an interview<sup>7</sup>.

Whenever a person not under arrest is initially cautioned, or reminded that he is under caution, he must at the same time be told that he is not under arrest and is free to leave if he wants to<sup>8</sup>. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be informed at the time, or as soon as practicable thereafter, of the fact that he is under arrest and of the grounds for his arrest<sup>9</sup>. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must also be cautioned<sup>10</sup> unless either:

- 1322 (a) it is impracticable to do so by reason of his condition or behaviour at the time<sup>11</sup>; or
- 1323 (b) he has already been cautioned<sup>12</sup> immediately prior to arrest<sup>13</sup>.

The caution which must be given on arrest<sup>14</sup>, and on all other occasions before a person is charged or informed that he may be prosecuted<sup>15</sup>, should, unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence<sup>16</sup> applies, be in the following terms: 'You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention when questioned something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence.'<sup>17</sup> Minor deviations from the words of a caution<sup>18</sup> do not constitute a breach of this requirement provided that the sense of the relevant caution is preserved<sup>19</sup>.

After any break in questioning under caution, the person being interviewed must be made aware that he remains under caution; and if there is any doubt, the caution should be given again in full when the interview resumes<sup>20</sup>.

When, despite being cautioned, a person fails to co-operate or to answer particular questions which may affect his immediate treatment<sup>21</sup>, he should be informed of any relevant consequences and that those consequences are not affected by the caution<sup>22</sup>.

When a suspect interviewed at a police station or authorised place of detention after arrest fails or refuses to answer certain questions, or to answer satisfactorily, after due warning<sup>23</sup>, a court or jury may draw such inferences as appear proper under the relevant statutory provisions<sup>24</sup>. Such inferences may be drawn only when:

- 1324 (i) the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence<sup>25</sup> does not apply<sup>26</sup>;
- 1325 (ii) the suspect is arrested by a constable and fails or refuses to account for any objects, marks or substances, or marks on such objects, found on his person, in or on his clothing or footwear, otherwise in his possession, or in the place where he was arrested<sup>27</sup>; and
- 1326 (iii) the arrested suspect was found by a constable at a place at or about the time the offence for which that officer has arrested him is alleged to have been committed, and the suspect fails or refuses to account for his presence there<sup>28</sup>.

When the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies, the suspect may still be asked to account for any of the matters referred to in head (ii) or head (iii) above but the special warning<sup>29</sup> will not apply and must not be given<sup>30</sup>.

For an inference to be drawn when a suspect fails or refuses to answer a question about one of these matters or to answer it satisfactorily, the suspect must first be told in ordinary language what offence is being investigated<sup>31</sup>, what fact he is being asked to account for<sup>32</sup>, that such fact may be due to him taking part in the commission of the offence<sup>33</sup>, that a court may draw a proper inference if he fails or refuses to account for that fact<sup>34</sup>, and that a record is being made of the interview and may be given in evidence if he is brought to trial<sup>35</sup>.

If a juvenile or a person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable<sup>36</sup> is cautioned in the absence of the appropriate adult<sup>37</sup>, the caution must be repeated in the adult's presence<sup>38</sup>.

A record must be made when a caution is given, either in the interviewer's pocket book or in the interview record<sup>39</sup>.

1 There must be some reasonable, objective grounds for the suspicion, based on known facts or information which are relevant to the likelihood that the offence has been committed and that the person to be questioned committed it: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 10A.

2 The failure or refusal to answer or answer satisfactorily: Code C para 10.1.

3 Code C para 10.1. In R v Gill [2003] EWCA Crim 2256, [2003] 4 All ER 681, [2004] 1 WLR 469, it was held that Code C applied to 'Hansard interviews' conducted by Special Compliance Officers of the Inland Revenue (now Revenue and Customs). A failure to caution is not an abuse of the process of the court: R v Bow Street Metropolitan Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p DPP (1992) 95 Cr App Rep 9, DC. Where a person is informally questioned without a caution at a time when there are no grounds to suspect him of an offence, any evidence given by him will not be excluded under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 1365 post): R v James [1996] Crim LR 650, CA. See also R v Nelson [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 399, CA (customs officer ought to have administered caution before asking traveller questions about baggage); R v Senior [2004] EWCA Crim 454, [2004] 3 All ER 9, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 215.

7 Code C para 10.1(d). As to verification of a written record see Code C para 11.13; and PARA 961 post.

8 Code C para 10.2. The restriction on drawing inferences from silence (see Code C Annex C para 1; and PARA 1042 post) does not apply to a person who has not been detained and who therefore cannot be prevented from seeking legal advice if he wants: Code C Guidance note 10C. See also Code C para 3.21; and PARA 909 ante.

9 Code C para 10.3. An arrested person must be given sufficient information to enable him to understand that he has been deprived of his liberty and the reason why he has been arrested (eg when a person is arrested on suspicion of committing an offence he must be informed of the suspected offence's nature, and when and where it was committed): Code C Guidance note 10B. The grounds for arrest must include an explanation of the conditions which make the arrest necessary, and the suspect must also be informed of the reason or reasons why the arrest is considered necessary; vague or technical language should be avoided: Code C Guidance note 10B. See also Code G: Code of Practice for the Statutory Power of Arrest by Police Officers para 2.2, 4.3; and PARAS 931-932 ante.

16 See Code C Annex B; and PARAS 955-956 ante.

17 Code C para 10.5. Nothing in Code C requires a caution to be given or repeated when informing a person not under arrest that he may be prosecuted for an offence: however, a court will not be able to draw any inferences under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 34 (as amended) (see PARA 1552 post) if the person was not cautioned: Code C Guidance note 10G. Code C Annex C para 2 (see PARA 1042 post) sets out the alternative terms of the caution to be used when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies: Code C para 10.6.

18 le a caution given in accordance with Code C.

19 Code C para 10.7. If it appears a person does not understand the caution, the person giving it should explain it in his own words: Code C Guidance note 10D.

20 Code C para 10.8. It may be necessary to show to the court that nothing occurred during an interview break or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence: Code C Guidance note 10E. After a break in an interview or at the beginning of a subsequent interview, the interviewing officer should summarise the reason for the break and confirm this with the suspect: Code C Guidance note 10E. Where a person is asked further questions in a police car on the way to the police station after his arrest, failure to caution him prior to the questioning is a breach of Code C para 10.8: R v Kingsley Brown [1989] Crim LR 500.

21 Examples are when a person's refusal to provide his name and address when charged may make him liable to detention, or when a person's refusal to provide particulars and information in accordance with a statutory requirement (for example the Road Traffic Act 1988) may amount to an offence or may make the person liable to a further arrest: Code C para 10.9.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/A. GENERAL PROVISIONS/960. In general.

(v) Interviews

A. GENERAL PROVISIONS

960. In general.

An interview is the questioning of a person regarding his involvement or suspected involvement in a criminal offence or offences which<sup>1</sup> must be carried out under caution<sup>2</sup>. Whenever a person is interviewed he must be informed of the nature of the offence or further offence<sup>3</sup>. Procedures relating to the provision of specimens for analysis under the drink-drive legislation and related legislation<sup>4</sup> do not constitute interviewing for these purposes<sup>5</sup>.

Following a decision to arrest a suspect, he must not be interviewed about the relevant offence except at a police station or other authorised place of detention, unless the consequent delay would be likely to:

- 1327 (1) lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an offence<sup>6</sup>;
- 1328 (2) lead to interference with, or physical harm to, other people<sup>7</sup>;
- 1329 (3) lead to serious loss of, or damage to, property<sup>8</sup>;
- 1330 (4) lead to alerting other people suspected of committing an offence but not yet arrested for it<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1331 (5) hinder the recovery of property obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence<sup>10</sup>.

Interviewing in any of these circumstances must cease once the relevant risk has been averted or the necessary questions have been put in order to attempt to avert that risk<sup>11</sup>.

Immediately prior to the commencement or recommencement of any interview at a police station or other authorised place of detention, the interviewer should remind the suspect of his entitlement to free legal advice and that the interview can be delayed for legal advice to be obtained, unless one of the specified exceptions<sup>12</sup> applies; it is the interviewer's responsibility to make sure that all reminders are recorded in the interview record<sup>13</sup>.

At the beginning of an interview the interviewer, after cautioning the suspect<sup>14</sup>, must put to him any significant statement or silence<sup>15</sup> which occurred in the presence and hearing of a police officer or other police staff before the start of the interview and which have not been put to the suspect in the course of a previous interview<sup>16</sup>. The interviewer must ask the suspect whether he confirms or denies that earlier statement or silence and if he wants to add anything<sup>17</sup>.

No interviewer may try to obtain answers to questions or to elicit a statement by the use of oppression<sup>18</sup>. No interviewer may<sup>19</sup> indicate, except in answer to a direct question, what action will be taken on the part of the police if the person being questioned answers questions, makes a statement or refuses to do either<sup>20</sup>. If the person asks directly what action will be taken if he answers questions, makes a statement or refuses to do either, the interviewer may inform him what action the police propose to take provided that that action is itself proper and warranted<sup>21</sup>.

The interview or further interview of a person about an offence with which that person has not been charged or for which he has not been informed he may be prosecuted, must cease when:

- 1332 (a) the officer in charge of the investigation is satisfied that all the questions he considers relevant to obtaining accurate and reliable information about the offence have been put to the suspect, including allowing the suspect an opportunity to give an innocent explanation and asking questions to test if the explanation is accurate and reliable<sup>22</sup>;
- 1333 (b) the officer in charge of the investigation has taken account of any other available evidence<sup>23</sup>; and
- 1334 (c) the officer in charge of the investigation, or in the case of a detained suspect, the custody officer<sup>24</sup>, reasonably believes there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction for that offence if the person was prosecuted for it<sup>25</sup>.

1     le under Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 10.1: see PARA 959 ante.

2     Code C para 11.1A. The questioning need not be formal; an informal conversation can amount to an interview for these purposes: R v Sparks [1991] Crim LR 128, CA. One question (and one answer) can amount to an interview for these purposes: R v Ward (1993) 98 Cr App Rep 337, CA; R v Miller [1998] Crim LR 209, CA. Where a person, even if he is a suspect in a police station, volunteers information to investigating officers without any form of questioning and the officers merely make a note of what is said, that does not amount to an 'interview' for the purposes of Code C: R v Menard [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 306, CA.

3     Code C para 11.1A.

4     le under the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 7 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 986) or the Transport and Works Act 1992 s 31 (as amended) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 379): Code C para 11.1A. See also DPP v Rous, DPP v D (A Juvenile) (1992) 94 Cr App Rep 185, DC (procedure for obtaining specimens under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 7, 8 not an interview for the purposes of Code C).

13    Code C para 11.2.

14    le under the provisions in Code C paras 10.1-10.13: see PARA 959 ante.

15    A significant statement is one which appears capable of being used in evidence against the suspect, in particular a direct admission of guilt: Code C para 11.4A. A significant silence is a failure or refusal to answer a question or to answer satisfactorily when under caution, which might, allowing for the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence (see Code C Annex C; and PARA 1042 post) give rise to an inference under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 Pt III (ss 32-53) (as amended) (see PARA 1449 et seq post): Code C para 11.4A.

16    Code C para 11.4. This does not prevent the interviewer from putting significant statements and silences to a suspect again at a later stage or a further interview: Code C Guidance note 11A.

17    Code C para 11.4.

18 Code C para 11.5. Questions which are deliberately asked with the intention of producing a disordered state of mind will amount to oppression; but the mere fact that questions addressed to the suspect trigger off hallucinations is not indicative of oppression: R v Miller [1986] 3 All ER 119, [1986] 1 WLR 1191, CA. As to the admissibility of confessions obtained by oppression see PARA 1540 post; and as to the trial judge's discretion to exclude confessions obtained in breach of the relevant code of practice see PARAS 1365, 1545 post.

19 Ie except as provided by Code C para 10.9: see PARA 959 ante.

20 Code C para 11.5. An offer to an arrested person that, if he is willing to give evidence against a co-defendant, he will be used as a prosecution witness and not prosecuted himself may, on rare occasions, be justified; but the arrested person must be given full opportunity to discuss the matter with a solicitor before coming to a decision: R v Mathias (1989) Times, 24 August, CA.

21 Code C para 11.5.

22 Code C para 11.6(a). Examples of questions to test if the explanation is accurate and reliable are questions to clear up ambiguities or clarify what the suspect said: Code C para 11.6(a). Code C para 11.6 does not prevent officers in revenue cases or acting under the confiscation provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 (repealed), the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 (repealed) or the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391 et seq) from inviting suspects to complete a formal question and answer record after the interview is concluded: Code C para 11.6. Nothing in Code C prevents a police officer from asking questions at or near the scene of a suspected crime to elicit an explanation which, if true or accepted, would exculpate a suspect: R v Maguire (1990) 90 Cr App Rep 115, [1989] Crim LR 815, CA.

23 Code C para 11.6(b). See note 22 supra.

24 See Code C para 16.1; and PARA 1042 post. As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

25 Code C para 11.6(c). See note 22 supra. In conducting an investigation, the investigator should pursue all reasonable lines of inquiry, whether these point towards or away from the suspect: Code C Guidance note 11B. What is reasonable will depend on the particular circumstances; interviewers should keep this in mind when deciding what questions to ask in an interview: Code C Guidance note 11B.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/A. GENERAL PROVISIONS/961. Interview records.

961. Interview records.

An accurate record must be made of each interview, whether or not the interview takes place at a police station<sup>1</sup>. The record must state the place of interview, the time it begins and ends, any interview breaks and<sup>2</sup> the names of all those present; and must be made either on the forms provided for this purpose, or in the interviewer's pocket book, or in accordance with the relevant codes of practice for the audio or visual recording of interviews<sup>3</sup>.

Any written record must be made and completed during the course of the interview, unless this would not be practicable or would interfere with the conduct of the interview, and must constitute either a verbatim record of what has been said or, failing this, an account of the interview which adequately and accurately summarises it<sup>4</sup>. If a written interview record is not made during the course of the interview, it must be made as soon as practicable after the interview's completion<sup>5</sup>. Written interview records must be timed and signed by the maker<sup>6</sup>. If a written interview record is not completed during the interview, the reason must be recorded in the interview record<sup>7</sup>.

Unless it is impracticable, the person interviewed must be given the opportunity to read the interview record and to sign it as correct or to indicate how he considers it inaccurate<sup>8</sup>. If the person interviewed cannot read or refuses to read the record or sign it, the senior interviewer present must read it to him and ask whether he would like to sign it as correct or make his mark or to indicate how he considers it inaccurate<sup>9</sup>. The interviewer must certify on the interview record itself what has occurred<sup>10</sup>.

If the appropriate adult or the person's solicitor is present during the interview, that person should also be given an opportunity to read and sign the interview record or any written statement taken down during the interview<sup>11</sup>.

A written record must be made of any comments made by a suspect, including unsolicited comments, which are outside the context of an interview but which might be relevant to the offence; any such record must be timed and signed by the maker<sup>12</sup>. When practicable the suspect must be given the opportunity to read that record and to sign it as correct or to indicate how he considers it inaccurate<sup>13</sup>.

Any refusal by a person to sign an interview record when asked to do so must itself be recorded<sup>14</sup>.

1 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 11.7(a). A statement made under caution is confidential, although the confidentiality is ended by it being read out at trial: Bunn v British Broadcasting Corp [1998] 3 All ER 552, [1998] EMLR 846.

2 Ie subject to Code C para 2.6A: see PARA 940 ante.

The relevant codes of practice for the audio or visual recording of interviews are Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 971 et seq post) and Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 986 et seq post).

- 12 Code C para 11.13. Significant statements described in Code C paras 11.4, 11.4A (see PARA 960 ante) will always be relevant to the offence and must be recorded: Code C Guidance note 11E.
- 13 Code C para 11.13. When a suspect agrees to read records of interviews and other comments and sign them as correct, he should be asked to indorse the record with, for example, 'I agree that this is a correct record of what was said' and add his signature: Code C Guidance note 11E. If the suspect does not agree with the record, the interviewer should record the details of any disagreement and ask the suspect to read these details and sign them to the effect that they accurately reflect his disagreement: Code C Guidance note 11E. Any refusal to sign should be recorded: Code C Guidance note 11E.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/A. GENERAL PROVISIONS/962. Interviews of juveniles and mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable persons.

962. Interviews of juveniles and mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable persons.

A juvenile or person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable<sup>1</sup> must not<sup>2</sup> be interviewed regarding his involvement or suspected involvement in a criminal offence or offences, or asked to provide or sign a written statement under caution or record of interview, in the absence of the appropriate adult<sup>3</sup>.

Juveniles may be interviewed at their place of education only in exceptional circumstances and only when the principal or his nominee agrees<sup>4</sup>. Every effort should be made to notify the parent or parents or other person responsible for the juvenile's welfare and the appropriate adult, if this is a different person, that the police want to interview the juvenile; and reasonable time should be allowed to enable the appropriate adult to be present at the interview<sup>5</sup>. If awaiting the appropriate adult would cause unreasonable delay, and unless the juvenile is suspected of an offence against the educational establishment, the principal of the educational establishment or his nominee can act as the appropriate adult for the purposes of the interview<sup>6</sup>.

If an appropriate adult is present at an interview he must be informed that he is not expected to act simply as an observer<sup>7</sup> and that the purpose of his presence is to:

- 1335 (1) advise the person being interviewed<sup>8</sup>;
- 1336 (2) observe whether the interview is being conducted properly and fairly<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1337 (3) facilitate communication with the person being interviewed<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', see PARA 940 note 9 ante. Although juveniles or persons who are mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable are often capable of providing reliable evidence, they may, without knowing or wishing to do so, be particularly prone in certain circumstances to provide information that may be unreliable, misleading or self-incriminating: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 11C. Special care should always be taken when questioning such a person, and the appropriate adult should be involved if there is any doubt about a person's age, mental state or capacity: Code C Guidance note 11C. Because of the risk of unreliable evidence it is also important to obtain corroboration of any facts admitted whenever possible: Code C Guidance note 11C. For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante.

2 Ie unless Code C para 11.1 (see PARA 960 ante) or Code C paras 11.18-11.20 (see PARA 963 post) apply.

3 Code C para 11.15. See note 1 supra.

4 Code C para 11.16. Juveniles should not be arrested at their place of education unless this is unavoidable; and when a juvenile is so arrested the principal or his nominee must be informed: Code C Guidance note 11D.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/A. GENERAL PROVISIONS/963. Urgent interviews of vulnerable suspects at police stations.

963. Urgent interviews of vulnerable suspects at police stations.

For these purposes, a 'vulnerable suspect' is:

- 1338 (1) a juvenile or person who is mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable<sup>1</sup> if at the time of the interview the appropriate adult<sup>2</sup> is not present<sup>3</sup>;
- 1339 (2) any other person who at the time of the interview appears unable to appreciate the significance of questions and his answers or understand what is happening because of the effects of drink, drugs or any illness, ailment or condition<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1340 (3) a person who has difficulty understanding English or has a hearing disability, if at the time of the interview an interpreter is not present<sup>5</sup>.

Vulnerable suspects may not be interviewed unless an officer of superintendent rank or above considers delay will:

- 1341 (a) lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an offence<sup>6</sup>;
- 1342 (b) lead to interference with, or physical harm to, other people<sup>7</sup>;
- 1343 (c) lead to serious loss of, or damage to, property<sup>8</sup>;
- 1344 (d) lead to alerting other people suspected of committing an offence but not yet arrested for it<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1345 (e) hinder the recovery of property obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence<sup>10</sup>, and is satisfied the interview would not significantly harm the person's physical or mental state<sup>11</sup>. Such interviews may not continue once sufficient information has been obtained to avert the consequences in heads (a) to (e) above<sup>12</sup>. A record must be made of the grounds for any decision to interview a person under these provisions<sup>13</sup>.

11 Code C para 11.18. Code C Annex G contains general guidance to help police officers and health care professionals assess whether a detainee might be at risk in an interview: Code C Annex G para 1. A detainee may be at risk in an interview if it is considered that:

- 373 (1) conducting the interview could significantly harm the detainee's physical or mental state (Code C Annex G para 2(a)); or
- 374 (2) anything the detainee says in the interview about his involvement or suspected involvement in the offence about which he is being interviewed might be considered unreliable in subsequent court proceedings because of his physical or mental state (Code C Annex G para 2(b)).

In assessing whether the detainee should be interviewed, the following must be considered:

- 375 (a) how the detainee's physical or mental state might affect his ability to understand the nature and purpose of the interview, to comprehend what is being asked and to appreciate the significance of any answers given and to make rational decisions about whether he wants to say anything (Code C Annex G para 3(a));
- 376 (b) the extent to which the detainee's replies may be affected by his physical or mental condition rather than representing a rational and accurate explanation of his involvement in the offence (Code C Annex G para 3(b)); and
- 377 (c) how the nature of the interview, which could include particularly probing questions, might affect the detainee (Code C Annex G para 3(c)).

It is essential that health care professionals who are consulted consider the functional ability of the detainee rather than simply relying on a medical diagnosis; for example it is possible for a person with severe mental illness to be fit for interview: Code C Annex G para 4. Health care professionals should advise on the need for an appropriate adult to be present, on whether reassessment of the person's fitness for interview may be necessary if the interview lasts beyond a specified time, and on whether a further specialist opinion may be required: Code C Annex G para 5. When a health care professional identifies risks he should be asked to quantify the risks: he should inform the custody officer whether the person's condition is likely to improve, and whether it will require or be amenable to treatment, and should indicate how long it may take for such improvement to take effect: Code C Annex G para 6. The role of the health care professional is to consider the risks and advise the custody officer of the outcome of that consideration: his determination and any advice or recommendations should be made in writing and form part of the custody record: Code C Annex G para 7. Once the health care professional has provided that information, it is a matter for the custody officer to decide whether or not to allow the interview to go ahead and, if the interview is to proceed, to determine what safeguards are needed: Code C Annex G para 8. Nothing prevents safeguards being provided in addition to those required under Code C: Code C Annex G para 8. For example, an appropriate health care professional might be present during the interview, in addition to an appropriate adult, in order constantly to monitor the person's condition and how it is being affected by the interview: Code C Annex G para 8.

For the meaning of 'health care professional', and as to whether a health care professional is 'appropriate', see PARA 957 note 11 ante. As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

964. Interviews in police stations; in general.

If a police officer wants to interview or conduct inquiries which require the presence of a detainee, the custody officer<sup>1</sup> is responsible for deciding whether to deliver the detainee into the officer's custody<sup>2</sup>.

In any period of 24 hours<sup>3</sup> a detainee must be allowed a continuous period of at least eight hours for rest, free from questioning, travel or any interruption in connection with the investigation concerned; and this period should normally be at night or other appropriate time which takes account of when the detainee last slept or rested<sup>4</sup>. The period of rest may not be interrupted or delayed except:

- 1346 (1) when there are reasonable grounds for believing that not delaying or interrupting the period would involve a risk of harm to people or serious loss of, or damage to, property<sup>5</sup>, would delay unnecessarily the person's release from custody<sup>6</sup>, or would otherwise prejudice the outcome of the investigation<sup>7</sup>;
- 1347 (2) at the request of the detainee, his appropriate adult<sup>8</sup> or legal representative<sup>9</sup>;
- 1348 (3) when a delay or interruption is necessary in order to comply with the legal obligations and duties arising under the provisions relating to reviews and extensions of detention<sup>10</sup> or in order to take action required under the provisions relating to the care and treatment of detained persons<sup>11</sup> or in accordance with medical advice<sup>12</sup>.

If the period is interrupted in accordance with head (1) above, a fresh period must be allowed<sup>13</sup>. Interruptions under head (2) or head (3) above do not require a fresh period to be allowed<sup>14</sup>.

Before a detainee is interviewed the custody officer, in consultation with the officer in charge of the investigation and appropriate health care professionals<sup>15</sup> as necessary, must assess whether the detainee is fit enough to be interviewed<sup>16</sup>. The custody officer must not allow a detainee to be interviewed if he considers that it would cause significant harm to the detainee's physical or mental state<sup>17</sup>. Vulnerable suspects<sup>18</sup> must be treated as always being at some risk during an interview and these persons may not be interviewed except in accordance with the special provision made in respect of them<sup>19</sup>.

As far as practicable interviews must take place in interview rooms which must be adequately heated, lit and ventilated<sup>20</sup>.

A suspect whose detention without charge has been authorised<sup>21</sup> because the detention is necessary for an interview to obtain evidence of the offence for which he has been arrested may choose not to answer questions, although the police do not require the suspect's consent or agreement to interview him for this purpose<sup>22</sup>. If a suspect takes steps to prevent himself being questioned or further questioned<sup>23</sup> he must be advised that his consent or agreement to interview is not required<sup>24</sup>. The suspect must be cautioned<sup>25</sup> and informed that, if he fails or refuses to co-operate, the interview may take place in the cell and that his failure or refusal to co-operate may be given in evidence<sup>26</sup>. The suspect must then be invited to co-operate and go into the interview room<sup>27</sup>.

Persons being questioned or making statements must not be required to stand<sup>28</sup>.

Before the commencement of an interview each interviewer must<sup>29</sup> identify himself and any other persons present to the interviewee<sup>30</sup>.

Breaks from interviewing should be made at recognised meal times or at other times that take account of when an interviewee last had a meal; and short refreshment breaks must also be provided at intervals of approximately two hours<sup>31</sup>, subject to the interviewer's discretion to delay a break<sup>32</sup> if there are reasonable grounds for believing that it would:

- 1349 (a) involve a risk of harm to people or serious loss of, or damage to, property<sup>33</sup>;
- 1350 (b) unnecessarily delay the interviewee's release<sup>34</sup>; or
- 1351 (c) otherwise prejudice the outcome of the investigation<sup>35</sup>.

If during the interview a complaint is made by or on behalf of the interviewee<sup>36</sup>, the interviewer should record it in the interview record and inform the custody officer, who is then responsible for dealing<sup>37</sup> with it<sup>38</sup>.

965. Interviews in police stations; records.

A record must be made of the times a detainee is not in the custody of the custody officer<sup>1</sup>, and why; and of the reason for any refusal to deliver him out of that custody<sup>2</sup>. A record must also be made<sup>3</sup> of the reasons why it was not practicable to use an interview room<sup>4</sup> and of any action taken<sup>5</sup> in the event of the suspect taking steps to prevent himself being questioned or further questioned<sup>6</sup>. Any decision to delay a break in an interview must be recorded, with reasons, in the interview record<sup>7</sup>.

All written statements made at police stations under caution must be written on forms provided for the purpose<sup>8</sup>; and all written statements made under caution must be taken in accordance with the prescribed procedure<sup>9</sup>. Before a person makes a written statement under caution at a police station he must be reminded about the right to legal advice<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

2 Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 12.10.

3 This record must be made on the custody record, or in the interview record, in respect of action taken whilst an interview record is being kept (with a brief reference to this effect in the custody record): Code C para 12.11.

4 Code C para 12.11(a).

5 ie as in Code C para 12.5 (see PARA 964 ante).

8 Code C para 12.13.

9 Code C para 12.14. The prescribed procedure for written statements made under caution is provided by Code C Annex D (see PARA 966 post).

10 Code C para 12.14. It is not normally necessary to ask for a written statement if the interview was recorded at the time and the record signed by the interviewee in accordance with Code C para 11.11 (see PARA 961 ante) or audibly or visually recorded in accordance with Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 971 et seq post) or Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interview with Suspects (see PARA 986 et seq post): Code C Guidance note 12A. Statements under caution should normally be taken in these circumstances only at the person's express wish, although a person may be asked if he wants to make such a statement: Code C Guidance note 12A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/A. GENERAL PROVISIONS/966. Written statements under caution.

966. Written statements under caution.

A person must always be invited to write down himself what he wants to say<sup>1</sup>.

A person who has not been charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, any offence to which the statement he wants to write relates must be asked to write out and sign, before writing what he wants to say, either:

- 1352 (1) 'I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence' (unless the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence<sup>2</sup> applies)<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1353 (2) 'I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence' (if the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies)<sup>4</sup>.

When a person, on the occasion of being charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for any offence, asks to make a statement which relates to any such offence and wants to write it, he must be asked to write out and sign, before writing what he wants to say, either:

- 1354 (a) 'I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence' (unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when he was so charged or informed he may be prosecuted)<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1355 (b) 'I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence' (if the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when he was so charged or informed that he may be prosecuted)<sup>6</sup>.

When a person who has already been charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for any offence asks to make a statement which relates to any such offence and wants to write it, he must be asked to write out and sign, before writing what he wants to say: 'I make this statement of my own free will. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence'<sup>7</sup>.

Any person writing his own statement must be allowed to do so without any prompting except that a police officer or other police staff may indicate to him which matters are material or question any ambiguity in the statement<sup>8</sup>.

If a person says that he would like someone to write the statement for him, a police officer or other police staff must write the statement<sup>9</sup>. If the person has not been charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, any offence to which the statement he wants to make relates, he must, before starting, be asked to sign or make his mark to either:

- 1356 (i) 'I, . . . , wish to make a statement. I want someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence' (unless the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies)<sup>10</sup>; or
- 1357 (ii) 'I, . . . , wish to make a statement. I want someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence' (if the statement is made at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies)<sup>11</sup>.

If, on the occasion of being charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for any offence, the person asks to make a statement which relates to any such offence, and says that he would like someone to write it for him<sup>12</sup>, he must before starting be asked to sign or make his mark to either:

- 1358 (A) 'I, . . . , wish to make a statement. I want someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything but that it may harm my defence if I do not mention when questioned something which I later rely on in court. This statement may be given in evidence' (unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when he was so charged or informed that he may be prosecuted)<sup>13</sup>; or
- 1359 (B) 'I, . . . , wish to make this statement. I want someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence' (if the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applied when he was so charged or informed that he may be prosecuted)<sup>14</sup>.

If, having already been charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for any offence, a person asks to make a statement which relates to any such offence, and says that he would like someone to write it for him<sup>15</sup>, he must before starting, be asked to sign or make his mark to: 'I, . . . , wish to make a statement. I want someone to write down what I say. I understand that I do not have to say anything. This statement may be given in evidence'<sup>16</sup>.

The person writing the statement must take down the exact words spoken by the person making it and must not edit or paraphrase it; any questions that are necessary, for example to make it more intelligible, and the answers given must be recorded at the same time on the statement form<sup>17</sup>. When the writing of a statement is finished, the person making it must be asked to read it and to make any corrections, alterations or additions he wishes<sup>18</sup>. When he has finished reading it, he must be asked to write and sign or make his mark on the following certificate at the end of the statement: 'I have read the above statement, and I have been able to correct, alter or add anything I wish. This statement is true. I have made it of my own free will'<sup>19</sup>. If the person making the statement cannot read, or refuses to read it, or to write the above-mentioned certificate at the end of it or to sign it, the person taking the statement must read it to him and ask him whether he would like to correct, alter or add anything and to put his signature or make his mark at the end<sup>20</sup>. The person taking the statement must certify on the statement itself what has occurred<sup>21</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/B. INTERPRETERS/967. Interpreters; in general.

B. INTERPRETERS

967. Interpreters; in general.

Chief officers are responsible for making sure appropriate arrangements are in place for the provision of suitably qualified interpreters for persons who are deaf or who do not understand English<sup>1</sup>.

In relation to detained persons, all reasonable attempts should be made to make the detainee understand that interpreters will be provided at public expense<sup>2</sup>. Where the right to access to legal advice exists<sup>3</sup> and the detainee cannot communicate with the solicitor because of language, hearing or speech difficulties, an interpreter must be called<sup>4</sup>. The interpreter may not be a police officer or any other police staff when interpretation is needed for the purposes of obtaining legal advice<sup>5</sup>. In all other cases a police officer or other police staff may interpret only if the detainee and the appropriate adult<sup>6</sup>, if applicable, give their agreement in writing or if the interview is audibly recorded<sup>7</sup> or visually recorded<sup>8</sup> in accordance with the prescribed procedure<sup>9</sup>. When the custody officer<sup>10</sup> cannot establish effective communication with a person charged with an offence who appears deaf or there is doubt about his ability to hear, speak or understand English, arrangements must be made as soon as practicable for an interpreter to explain the offence concerned and any other information given by the custody officer<sup>11</sup>. Action so taken to call an interpreter and any agreement to be interviewed in the absence of an interpreter must be recorded<sup>12</sup>.

As to interpreters of foreign languages see PARA 968 post; and as to interpreters for the deaf see PARA 969 post. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/B. INTERPRETERS/968. Interpreters; foreign languages.

968. Interpreters; foreign languages.

Except in the case of urgent interviews<sup>1</sup>, a person must not be interviewed in the absence of a person capable of interpreting if:

- 1360 (1) he has difficulty in understanding English<sup>2</sup>;
- 1361 (2) the interviewer cannot speak the person's own language<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1362 (3) the person wants an interpreter to be present<sup>4</sup>.

The interviewer must make sure that the interpreter makes a note of the interview at the time in the language of the person being interviewed for use in the event of the interpreter being called to give evidence, and certifies its accuracy<sup>5</sup>. The interviewer should allow sufficient time for the interpreter to note each question and answer after each is put, given and interpreted<sup>6</sup>. The person should be allowed to read the record or have it read to him and sign it as correct or indicate the respects in which he considers it inaccurate<sup>7</sup>. If the interview is audibly recorded<sup>8</sup> or visually recorded<sup>9</sup> the arrangements set out in the relevant code of practice apply<sup>10</sup>.

In the case of a person making a statement to a police officer or other police staff other than in English:

- 1363 (a) the interpreter must record the statement in the language in which it is made<sup>11</sup>;
- 1364 (b) the person must be invited to sign it<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1365 (c) an official English translation must be made in due course<sup>13</sup>.

1 Unless Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 11.1, 11.18-11.20 (see PARAS 960, 962 ante) apply: Code C para 13.2.

969. Interpreters; deaf persons and persons with speech difficulties.

Except in the case of urgent interviews<sup>1</sup>, if a person appears to be deaf or there is doubt about his hearing or speaking ability, he must not be interviewed in the absence of an interpreter unless he agrees in writing to be interviewed without one<sup>2</sup>.

An interpreter should also be called if a juvenile is interviewed and the parent or guardian present as the appropriate adult<sup>3</sup> appears to be deaf or there is doubt about his hearing or speaking ability, unless that person agrees in writing to the interview proceeding without one or it is urgent<sup>4</sup>.

The interviewer must make sure that the interpreter is allowed to read the interview record and certify its accuracy in the event of the interpreter being called to give evidence<sup>5</sup>. If the interview is audibly recorded<sup>6</sup> or visually recorded<sup>7</sup>, the arrangements set out in the relevant code of practice apply<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Code C para 13.5. If police officers are not aware that a person is deaf, it cannot be shown that there has been a breach of Code C para 13.5; it is for the officers to decide whether there is a doubt about his hearing ability, but, if a doubt arises during an interview, it would be a breach of Code C para 13.5 to continue with the interview: R v Clarke [1989] Crim LR 892, CA.

C. SPECIAL RESTRICTIONS

970. Questioning; special restrictions.

If a person has been arrested by one police force on behalf of another and the lawful period of detention in respect of that offence has not yet commenced<sup>1</sup>, no questions may be put to him about the offence while he is in transit between the forces except in order to clarify any voluntary statement made by him<sup>2</sup>. If a person is in police detention at a hospital he may not be questioned without the agreement of a responsible doctor<sup>3</sup>.

D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS

971. Code of practice.

The audio recording of interviews at police stations with suspected persons is governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects<sup>2</sup>, which is made under that Act. Code E does not apply to those persons excluded from the application of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers<sup>3</sup>.

1 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 60, which provides that it is the duty of the Secretary of State to issue a code of practice in connection with the tape recording of interviews of persons suspected of the commission of criminal offences which are held by police officers at police stations (s 60(1)(a)) and to make an order requiring the tape recording of interviews of persons suspected of the commission of criminal offences, or of such descriptions of criminal offences as may be specified in the order, which are so held, in accordance with the code as it has effect for the time being (s 60(1)(b)). Such an order must be made by statutory instrument and is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 60(2). As to codes of practice under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 see further PARA 908 ante.

2 As to Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects see PARA 972 et seq post. The notes for guidance included in Code E are not provisions of Code E: Code E para 1.2. Nothing in Code E is to be taken as detracting from the requirements of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see PARA 908 et seq ante): Code E para 1.3. Code E must be readily accessible for consultation by police officers, police staff, detained persons, and members of the public: Code E para 1.1. As to the commencement and scope of Code E see PARA 908 ante.

3 Code E para 1.4. As to the persons so excluded see Code C para 1.12; and PARA 908 ante.

UPDATE

971 Code of practice

TEXT AND NOTES--Revised Code of Practice E came into operation on 1 February 2008: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2008, SI 2008/167.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/972. Interviews to be audio recorded.

972. Interviews to be audio recorded.

Audio recording must be used at police stations for any interview:

- 1366 (1) with a person cautioned<sup>1</sup> in respect of any indictable offence<sup>2</sup>, including an offence triable either way<sup>3</sup>;
- 1367 (2) which takes place as a result of an interviewer exceptionally putting further questions to a suspect about such an offence after he has been charged with, or told that he may be prosecuted for, that offence<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1368 (3) when an interviewer wants to tell a person<sup>5</sup>, after he has been charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for an offence described in head (1) above, about any written statement or interview with another person<sup>6</sup>.

The custody officer<sup>7</sup> may authorise the interviewer not to audio record the interview when it is:

- 1369 (a) not reasonably practicable to do so because of equipment failure or the unavailability of a suitable interview room or recorder and the authorising officer considers, on reasonable grounds, that the interview should not be delayed<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1370 (b) clear from the outset that there will not be a prosecution<sup>9</sup>.

If a person refuses to go into or remain in a suitable interview room<sup>10</sup>, and the custody officer considers, on reasonable grounds, that the interview should not be delayed, the interview may, at the custody officer's discretion, be conducted in a cell using portable recording equipment or, if none is available, recorded in writing<sup>11</sup>; the reasons for this decision must be recorded<sup>12</sup>.

The whole of each interview must be audio recorded, including the taking and reading back of any statement<sup>13</sup>.

1 In accordance with Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 10.1-10.12 (see PARA 959 ante).

2 For the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post.

3 Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects para 3.1(a). For the meaning of 'triable either way' see PARA 1102 note 4 post. Nothing in Code E is intended to preclude audio recording at police discretion of interviews at police stations with persons cautioned in respect of offences not covered by Code E para 3.1, or responses made by interviewees after they have been charged with, or informed that they may be prosecuted for, an offence, provided that Code E is complied with: Code E Guidance note 3A. The Terrorism Act 2000 makes separate provision for a code of practice for the audio recording of interviews by police officers of persons arrested under s 41 or detained under Sch 7 (see PARA 430 et seq ante); see Code E para 3.2; and see the Terrorism Act 2000 (Code of Practice on Audio Recording of Interviews) Order 2001, SI 2001/159; the Terrorism Act 2000 (Code of Practice on Audio Recording of Interviews) (No 2) Order 2001, SI 2001/189; and PARA 421 ante. Code E does not apply to such interviews: Code E para 3.2.

4 Code E para 3.1(b). See note 3 supra. Circumstances in which a suspect may be questioned about an offence after being charged with it are set out in Code C para 16.5 (see PARA 1042 post).

5 Procedures to be followed when a person's attention is drawn after charge to a statement made by another person are set out in Code C para 16.4 (see PARA 1042 post).

6 Code E para 3.1(c). See note 3 supra.

7 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. References in Code E to a custody officer, as in Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 1.9 (see PARA 939 note 8 ante), include those performing the functions of a custody officer: Code E para 1.11.

Any reference in Code E to a police officer includes a designated person (ie a person other than a police officer designated under the Police Reform Act 2002 Pt 4 (ss 38-77) (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) who has specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on him) acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by his designation: Code E para 1.6. If a power conferred on a designated person allows reasonable force to be used when exercised by a police officer, a designated person exercising that power has the same entitlement to use force: Code E para 1.7(a). If a power conferred on a designated person includes power to use force to enter any premises, that power is not exercisable by that designated person except either in the company, and under the supervision, of a police officer (Code E para 1.7(b)(i)) or for the purpose of saving life or limb, or preventing serious damage to property (Code E para 1.7(b)(ii)).

Nothing in Code E prevents the custody officer, or other officer given custody of the detainee, from allowing police staff who are not designated persons to carry out individual procedures or tasks at the police station if the law allows: Code E para 1.8. However, the officer remains responsible for making sure the procedures and tasks are carried out correctly in accordance with the codes of practice: Code E para 1.8. Any such police staff must be either a person employed by a police authority maintaining a police force and under the control and direction of the chief officer of that force (Code E para 1.8(a)) or employed by a person with whom a police authority has a contract for the provision of services relating to persons arrested or otherwise in custody (Code E para 1.8(b)). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

8 Code E para 3.3(a). In these cases the interview should be recorded in writing in accordance with Code C paras 11.7-11.14 (see PARA 961 ante): Code E para 3.3. A decision not to audio record an interview for any reason may be the subject of comment in court; and the authorising officer should therefore be prepared to justify his decision: Code E Guidance note 3B. In all cases the custody officer must record the specific reasons for not audio recording: Code E para 3.3.

9 Code E para 3.3(b). See note 8 supra.

10 See Code C para 12.5; and PARA 964 ante.

11 Code E para 3.4.

12 Code E para 3.4.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/973. Recording and sealing of master recordings.

973. Recording and sealing of master recordings.

Audio recording of interviews must be carried out openly to instil confidence in its reliability as an impartial and accurate record of the interview<sup>1</sup>. One recording, 'the master recording', will be sealed in the suspect's presence; and a second recording will be used as a working copy<sup>2</sup>. The master recording is either of the two recordings used in a twin-deck/drive machine or the only recording used in a single deck/drive machine<sup>3</sup>. The working copy is either the second/third recording used in a twin/triple deck/drive machine or a copy of the master recording made by a single deck/drive machine<sup>4</sup>.

1 Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects para 2.1.

2 Code E para 2.2. The purpose of sealing the master recording in the suspect's presence is to show that the recording's integrity is preserved: Code E Guidance note 2A. If a single deck/drive machine is used, the working copy of the master recording must be made in the suspect's presence and without the master recording leaving his sight: Code E Guidance note 2A. The working copy must be used for making further copies if needed: Code E Guidance note 2A.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/974. The interview; in general.

974. The interview; in general.

The relevant provisions of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers<sup>1</sup> apply to the conduct of interviews to which Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects applies<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See Code C paras 10.1-10.13 (cautions: see PARA 959 ante) and Code C paras 11.1A-11.20 (interviews: see PARAS 960-963 ante); Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects para 4.1. The applicable notes of guidance also apply: Code E para 4.1. Code C paras 11.7-11.14 (see PARA 961 ante) apply only where a written record is needed: Code E para 4.1.

<sup>2</sup> Code E Para 4.1. Code C paras 10.10, 10.11 (see PARA 959 ante) and Code C Annex C (see PARA 1042 post) describe the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from a suspect's failure or refusal to say anything about his involvement in the offence when interviewed or after being charged or informed that he may be prosecuted, and how it affects the terms of the caution and determines if and by whom a special warning under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 36, 37 (as amended) (effect of defendant's failure to account for objects, substances or marks or for presence at a particular place: see PARAS 1553-1554 post) can be given: Code E para 4.2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/975. Commencement of interview.

975. Commencement of interview.

When the suspect is brought into the interview room, the interviewer must, without delay but in the suspect's sight, load the recorder with new recording media<sup>1</sup> and set it to record<sup>2</sup>. The recording media must be unwrapped or opened in the suspect's presence<sup>3</sup>. The interviewer should tell the suspect about the recording process; and he must:

- 1371 (1) say that the interview is being audibly recorded<sup>4</sup>;
- 1372 (2) give his name and rank and the name and rank of any other interviewer present<sup>5</sup>;
- 1373 (3) ask the suspect and any other party present (for example, a solicitor<sup>6</sup>) to identify themselves<sup>7</sup>;
- 1374 (4) state the date, time of commencement and place of the interview<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1375 (5) state that the suspect will be given a notice about what will happen to the copies of the recording<sup>9</sup>.

The interviewer must then caution the suspect<sup>10</sup>, and remind him of his entitlement<sup>11</sup> to free legal advice<sup>12</sup>. The interviewer must put to the suspect any significant statement or silence<sup>13</sup>.

1 'Recording media' means any removable, physical audio recording medium (such as magnetic tape, optical disc or solid state memory) which can be played and copied: Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects para 1.6(aa).

2 Code E para 4.3.

3 Code E para 4.3.

4 Code E para 4.4(a).

5 Code E para 4.4(b). Nothing in Code E requires the identity of officers or police staff conducting interviews to be recorded or disclosed: (1) in the case of inquiries linked to the investigation of terrorism (Code E para 2.3(a)); or (2) if the interviewer reasonably believes recording or disclosing his name might put him in danger (Code E para 2.3(b)). In these cases interviewers should use warrant or other identification numbers and the name of their police station: Code E para 2.3. The purpose of head (2) supra is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to those involved: Code E Guidance note 2C. In cases of doubt, an officer of inspector rank or above should be consulted: Code E Guidance note 2C.

6 For the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 953 note 4 ante; definition applied by Code E para 1.5.

7 Code E para 4.4(c). The purpose of this requirement is voice identification: Code E Guidance note 4A.

8 Code E para 4.4(d).

9 Code E para 4.4(e).

10 See Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers paras 10.1-10.13; and PARA 959 ante.

11 See under Code C para 11.2 (see PARA 960 ante).

- 12 Code E para 4.5.
- 13 Code E para 4.6. See Code C para 11.4; and PARA 960 ante.

976. Interviews with the deaf.

If the suspect is deaf or is suspected of having impaired hearing, the interviewer must make a written note of the interview<sup>1</sup>, at the same time as audio recording it<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects para 4.7. The reference in the text to audio recording the interview is a reference to audio recording it in accordance with Code E: Code E para 4.7. This provision is intended to give a person who is deaf or has impaired hearing equivalent rights of access to the full interview record as far as this is possible using audio recording: Code E Guidance note 4B. The provisions of Code C paras 13.1-13.11 (interpreters for deaf persons or for interviews with suspects who have difficulty in understanding English: see PARAS 967-969 ante) continue to apply: Code E Guidance note 4C. However, in an audibly recorded interview the requirement on the interviewer to make sure that the interpreter makes a separate note of the interview applies only to Code E para 4.7 (interview with deaf person): Code E Guidance note 4C.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/D. AUDIO RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/977. Objections and complaints by the suspect.

977. Objections and complaints by the suspect.

If the suspect objects to the interview being audibly recorded at the outset, during the interview or during a break, the interviewer must explain that the interview is being audibly recorded and that the code of practice<sup>1</sup> requires that the suspect's objections be recorded on the audio recording<sup>2</sup>. When any objections have been audibly recorded or the suspect has refused to have his objections recorded, the interviewer must say that he is turning off the recorder and give his reasons and then turn off the recorder<sup>3</sup>. The interviewer must then make a written record<sup>4</sup> of the interview<sup>5</sup>. If, however, the interviewer reasonably considers that he may proceed to question the suspect with the audio recording still on, he may do so<sup>6</sup>. This procedure also applies in cases where the suspect has previously objected to the interview being visually recorded<sup>7</sup>, and the investigating officer has decided to audibly record the interview<sup>8</sup>.

If in the course of an interview a complaint is made<sup>9</sup> by or on behalf of the person being questioned, the interviewer must act in the prescribed<sup>10</sup> manner<sup>11</sup>.

If the suspect indicates that he wants to tell the interviewer about matters not directly connected with the offence of which he is suspected and that he is unwilling for these matters to be audio recorded, he should be given the opportunity to tell the interviewer about these matters at the end of the formal interview<sup>12</sup>.

8    Code E para 4.8. See Code E Guidance note 4D; and note 6 supra.

9    Ie a complaint concerning the provisions of Code E or Code C.

10   Ie in accordance with Code C para 12.9 (see PARA 964 ante). If the custody officer is called to deal with the complaint, the recorder should, if possible, be left on until the custody officer has entered the room and spoken to the person being interviewed: Code E Guidance note 4E. Continuation or termination of the interview should be at the interviewer's discretion pending action by an inspector under Code C para 9.2 (see PARA 958 ante): Code E Guidance note 4E. If the complaint is about a matter not connected with Code E or Code C, the decision to continue is at the interviewer's discretion: Code E Guidance note 4F. When the interviewer decides to continue the interview, he must tell the suspect that the complaint will be brought to the custody officer's attention at the conclusion of the interview: Code E Guidance note 4F. When the interview is concluded the interviewer must, as soon as practicable, inform the custody officer about the existence and nature of the complaint made: Code E Guidance note 4F. As to custody officers see PARAS 939, 972 note 7 ante.

978. Changing recording media.

When the recorder shows that the recording media<sup>1</sup> have only a short time left, the interviewer must tell the suspect that the recording media are coming to an end and round off that part of the interview<sup>2</sup>. If the interviewer leaves the room for a second set of recording media, the suspect must not be left unattended<sup>3</sup>. The interviewer will remove the recording media from the recorder and insert the new recording media which must be unwrapped or opened in the suspect's presence<sup>4</sup>. The recorder should be set to record on the new media<sup>5</sup>. To avoid confusion between the recording media, the interviewer must mark the media with an identification number immediately they are removed from the recorder<sup>6</sup>.

979. Taking a break during interview.

When a break is to be taken, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reason for it and the time must be recorded on the audio recording<sup>1</sup>. When the break is taken and the interview room vacated by the suspect, the recording media<sup>2</sup> must be removed from the recorder and the prescribed procedures for the conclusion of an interview<sup>3</sup> followed<sup>4</sup>.

When a break is a short one and both the suspect and an interviewer remain in the interview room, the recording may be stopped; there is no need to remove the recording media and, when the interview recommences, the recording should continue on the same recording media<sup>5</sup>. The time at which the interview recommences must be recorded on the audio recording<sup>6</sup>.

After any break in the interview, the interviewer must, before resuming the interview, remind the person being questioned that he remains under caution or, if there is any doubt, give the caution in full again<sup>7</sup>.

The interviewer should remember that it may be necessary to show to the court that nothing occurred during a break or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence: Code E Guidance note 4G. After a break or at the beginning of a subsequent interview, the interviewer should consider summarising on the record the reason for the break and confirming this with the suspect: Code E Guidance note 4G.

980. Failure of recording equipment.

If there is an equipment failure which can be rectified quickly, for example by inserting new recording media<sup>1</sup>, the interviewer must follow the prescribed procedures<sup>2</sup>; and, when the recording is resumed, must explain what has happened and record the time at which the interview recommences<sup>3</sup>. If, however, it will not be possible to continue recording on that recorder and no replacement recorder is readily available, the interview may continue without being audibly recorded<sup>4</sup>. If this happens, the interviewer must seek the authority<sup>5</sup> of the custody officer<sup>6</sup>.

982. Conclusion of interview.

At the conclusion of the interview, the suspect must be offered the opportunity to clarify anything he has said and asked if there is anything that he wants to add<sup>1</sup>. At the conclusion of the interview, including the taking and reading back of any written statement, the time must be recorded and the recording stopped<sup>2</sup>. The interviewer must seal the master recording<sup>3</sup> with a master recording label and treat it as an exhibit in accordance with police force standing orders<sup>4</sup>. The interviewer must sign the label and ask the suspect and any third party present to sign it<sup>5</sup>. If the suspect or third party refuses to sign the label, an officer of at least inspector rank, or if not available the custody officer<sup>6</sup>, must be called into the interview room and asked<sup>7</sup> to sign it<sup>8</sup>.

The suspect must be handed a notice which explains: (1) how the audio recording will be used; (2) the arrangements for access to it; and (3) that if he is charged or informed that he will be prosecuted, a copy of the audio recording will be supplied as soon as practicable or as otherwise agreed between him and the police<sup>9</sup>.

The interviewer must make a note in his pocket book<sup>1</sup> that the interview has taken place, that it was audibly recorded, and its time, duration and date and the master recording's<sup>2</sup> identification number<sup>3</sup>. If no proceedings follow in respect of the person whose interview was recorded, the recording media<sup>4</sup> must be kept<sup>5</sup> securely<sup>6</sup>.

The officer in charge of each police station at which interviews with suspects are recorded must make arrangements for master recordings<sup>1</sup> to be kept securely and their movements accounted for on the same basis as material which may be used for evidential purposes, in accordance with police force standing orders<sup>2</sup>.

A police officer has no authority to break the seal on a master recording which is required for criminal trial or appeal proceedings<sup>3</sup>. If it is necessary to gain access to the master recording, the police officer must arrange for its seal to be broken in the presence of a representative of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>4</sup>. The defendant or his legal adviser should be informed and given a reasonable opportunity to be present<sup>5</sup>. If the defendant or his legal representative is present, he must be invited to reseal and sign the master recording<sup>6</sup>. If either refuses or neither is present this should be done by the representative of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>7</sup>.

If no criminal proceedings result, or the criminal trial and, if applicable, appeal proceedings to which the interview relates have been concluded, the chief officer of police<sup>8</sup> is responsible for establishing arrangements for the breaking of the seal on the master recording, if necessary<sup>9</sup>.

When the master recording seal is broken, a record must be made of the procedure followed, including the date, time and place and persons present<sup>10</sup>.

985. Preparing audio recorded evidence for the Crown Court.

Where the prosecution intends to adduce evidence of the interview, and agreement between the parties has not been reached about the record, sufficient notice must be given to allow consideration of any amendment to the record of interview or the preparation of any transcript of the interview or any editing<sup>1</sup> of a recording for the purpose of playing it back in court<sup>2</sup>. To that end, the following practice should be followed:

- 1376 (1) where the defence is unable to agree a record of interview or transcript (where one is already available) the prosecution should be notified<sup>3</sup> no more than 21 days<sup>4</sup> from the date of committal or date of transfer<sup>5</sup> or at the plea and directions hearing if earlier, with a view to securing agreement to amend; and a copy of such notice should be supplied to the court within the 21-day period<sup>6</sup>;
- 1377 (2) if agreement is not reached and it is proposed that the recording or part of it be played in court, notice should be given to the prosecution by the defence no more than 14 days<sup>7</sup> after the expiry of the period in head (1) above, or as ordered at the plea and directions hearing, in order that counsel for the parties may agree those parts of the recording that should not be adduced and that arrangements may be made, by editing or in some other way, to exclude that material; and a copy of such notice should be supplied to the court within the 14-day period<sup>8</sup>;
- 1378 (3) notice of any agreement reached under head (1) or head (2) above should be supplied to the court by the prosecution as soon as is practicable<sup>9</sup>;
- 1379 (4) alternatively, if, in any event, prosecuting counsel proposes to play the recording or part of it, the prosecution should within 28 days<sup>10</sup> of the date of committal or date of transfer or, if earlier, at the plea and directions hearing, notify the defence and the court<sup>11</sup>; the defence should notify the prosecution and the court within 14 days<sup>12</sup> of receiving the notice if it objects to the production of the recording on the basis that a part of it should be excluded; if the objections raised by the defence are accepted, the prosecution should prepare an edited recording or make other arrangements to exclude the material part and should notify the court of the arrangements made<sup>13</sup>;
- 1380 (5) whenever editing or amendment of a record of interview or of a recording or of a transcript takes place, the following general principles should be followed: (a) where a defendant has made a statement which includes an admission of one or more other offences, the portion relating to other offences should be omitted unless it is or becomes admissible in evidence<sup>14</sup>; and (b) where the statement of one defendant contains a portion which is partly in his favour and partly implicative of a co-defendant in the trial, the defendant making the statement has the right to insist that everything relevant which is in his favour goes before the jury<sup>15</sup>, and in such a case the judge must be consulted about how best to protect the position of the co-defendant<sup>16</sup>.

If there is a failure to agree between counsel under heads (1) to (5) above, or there is a challenge to the integrity of the master recording<sup>17</sup>, notice and particulars should be given to the court and to the prosecution by the defence as soon as is practicable; the court may then, at its discretion, order a pre-trial review or give such other directions as may be appropriate<sup>18</sup>.

If a recording is to be adduced during proceedings before the Crown Court, it should be produced and proved by the interviewing officer or any other officer<sup>19</sup> who was present at the interview at which the recording was made; and the prosecution should ensure that such an officer will be available for this purpose<sup>20</sup>. In order to avoid the necessity for the court to listen to lengthy or irrelevant material before the relevant part of a recording is reached, counsel should indicate to the machine-operator<sup>21</sup> those parts of a recording which it may be necessary to play<sup>22</sup>.

Once a trial has begun, if, by reason of faulty preparation or for some other cause these procedures have not been properly complied with, and an application is made to amend the record of interview or transcript or to edit the recording, as the case may be, thereby making necessary an adjournment for the work to be carried out, the court may make at its discretion an appropriate award of costs<sup>23</sup>.

E. VISUAL RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS

986. Code of practice.

The visual recording of interviews at police stations with suspected persons is governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects<sup>2</sup>. Under these provisions references to an interview are references to an interview of a person suspected of a criminal offence<sup>3</sup> and references to a visual recording include references to a visual recording in which an audio recording is comprised (a 'visual recording with sound')<sup>4</sup>.

1 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 60A (added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 76(1)). This provides that the Secretary of State may issue a code of practice for the visual recording of interviews held by police officers at police stations (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 60A(1)(a) (as so added)) and may make an order requiring the visual recording of interviews so held, and requiring the visual recording to be in accordance with the code for the time being in force under these provisions (s 60A(1)(b) (as so added)). A requirement imposed by such an order may be imposed in relation to such cases or police stations in such areas, or both, as may be specified or described in the order: s 60A(2) (as so added). An order under these provisions must be made by statutory instrument and is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 60A(3) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders were in effect. As to codes of practice under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 see further PARA 908 ante.

2 See PARA 987 et seq post. The notes for guidance included in Code F are not provisions of Code F: Code F para 1.2. They form guidance to police officers and others about its application and interpretation: Code F para 1.2. Nothing in Code F is to be taken as detracting in any way from the requirements of Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers: Code F para 1.3. Code F must be readily available for consultation by police officers and other police staff, detained persons and members of the public: Code F para 1.1. As to the commencement and scope of Code F see PARA 908 ante.

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 60A(4)(a) (as added: see note 1 supra).

4 Ibid s 60A(4)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra); Code F para 1.6. At the date at which this volume states the law there is no requirement on any police force to make visual recordings of interviews, but interviewing officers who choose to make such recordings must have regard to the provisions of Code F: Code F transitional arrangements.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/E. VISUAL RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/987. Interviews to be visually recorded.

987. Interviews to be visually recorded.

If an interviewing officer decides to make a visual recording<sup>1</sup>, the areas where it might be appropriate<sup>2</sup> are:

- 1381 (1) in an interview with a suspect in respect of an indictable offence (including an offence triable either way)<sup>3</sup>;
- 1382 (2) in an interview which takes place as a result of an interviewer exceptionally putting further questions to a suspect about an offence described in head (1) above after he has been charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, that offence<sup>4</sup>;
- 1383 (3) in an interview in which an interviewer wishes to bring to the notice of a person, after that person has been charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for an offence described in head (1) above, any written statement made by another person, or the content of an interview with another person<sup>5</sup>;
- 1384 (4) in an interview with, or in the presence of, a deaf or deaf/blind or speech impaired person who uses sign language to communicate<sup>6</sup>;
- 1385 (5) in an interview with, or in the presence of, anyone who requires an appropriate adult<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1386 (6) in any case where the suspect or his representative requests that the interview be recorded visually<sup>8</sup>.

The custody officer<sup>9</sup> may authorise the interviewing officer not to record the interview visually:

- 1387 (a) where it is not reasonably practicable to do so because of failure of the equipment, or the non-availability of a suitable interview room or recorder, and the authorising officer considers on reasonable grounds that the interview should not be delayed until the failure has been rectified or a suitable room or recorder becomes available<sup>10</sup>;
- 1388 (b) where it is clear from the outset that no prosecution will ensue<sup>11</sup>;
- 1389 (c) where it is not practicable to do so because at the time the person resists being taken to a suitable interview room or other location which would enable the interview to be recorded, or otherwise fails or refuses to go into such a room or location, and the authorising officer considers on reasonable grounds that the interview should not be delayed until these conditions cease to apply<sup>12</sup>.

In all cases the custody officer must make a note in the custody record of the reasons for not taking a visual record<sup>13</sup>.

When a person who is voluntarily attending the police station is required to be cautioned<sup>14</sup> prior to being interviewed, the subsequent interview must be recorded, unless the custody officer gives authority<sup>15</sup> for the interview not to be so recorded<sup>16</sup>.

The whole of each interview must be recorded visually, including the taking and reading back of any statement<sup>17</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'visual recording' see PARA 986 ante.

2 Nothing in Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects is intended to preclude visual recording at police discretion of interviews at police stations with persons cautioned in respect of offences not covered by Code F para 3.1 (see the text and notes 2-8 infra), or responses made by interviewees after they have been charged with or informed they may be prosecuted for an offence, provided that Code F is complied with: Code F Guidance note 3A. Attention is drawn to the provisions set out in Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers about the matters to be considered when deciding whether a detained person is fit to be interviewed (see PARA 960 et seq ante): Code F Guidance note 3B.

The Terrorism Act 2000 makes separate provision for a code of practice for the video recording of interviews by police officers of persons arrested under s 41 or detained under Sch 7 (see PARA 420 et seq ante); see Code F para 3.2; and see also the Terrorism Act 2000 (Video Recording of Interviews) Order 2000, SI 2000/3179; and PARA 421 ante. Code F does not apply to such interviews: Code F para 3.2. When it becomes clear only during the course of an interview which is being visually recorded that the interviewee may have committed an offence to which Code F para 3.2 applies, the interviewing officer should turn off the recording equipment and the interview should continue in accordance with the provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000: Code F Guidance note 3E.

3 Code F paras 1.4, 3.1(a). For the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post; and for the meaning of 'offence triable either way' see PARA 1102 note 4 post.

4 Code F para 3.1(b). Code C sets out the circumstances in which a suspect may be questioned about an offence after being charged with it (see PARA 960 et seq ante): Code F Guidance note 3C.

5 Code F para 3.1(c). Code C sets out the procedures to be followed when a person's attention is drawn after charge, to a statement made by another person (see Code C para 16.4; and PARA 1042 post): Code F Guidance note 3D. One method of bringing the content of an interview with another person to the notice of a suspect may be to play him a recording of that interview: Code F Guidance note 3D.

6 Code F para 3.1(d).

7 Code F para 3.1(e). For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante; definition applied by Code F para 1.5.

8 Code F para 3.1(f).

9 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. As in Code C para 1.9 (see PARA 939 note 8 ante), references in Code F to a custody officer include those performing the functions of a custody officer: Code F Guidance note 1A.

10 Code F para 3.3(a). In such cases the custody officer may authorise the interviewing officer to audio record the interview in accordance with the guidance set out in Code E: Code of Practice on Audio Recording Interviews with Suspects (see PARA 971 et seq ante): Code F para 3.3(a).

11 Code F para 3.3(b).

12 Code F para 3.3(c).

13 Code F para 3.3. A decision not to record an interview visually for any reason may be the subject of comment in court, and the authorising officer should therefore be prepared to justify his decision in each case: Code F Guidance note 3F.

14 Ie in accordance with Code C. See Code C para 10; and PARA 959 ante.

15 Ie in accordance with Code F para 3.3 (see the text and notes 9-13 supra).

988. Recording and sealing of master tapes.

The visual recording<sup>1</sup> of interviews must be carried out openly to instil confidence in its reliability as an impartial and accurate record of the interview<sup>2</sup>. The camera or cameras must be placed in the interview room so as to ensure coverage of as much of the room as is practicably possible whilst the interviews are taking place<sup>3</sup>. The certified recording medium must be of a high quality, new and previously unused<sup>4</sup>.

One copy of the certified recording medium ('the master copy') must be sealed before it leaves the presence of the suspect; and a second copy will be used as a working copy<sup>5</sup>.

Nothing in the provisions relating to the visual recording of interviews with suspects<sup>6</sup> requires the identity of an officer to be recorded or disclosed:

- 1390 (1) if the interview or record relates to a person detained under the law relating to terrorism<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1391 (2) otherwise, where the officer reasonably believes that recording or disclosing his name might put him in danger<sup>8</sup>.

In these cases, the officer will have his back to the camera and must use his warrant or other identification number and the name of the police station to which he is attached<sup>9</sup>. Such instances and the reasons for them must be recorded in the custody record<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'visual recording' see PARA 986 ante.

2 Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interviews with Suspects para 2.1. Interviewing officers will wish to arrange that, as far as possible, visual recording arrangements are unobtrusive, but it must be clear to the suspect that there is no opportunity to interfere with the recording equipment or the recording media: Code F Guidance note 2A.

3 Code F para 2.2.

4 Code F para 2.3. In this context, the certified recording media must be of either a VHS or digital CD format and should be capable of having an image of the date and time superimposed upon them as they record the interview: Code F Guidance note 2B. When the certified recording medium is placed in the recorder and switched on to record, the correct date and time, in hours, minutes and seconds will be superimposed automatically, second by second, during the whole recording: Code F para 2.3.

5 Code F para 2.4. The purpose of sealing the master copy before it leaves the presence of the suspect is to establish his confidence that the integrity of the copy is preserved: Code F Guidance note 2C. The recording of the interview may be used for identification procedures in accordance with Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Person by Police Officers para 3.21 (see PARA 1019 post) or Code D Annex E (see PARA 1013 post): Code F Guidance note 2D.

6 ie Code F.

7 Code F para 2.5(a). For these purposes, 'the law relating to terrorism' means the Terrorism Act 2000 (see PARA 383 et seq ante): Code F para 2.5(a). The purpose of Code F para 2.5 is to protect police officers and others involved in the investigation of serious organised crime or the arrest of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to the officers, their families or their personal property: Code F Guidance note 2E.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(v) Interviews/E. VISUAL RECORDING OF INTERVIEWS/990. Commencement of interviews.

990. Commencement of interviews.

When the suspect is brought into the interview room the interviewer must without delay, but in sight of the suspect, load the recording equipment and set it to record<sup>1</sup>. The recording media must be unwrapped or otherwise opened in the presence of the suspect<sup>2</sup>. The interviewer must then tell the suspect formally about the visual recording<sup>3</sup>. The interviewer must:

- 1392 (1) explain that the interview is being visually recorded<sup>4</sup>;
- 1393 (2) give his or her name and rank, and that of any other interviewer present<sup>5</sup>;
- 1394 (3) ask the suspect and any other party present (for example, his solicitor<sup>6</sup>) to identify themselves<sup>7</sup>;
- 1395 (4) state the date, time of commencement and place of the interview<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1396 (5) state that the suspect will be given a notice about what will happen to the recording<sup>9</sup>.

The interviewer must then caution the suspect<sup>10</sup> and remind him of his entitlement to free and independent legal advice and that he can speak to a solicitor on the telephone<sup>11</sup>. The interviewer must then put to the suspect any significant statement or silence<sup>12</sup> (that is, failure or refusal to answer a question or to answer it satisfactorily) which occurred before the start of the interview, and must ask the suspect whether he wishes to confirm or deny that earlier statement or silence or whether he wishes to add anything<sup>13</sup>.

1 Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interviews with Suspects para 4.3.

992. Objections and complaints by the suspect.

If the suspect raises objections to the interview being visually recorded<sup>1</sup> either at the outset or during the interview or during a break in the interview, the interviewer must explain that the interview is being visually recorded and that the code of practice<sup>2</sup> requires that the suspect's objections must be recorded on the visual recording<sup>3</sup>. If in the course of an interview a complaint<sup>4</sup> is made by the person being questioned, or on his behalf, the interviewer must act in the prescribed manner<sup>5</sup>, record the complaint in the interview record and inform the custody officer<sup>6</sup>.

If the suspect indicates that he wishes to tell the interviewer about matters not directly connected with the offence of which he is suspected and that he is unwilling for these matters to be recorded, the suspect must be given the opportunity to tell the interviewer about these matters after the conclusion of the formal interview<sup>7</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'visual recording' see PARA 986 ante.

2 Ie Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interviews with Suspects.

3 Code F para 4.8. When any objections have been visually recorded or the suspect has refused to have his objections recorded, the interviewer must say that he is turning off the recording equipment, give his reasons and turn it off: Code F para 4.8. If a separate audio recording is being maintained the interviewer must ask the person to record the reasons for refusing to agree to visual recording of the interview: Code F para 4.8. Code E para 4.8 (see PARA 977 ante) applies if the person objects to audio recording of the interview: Code F para 4.8. The interviewer must then make a written record of the interview: Code F para 4.8. If the interviewer reasonably considers that he may proceed to question the suspect with the visual recording still on, he may do so: Code F para 4.8. The interviewer should be aware that a decision to continue recording against the wishes of the suspect may be the subject of comment in court: Code F Guidance para 4G.

4 Ie concerning the provisions of Code F or of Code C: Code of Practice on the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see PARA 931 et seq ante).

5 Ie in accordance with Code C.

6 Code F para 4.9. As to custody officers see PARAS 939, 987 note 9 ante. Where the custody officer is called immediately to deal with the complaint, whenever possible the recording equipment should be left to run until the custody officer has entered the interview room and spoken to the person being interviewed; continuation or termination of the interview should be at the discretion of the interviewing officer pending action by an inspector as set out in Code C: Code F Guidance note 4B.

Where the complaint is about a matter not connected with Code F or Code C, the decision to continue with the interview is at the discretion of the interviewing officer: Code F Guidance note 4C. Where the interviewing officer decides to continue with the interview, the person being interviewed must be told that the complaint will be brought to the attention of the custody officer at the conclusion of the interview: Code F Guidance note 4C. When the interview is concluded, the interviewing officer must, as soon as practicable, inform the custody officer of the existence and nature of the complaint made: Code F Guidance note 4C.

993. Changing the recording media.

In instances where the recording media are not of sufficient length to record all of the interview with the suspect, further certified recording media must be used<sup>1</sup>. When the recording equipment indicates that the recording media has only a short time left to run, the interviewer must advise the suspect and round off that part of the interview<sup>2</sup>. If the interviewer wishes to continue the interview but does not already have further certified recording media with him, he must obtain a set<sup>3</sup>. The suspect should not be left unattended in the interview room<sup>4</sup>. The interviewer will remove the recording media from the recording equipment and insert the new ones which have been unwrapped or otherwise opened in the suspect's presence<sup>5</sup>. The recording equipment must then be set to record<sup>6</sup>. Care must be taken, particularly when a number of sets of recording media have been used, to ensure that there is no confusion between them (for example, by marking the sets of recording media with consecutive identification numbers)<sup>7</sup>.

994. Taking a break during the interview.

When a break is to be taken during the course of an interview and the interview room is to be vacated by the suspect, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reason for it and the time must be recorded<sup>1</sup>. The recording equipment must be turned off and the recording media removed; and the procedures for the conclusion of an interview<sup>2</sup> should be followed<sup>3</sup>.

When a break is to be a short one, and both the suspect and a police officer are to remain in the interview room, the fact that a break is to be taken, the reasons for it and the time must be recorded on the recording media<sup>4</sup>. The recording equipment may be turned off, but there is no need to remove the recording media<sup>5</sup>. When the interview is recommenced the recording must continue on the same recording media and the time at which the interview recommences must be recorded<sup>6</sup>.

When there is a break in questioning under caution, the interviewing officer must ensure that the person being questioned is aware that he remains under caution<sup>7</sup>. If there is any doubt the caution must be given again in full when the interview resumes<sup>8</sup>.

The officer should bear in mind that it may be necessary to satisfy the court that nothing occurred during a break in an interview or between interviews which influenced the suspect's recorded evidence: Code F Guidance note 4E. On the recommencement of an interview, the officer should consider summarising on the tape or CD the reason for the break and confirming this with the suspect: Code F Guidance note 4E.

995. Failure of recording equipment.

If there is a failure of equipment which can be rectified quickly, the procedures required to be followed when a break is to be taken during an interview<sup>1</sup> must be followed; and when the recording is resumed the interviewer must explain what has happened and record the time the interview recommences<sup>2</sup>. If, however, it is not possible to continue recording on that particular recorder and no alternative equipment is readily available, the interview may continue without being recorded visually<sup>3</sup>. In such circumstances, the procedures for seeking the authority of the custody officer<sup>4</sup> will be followed<sup>5</sup>.

If any part of the recording media breaks or is otherwise damaged during the interview, it should be sealed as a master copy in the presence of the suspect and the interview resumed where it left off: Code F Guidance note 4F. The undamaged part should be copied and the original sealed as a master copy in the suspect's presence, if necessary after the interview: Code F Guidance note 4F. If equipment for copying is not readily available, both parts should be sealed in the suspect's presence and the interview begun again: Code F Guidance note 4F. 996. Removing used recording media from recording equipment.

Where used recording media are removed from the recording equipment during the course of an interview, they must be retained and the specified procedures<sup>1</sup> followed<sup>2</sup>.

997. Conclusion of interview.

Before the conclusion of the interview, the suspect must be offered the opportunity to clarify anything that he has said and asked if there is anything he wishes to add<sup>1</sup>.

At the conclusion of the interview, including the taking and reading back of any written statement, the time must be recorded and the recording equipment switched off; and the master tape or CD<sup>2</sup> must be removed from the recording equipment, sealed with a master copy label and treated as an exhibit in accordance with the police force standing orders<sup>3</sup>. The interviewer must sign the label and also ask the suspect and any appropriate adult<sup>4</sup> or other third party present during the interview to sign it<sup>5</sup>. If the suspect or third party refuses to sign the label, an officer of at least the rank of inspector or, if one is not available, the custody officer<sup>6</sup> must be called into the interview room and asked to sign it<sup>7</sup>.

The suspect must be handed a notice which explains the use which will be made of the recording and the arrangements for access to it<sup>8</sup>. The notice will also advise the suspect that a copy of the tape will be supplied as soon as practicable if the person is charged or informed that he will be prosecuted<sup>9</sup>.

998. After the interview.

The interviewer must make a note in his pocket book<sup>1</sup> of the fact that the interview has taken place and has been recorded, and its time, duration and date and the identification number of the master copy<sup>2</sup> of the recording media<sup>3</sup>. Where no proceedings follow in respect of the person whose interview was recorded, the recording media must nevertheless be kept securely in accordance with specified provisions<sup>4</sup>.

999. Master copy security.

The officer in charge of the police station at which interviews with suspects are recorded must make arrangements for the master copies<sup>1</sup> to be kept securely and their movements accounted for on the same basis as other material which may be used for evidential purposes, in accordance with police force standing orders<sup>2</sup>.

A police officer has no authority to break the seal on a master copy which is required for criminal trial or appeal proceedings<sup>3</sup>. If it is necessary to gain access to the master copy, the police officer must arrange for its seal to be broken in the presence of a representative of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>4</sup>. The defendant or his legal adviser must be informed and given a reasonable opportunity to be present<sup>5</sup>. If the defendant or his legal representative is present he must be invited to reseal and sign the master copy<sup>6</sup>. If either refuses or neither is present, this must be done by the representative of the Crown Prosecution Service<sup>7</sup>.

The chief officer of police is responsible for establishing arrangements for breaking the seal of the master copy where either no criminal proceedings result or the criminal proceedings to which the interview relates have been concluded and it becomes necessary to break the seal<sup>8</sup>. These arrangements should be those which the chief officer considers are reasonably necessary to demonstrate to the person interviewed and any other party who may wish to use or refer to the interview record that the master copy has not been tampered with and that the interview record remains accurate<sup>9</sup>. A representative of each party must<sup>10</sup> be given a reasonable opportunity to be present when the seal is broken, the master copy copied and resealed<sup>11</sup>. If one or more of the parties is not present when the master copy seal is broken because he cannot be contacted or refuses to attend<sup>12</sup>, arrangements should be made for an independent person, such as a custody visitor<sup>13</sup>, to be present; alternatively, or as an additional safeguard, arrangements should be made for a film or photographs to be taken of the procedure<sup>14</sup>. This does not, however, require a person to be present when:

- 1397 (1) it is necessary to break the master copy seal for the proper and effective further investigation of the original offence or the investigation of some other offence<sup>15</sup>; or
- 1398 (2) the officer in charge of the investigation has reasonable grounds to suspect that allowing an opportunity might prejudice any such an investigation or criminal proceedings which may be brought as a result or endanger any person<sup>16</sup>.

When the master copy seal is broken, copied and resealed, a record must be made of the procedure followed, including the date, time and place and persons present<sup>17</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the master copy' see PARA 988 ante.

2 Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interviews with Suspects para 6.1. Code F paras 6.1-6.7 (see the text and notes 3-17 infra) are concerned with the security of the master copy which will have been sealed at the conclusion of the interview, but care should be taken of working copies (see PARA 988 ante) since their loss or destruction may lead unnecessarily to the need to have access to master copies: Code F Guidance note 6A.

3 Code F para 6.2.

4 Code F para 6.2. If the master copy has been delivered to the Crown Court for keeping after committal for trial the Crown prosecutor will apply to the chief clerk of the Crown Court centre for its release for unsealing by the Crown prosecutor: Code F Guidance note 6B. Reference to the Crown Prosecution Service or to the Crown prosecutor in Code F paras 6.1-6.7 is to be taken to include any other body or person with a statutory responsibility for prosecution for whom the police conduct any recorded interviews: Code F Guidance note 6C.

5 Code F para 6.2.

6 Code F para 6.2.

7 Code F para 6.2.

8 Code F para 6.3.

9 Code F para 6.3. The most common reasons for needing access to master copies that are not required for criminal proceedings arise from civil actions and complaints against police and civil actions between individuals arising out of allegations of crime investigated by police: Code F Guidance note 6D.

10 Is subject to Code F para 6.6 (see the text and notes 15-16 infra).

11 Code F para 6.4.

12 Or because Code F para 6.6 (see the text and notes 15-16 infra) applies.

13 As to independent custody visitors see PARA 947 ante.

14 Code F para 6.5.

15 Code F para 6.6(a). Code F para 6.6 could apply, for example, when one or more of the outcomes or likely outcomes of the investigation might be: (1) the prosecution of one or more of the original suspects (Code F Guidance note 6E(i)); (2) the prosecution of a person previously not suspected, including a person who was originally a witness (Code F Guidance note 6E(ii)); and (3) any original suspect being treated as a prosecution witness (Code F Guidance note 6E(iii)), and when premature disclosure of any police action, particularly through contact with any parties involved, could lead to a real risk of compromising the investigation and endangering witnesses (Code F Guidance note 6E).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1000. Limits on period of detention without charge.

(vi) Limits on Detention

1000. Limits on period of detention without charge.

A person may not<sup>1</sup> be kept in police detention<sup>2</sup> for more than 24 hours<sup>3</sup> without being charged<sup>4</sup>. The time from which the period of detention of a person is to be calculated ('the relevant time') is:

- 1399 (1) in the case of a person whose arrest<sup>5</sup> is sought in one police area in England and Wales<sup>6</sup>, who is arrested in another police area<sup>7</sup>, and who is not questioned in the area in which he is arrested in order to obtain evidence in relation to an offence for which he is arrested<sup>8</sup>, whichever is the earlier of the time at which he arrives at the relevant police station<sup>9</sup> or the time 24 hours after the time of his arrest<sup>10</sup>;
- 1400 (2) in the case of a person arrested outside England and Wales, whichever is the earlier of the time at which he arrives at the first police station to which he is taken in the police area in England or Wales in which the offence for which he was arrested is being investigated<sup>11</sup> or the time 24 hours after the time of his entry into England and Wales<sup>12</sup>;
- 1401 (3) in the case of a person who attends voluntarily at a police station<sup>13</sup> or accompanies a constable to a police station without having been arrested<sup>14</sup>, and is arrested at the police station, the time of his arrest<sup>15</sup>;
- 1402 (4) in the case of a person who attends a police station to answer to street bail<sup>16</sup>, the time when he arrives at the police station<sup>17</sup>;
- 1403 (5) in any other case<sup>18</sup>, the time at which the person arrested arrives at the first police station to which he is taken after his arrest<sup>19</sup>.

If:

- 1404 (a) a person is in police detention in a police area in England and Wales ('the first area')<sup>20</sup>;
- 1405 (b) his arrest for an offence is sought in some other police area in England and Wales ('the second area')<sup>21</sup>; and
- 1406 (c) he is taken to the second area for the purposes of investigating that offence, without being questioned in the first area in order to obtain evidence in relation to it<sup>22</sup>, the relevant time is whichever is the earlier of the time 24 hours after he leaves the place where he is detained in the first area<sup>23</sup> or the time at which he arrives at the first police station to which he is taken in the second area<sup>24</sup>.

When a person who is in police detention is removed to hospital because he is in need of medical treatment, any time during which he is being questioned in hospital or on the way there or back by a police officer for the purpose of obtaining evidence relating to an offence is to be included in any period which falls to be calculated for these purposes, but any other time while he is in hospital or on his way there or back is not to be so included<sup>25</sup>.

A person who at the expiry of 24 hours after the relevant time is in police detention and has not been charged must be released at that time either on bail or without bail<sup>26</sup>, but this provision does not apply to a person whose detention for more than 24 hours after the relevant time has been authorised or is otherwise permitted<sup>27</sup>. A person so released<sup>28</sup> may not be re-arrested without a warrant for the offence for which he was previously arrested unless new evidence justifying a further arrest has come to light since his release<sup>29</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1001. Review of police detention.

1001. Review of police detention.

Reviews of the detention of each person in police detention<sup>1</sup> in connection with the investigation of an offence must be carried out periodically in accordance with the following provisions:

- 1407 (1) in the case of a person who has been arrested and charged, by the custody officer<sup>2</sup>; and
- 1408 (2) in the case of a person who has been arrested but not charged, by an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>3</sup> who has not been directly involved in the investigation<sup>4</sup>.

The person to whom it falls to carry out the review ('the review officer'<sup>5</sup>) is responsible for determining whether the detainee's detention, before or after charge, continues to be necessary<sup>6</sup>. This requirement continues throughout the detention period and, unless a telephone review is carried out<sup>7</sup>, the person conducting the review must be present at the police station holding the detainee<sup>8</sup>.

The first review must be not later than six hours<sup>9</sup> after the detention was first authorised<sup>10</sup>. The second review must be not later than nine hours after the first<sup>11</sup>; and subsequent reviews must be at intervals of not more than nine hours<sup>12</sup>. A review may, however, be postponed:

- 1409 (a) if, having regard to all the circumstances prevailing at the latest time for it, it is not practicable to carry out the review at that time<sup>13</sup>;
- 1410 (b) without prejudice to the generality of head (a) above, if at that time the person in detention is being questioned by a police officer and the review officer is satisfied that an interruption of the questioning for the purpose of carrying out the review would prejudice the investigation in connection with which he is being questioned<sup>14</sup>, or if at that time no review officer is readily available<sup>15</sup>.

If a review is so postponed, it must be carried out as soon as practicable after the latest time specified for it<sup>16</sup>; and, if a review is carried out after such a postponement, the fact that it was so carried out does not affect any statutory requirement<sup>17</sup> as to the time at which any subsequent review is to be carried out<sup>18</sup>. The review officer must record the reasons for any postponement of a review in the custody record<sup>19</sup>.

Where an officer of higher rank than the review officer gives directions relating to a person in police detention<sup>20</sup> and the directions are at variance either with any decision made or action taken by the review officer in the performance of a duty imposed on him<sup>21</sup> or with any decision or action which would but for the directions have been made or taken by him in the performance of such a duty<sup>22</sup>, the review officer must refer the matter at once to an officer of the rank of superintendent or above who is responsible for the police station for which the review officer is acting as review officer in connection with the detention<sup>23</sup>.

Before determining whether to authorise a person's continued detention the review officer must give that person (unless he is asleep)<sup>24</sup> or any solicitor representing him who is available at the time of the review<sup>25</sup>, an opportunity to make representations to him about the detention<sup>26</sup>; and the person whose detention is under review or his solicitor may make such representations either orally or in writing<sup>27</sup>. However, the review officer may refuse to hear oral representations from the person whose detention is under review if he considers that he is unfit to make such representations by reason of his condition or behaviour<sup>28</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante.

2 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40(1)(a). As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. The officer to whom it falls to carry out a review is referred to as a 'review officer': s 40(2). Where the person whose detention is under review has been charged before the time of the review, the provisions of s 38(1)-(6), (6A), (6B) (as amended) have effect, subject to specified modifications, in relation to him: see s 40(10) (as amended), s 40(10A) (as added); and PARA 944 ante.

3 See PARA 858 ante.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40(1)(b); Code C: Code of Practice on the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 15A. Where the person whose detention is under review has not been charged before the time of the review, the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(1)-(6) (as amended) have effect, subject to specified modifications, in relation to him: see s 40(8) (as amended), s 40(8A) (as added); and PARA 941 ante.

Before conducting a review or determining whether to extend the maximum period of detention without charge, the officer responsible must make sure the detainee is reminded of his entitlement to free legal advice (see PARA 953 ante), unless in the case of a review the person is asleep: Code C para 15.4. It is the officer's responsibility to make sure that all such reminders given under this provision are noted in the custody record: Code C para 15.12.

A detainee who is asleep at a review and whose continued detention is authorised must be informed about the decision and reason as soon as practicable after waking: Code C para 15.7. A record must be made of when the person was informed and by whom: Code C para 15.16. If, after considering any representations, the officer decides to keep the detainee in detention or to extend the maximum period for which he may be detained without charge, any comment made by the detainee must be recorded: Code C para 15.5. If applicable, the review officer must be informed of the comment as soon as practicable: Code C para 15.5. See also Code C paras 11.4, 11.13; and PARAS 960-961 ante.

No officer may put specific questions to the detainee regarding his involvement in any offence or in respect of any comments he may make either when given the opportunity to make representations or in response to a decision to keep him in detention or extend the maximum period of detention: Code C para 15.6. Such an exchange could constitute an interview as in Code C para 11.1A (see PARA 960 ante) and would be subject to the associated safeguards in Code C paras 11.1A-11.20 (see PARAS 960-963 ante) and, in respect of a person who has been charged, Code C para 16.5 (see PARA 1042 post). See also Code C para 11.13; and PARA 961 ante.

A review under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40(1)(b) may be carried out by means of a discussion, conducted by telephone, with one or more persons at the police station where the arrested person is held (s 40A(1) (s 40A added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 73(1), (2); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40A(1), (2) substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 6); Code C para 15.9), unless the review is of a kind authorised by regulations made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A (as added and amended) (see PARA 1002 post) to be carried out using video-conferencing facilities (s 40A(2)(a) (as so added and substituted); Code C para 15.9B) and it is reasonably practicable to carry it out (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40A(2)(b) (as so added and substituted); Code C para 15.9B). For the meaning of 'video-conferencing facilities' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A (as added and amended); and PARA 1002 post (definition applied by s 40A(5) (as so added)). When a telephone review is carried out, a record must be made of the reason the review officer did not attend the station holding the detainee (Code C para 15.14(a)), the place the review officer was (Code C para 15.14(b)), and the method by which representations, oral or written, were made to the review officer (Code C para 15.14(c)).

The decision on whether the review takes place in person or by telephone or by video-conferencing is a matter for the review officer: Code C para 15.3C. In determining the form the review may take, the review officer must always take full account of the needs of the person in custody: Code C para 15.3C. The benefits of carrying out a review in person should always be considered, based on the individual circumstances of each case with specific additional consideration if: (1) the person is a juvenile (and the age of the juvenile must be considered) (Code C para 15.3C(a)); (2) the person is mentally vulnerable (Code C para 15.3C(b)); (3) the person has been subject to medical attention for other than routine minor ailments (Code C para 15.3C(c)); or (4) there are presentational or community issues around the person's detention (Code C para 15.3C(d)). For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable' see PARA 940 note 9 ante. The use of video-conferencing facilities for decisions about detention under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A (as added and amended) is subject to the introduction of regulations by the Secretary of State: Code C Guidance note 15G.

The review officer can decide at any stage that a telephone review or a review by video-conferencing should be terminated and that the review will be conducted in person, and the reasons for doing so should be noted in the custody record: Code C para 15.9C.

6 Code C para 15.1. The detention of persons in police custody not subject to the statutory review requirement should still be reviewed periodically as a matter of good practice: Code C Guidance note 15B. Such reviews can be carried out by an officer of the rank of sergeant or above: Code C Guidance note 15B. The purpose of such reviews is to check that the particular power under which a detainee is held continues to apply, any associated conditions are complied with and to make sure appropriate action is taken to deal with any changes: Code C Guidance note 15B. This includes the detainee's prompt release when the power no longer applies, or his transfer if the power requires the detainee be taken elsewhere as soon as the necessary arrangements are made: Code C Guidance note 15B. Examples include: (1) persons arrested on warrant because they failed to answer bail to appear at court (Code C Guidance note 15B); (2) persons arrested under the Bail Act 1976 s 7(3) (see PARA 1200 post) for breaching a condition of bail granted after charge (Code C Guidance note 15B); (3) persons in police custody for specific purposes and periods under the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 Sch 1 (see PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARAS 548-554) (Code C Guidance note 15B); (4) persons convicted, or remand prisoners, held in police stations on behalf of the prison service under the Imprisonment (Temporary Provisions) Act 1980 s 6 (see PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 538) (Code C Guidance note 15B); (5) persons being detained to prevent them causing a breach of the peace (Code C Guidance note 15B); (6) persons detained at police stations on behalf of the immigration service (Code C Guidance note 15B); and (7) persons detained by order of a magistrates' court under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 152 (as amended) (see PARA 770 ante) to facilitate the recovery of evidence after being charged with drug possession or drug trafficking and suspected of having swallowed drugs (Code C Guidance note 15B).

The detention of persons remanded into police detention by order of a court under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 128 (see PARA 1144 post) is subject to a statutory requirement to review that detention: Code C Guidance note 15B. This is to make sure that the detainee is taken back to court no later than the end of the period authorised by the court or when the need for his detention by police ceases, whichever is the sooner: Code C Guidance note 15B.

Before deciding whether to authorise continued detention the officer responsible under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40 (as amended) or s 42 (as amended) (see PARA 1003 post) must give an opportunity to the detained person himself to make representations, unless, in the case of a review under s 40, he is asleep (Code C para 15.3(a)), and to his solicitor (Code C para 15.3(b)) or the appropriate adult (Code C para 15.3(c)) if available at the time. When a telephone review is carried out this requirement will be satisfied: (a) if facilities exist for the immediate transmission of written representations to the review officer, eg fax or email message, by giving the detainee an opportunity to make representations either orally by telephone (Code C para 15.11(a)(i)) or in writing using those facilities (Code C para 15.11(a)(ii)); and (b) in all other cases, by giving the detainee an opportunity to make his representations orally by telephone (Code C para 15.11(b)). Other persons having an interest in the person's welfare may make representations at the review officer's discretion: Code C para 15.3A. Any written representations must be retained: Code C para 15.15. For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante.

In the case of a review of detention, the detainee need not be woken for the review: Code C Guidance note 15C. However, if the detainee is likely to be asleep, eg during a period of rest allowed as in Code C para 12.2 (see PARA 964 ante), at the latest time a review may take place, the officer should, if the legal obligations and time constraints permit, bring forward the procedure to allow the detainee to make representations: Code C Guidance note 15C. A detainee not asleep during the review must be present when the grounds for his continued detention are recorded and must at the same time be informed of those grounds unless the review officer considers the person is incapable of understanding what is said, or is violent or likely to become violent or in urgent need of medical attention: Code C Guidance note 15C.

Such representations are authorised: (1) in a case where facilities exist for the immediate transmission of written representations to the officer carrying out the review, if they are made either orally by telephone to that officer (s 40A(4)(a)(i) (as so added)) or in writing to that officer by means of those facilities (s 40A(4)(a)(ii) (as so added)); and (2) in any other case, if they are made orally by telephone to that officer (s 40A(4)(b) (as so added)).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1002. Use of video-conferencing facilities for decisions about detention.

1002. Use of video-conferencing facilities for decisions about detention.

The Secretary of State may by regulations<sup>1</sup> provide that, in the case of an arrested person who is held in a police station, some or all of the functions in relation to an arrested person taken to a police station that is not a designated police station<sup>2</sup> which, in the case of an arrested person taken to, or answering to bail at, a police station that is a designated police station, are functions of a custody officer<sup>3</sup> under specified provisions<sup>4</sup>, and the function of carrying out a review<sup>5</sup> by an officer of at least the rank of inspector of the detention of person arrested but not charged<sup>6</sup>, may be performed by an officer who is not present in that police station<sup>7</sup> but has access to the use of video-conferencing facilities<sup>8</sup> that enable him to communicate with persons in that station<sup>9</sup>.

Where any of these functions are performed in a manner so authorised by regulations:

- 1411 (1) any obligation of the officer performing those functions to make a record in connection with the performance of those functions is to have effect as an obligation to cause another officer to make the record<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1412 (2) any requirement for the record to be made in the presence of the arrested person is to apply to the making of that record by that other officer<sup>11</sup>.

1 Any such regulations may make different provision for different cases and may be made so as to have effect in relation only to the police stations specified or described in the regulations: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A(8) (s 45A added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 73(1), (3)). Regulations are to be made by statutory instrument and are subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A(9) (as so added). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Remote Reviews of Detention) (Specified Police Stations) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2397, under which the conduct of reviews under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 40(1)(b) (see PARA 1001 ante) by way of video-conferencing facilities was being piloted in two police stations in Hampshire, was revoked by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Remote Reviews of Detention) (Specified Police Stations) (Revocation) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1503, art 2. At the date at which this volume states the law no further regulations had been made pursuant to this power.

2 For the meaning of 'designated police station' see PARA 938 ante.

3 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 45A(2)(a) (as added (see note 1 supra); and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 paras 1, 9). The specified provisions are the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 37, 38, 40 (as amended) (see PARAS 941, 944, 1001 ante): s 45A(2)(a) (as so added and amended).

5 Ie under ibid s 40(1)(b) (see PARA 1001 ante).

6 Ibid s 45A(2)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra). Where the functions mentioned in s 45A(2)(b) (as added) are performed in a manner authorised by regulations, the requirements under s 40(12), (13) (see PARA 1001 ante) for the arrested person (s 45A(6)(a) (as so added)) or a solicitor representing him (s 45A(6)(b) (as so added)) to be given an opportunity to make representations (whether in writing or orally) to the person performing those functions are to have effect as a requirement for that person, or such a solicitor, to be given an opportunity to make representations:

378 (1) in a case where facilities exist for the immediate transmission of written representations to the officer performing the functions, if they are made either orally to that officer by means of the video-conferencing facilities used by him for performing those functions (s 45A(7)(a)(i) (as so added)) or in writing to that officer by means of the facilities available for the immediate transmission of the representations (s 45A(7)(a)(ii) (as so added)); and 379 (2) in any other case if they are made orally to that officer by means of the video-conferencing facilities used by him for performing the functions (s 45A(7)(b) (as so added)).

7 Ibid s 45A(1)(a) (as added: see note 1 supra). Regulations may not authorise the performance of any of the functions mentioned in s 45A(1)(a) (as added) by such an officer as is mentioned in s 45A(1) (as added) unless he is a custody officer for a designated police station: s 45A(4) (as so added).

8 Any reference in ibid s 45A (as added and amended) to video-conferencing facilities is a reference to any facilities (whether a live television link or other facilities) by means of which the functions may be performed with the officer performing them, the person in relation to whom they are performed and any legal representative of that person all able to both see and hear each other: s 45A(10) (as so added).

9 Ibid s 45A(1)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra). Regulations under s 45A (as added and amended) must specify the use to be made in the performance of the functions mentioned in s 45A(2) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 1-6 supra) of the facilities mentioned in s 45A(1) (as added): s 45A(3) (as so added).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1003. Authorisation of continued detention.

1003. Authorisation of continued detention.

Where a police officer of the rank of superintendent or above<sup>1</sup> who is responsible for the police station at which a person is detained has reasonable grounds for believing that:

- 1413 (1) the detention of that person without charge is necessary to secure or preserve evidence relating to an offence for which he is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning him<sup>2</sup>;
- 1414 (2) an offence for which he is under arrest is an indictable offence<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1415 (3) the investigation is being conducted diligently and expeditiously<sup>4</sup>, he may authorise the keeping of that person in police detention<sup>5</sup> for a period expiring at or before 36 hours<sup>6</sup> after the relevant time<sup>7</sup>.

Where such an officer has so authorised the keeping of a person in police detention for a period expiring less than 36 hours after the relevant time, such an officer may authorise the keeping of that person in police detention for a further period expiring not more than 36 hours after that time if the conditions specified in heads (1) to (3) above are still satisfied when he gives the authorisation<sup>8</sup>.

If it is proposed to transfer a person in police detention to another police area<sup>9</sup>, the officer determining whether or not to authorise keeping him in detention<sup>10</sup> must have regard to the distance and the time the journey would take<sup>11</sup>.

Where an officer authorises the keeping of a person in police detention<sup>12</sup> it is his duty to inform that person of the grounds for his continued detention<sup>13</sup> and to record the grounds in that person's custody record<sup>14</sup>.

Before determining whether to authorise the keeping of a person in detention<sup>15</sup> an officer must give that person<sup>16</sup> or any solicitor representing him who is available at the time when it falls to the officer to determine whether to give the authorisation<sup>17</sup> an opportunity to make representations<sup>18</sup> to him about the detention; and the person in detention or his solicitor may make representations either orally or in writing<sup>19</sup>. The officer to whom it falls to determine whether to give the authorisation may, however, refuse to hear oral representations from the person in detention if he considers that he is unfit to make such representations by reason of his condition or behaviour<sup>20</sup>.

Where an officer authorises the keeping<sup>21</sup> of a person in detention<sup>22</sup> and at the time of the authorisation he has not yet exercised his statutory rights to have someone informed of his whereabouts and to legal advice<sup>23</sup>, the officer must:

- 1416 (a) inform him of that right<sup>24</sup>;
- 1417 (b) decide whether he should be permitted to exercise it<sup>25</sup>;
- 1418 (c) record the decision in his custody record<sup>26</sup>; and
- 1419 (d) if the decision is to refuse to permit the exercise of the right, also record the grounds for the decision in that record<sup>27</sup>.

Where an officer has authorised the keeping of a person who has not been charged in detention<sup>28</sup>, he must be released from detention<sup>29</sup>, either on bail or without bail, not later than 36 hours after the relevant time, unless he has been charged with an offence<sup>30</sup> or his continued detention is authorised or otherwise permitted<sup>31</sup>. A person so released may not be re-arrested without a warrant for the offence for which he was previously arrested<sup>32</sup> unless new evidence justifying a further arrest has come to light since his release<sup>33</sup>.

1 See PARA 858 ante. The officer responsible for the police station holding the detainee includes a superintendent or above who, in accordance with his force's operational policy or police regulations, is given that responsibility on a temporary basis whilst the appointed long-term holder is off duty or otherwise unavailable: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 15E. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1004. Warrants of further detention.

1004. Warrants of further detention.

Where, on an application on oath made by a constable and supported by an information<sup>1</sup>, a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup> is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of the person to whom the application relates is justified, it may issue a warrant of further detention authorising the keeping of that person in police detention<sup>3</sup>. A court may not hear an application for such a warrant, however, unless the person to whom the application relates has been furnished with a copy of the information<sup>4</sup> and has been brought before the court for the hearing<sup>5</sup>.

The person to whom the application relates is entitled to be legally represented at the hearing and, if he is not so represented but wishes to be so represented, the court must adjourn the hearing to enable him to obtain representation<sup>6</sup> and he may be kept in police detention during the adjournment<sup>7</sup>.

A person's further detention is only so justified<sup>8</sup> if:

- 1420 (1) his detention without charge is necessary to secure or preserve evidence relating to an offence for which he is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning him<sup>9</sup>;
- 1421 (2) an offence for which he is under arrest is an indictable offence<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1422 (3) the investigation is being conducted diligently and expeditiously<sup>11</sup>.

An application for a warrant of further detention may be made either at any time before the expiry of 36 hours<sup>12</sup> after the relevant time<sup>13</sup> or (if it is not practicable for the magistrates' court to which the application will be made to sit at the expiry of 36 hours after the relevant time<sup>14</sup> but the court will sit during the six hours following the end of that period<sup>15</sup>) at any time before the expiry of such period of six hours<sup>16</sup>.

The court must dismiss an application for a warrant of further detention if it is made after the expiry of 36 hours after the relevant time<sup>17</sup> and it appears to the court that it would have been reasonable for the police to make it before the expiry of that period<sup>18</sup>. Where on such an application a magistrates' court is not satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of the person to whom the application relates is justified, it is its duty either to refuse the application<sup>19</sup> or to adjourn the hearing of it until a time not later than 36 hours after the relevant time<sup>20</sup>. The person to whom the application relates may be kept in police detention during the adjournment<sup>21</sup>. A warrant of further detention must state the time at which it is issued<sup>22</sup> and authorise the keeping in police detention of the person to whom it relates for the period stated in it<sup>23</sup>. The period so stated must be such period as the magistrates' court thinks fit, having regard to the evidence before it<sup>24</sup>; but the period may not be longer than 36 hours<sup>25</sup>.

If it is proposed to transfer a person in police detention to a police area<sup>26</sup> other than that in which he is detained when the application for a warrant of further detention is made, the court hearing the application must have regard to the distance and the time the journey would take<sup>27</sup>.

Where an application for a warrant of further detention is refused, the person to whom the application relates must forthwith be charged or released, either on bail or without bail<sup>28</sup>.

However, a person need not be so released either before the expiry of 24 hours after the relevant time<sup>29</sup> or before the expiry of any longer period for which his continued detention is or has been authorised<sup>30</sup>. Where an application is refused, no further application may be made in respect of the person to whom the refusal relates, unless supported by evidence which has come to light since the refusal<sup>31</sup>.

Where a warrant of further detention is issued, the person to whom it relates must be released from police detention, either on bail or without bail, upon or before the expiry of the warrant unless he is charged<sup>32</sup>. A person so released may not be re-arrested without a warrant for the offence for which he was previously arrested<sup>33</sup> unless new evidence justifying a further arrest has come to light since his release<sup>34</sup>.

1 Any information submitted in support of such an application must state:

- 380 (1) the nature of the offence for which the person to whom the application relates has been arrested (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 43(14)(a));
- 381 (2) the general nature of the evidence on which that person was arrested (s 43(14)(b));
- 382 (3) what inquiries relating to the offence have been made by the police and what further inquiries are proposed by them (s 43(14)(c)); and
- 383 (4) the reasons for believing the continued detention of that person to be necessary for the purposes of such further inquiries (s 43(14)(d)).

2 For these purposes, 'magistrates' court' means a court consisting of two or more justices of the peace sitting otherwise than in open court: ibid s 45(1). As to the meaning of 'open court' see PARA 90 note 10 ante.

3 Ibid s 43(1). For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante. Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

An application for a warrant of further detention, or its extension (see PARA 1005 post), should be made between 10 am and 9 pm and, if possible, during normal court hours: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 15D. It will not usually be practicable to arrange for a court to sit specially outside the hours of 10 am and 9 pm: Code C Guidance note 15D. If it appears possible that a special sitting may be needed, outside normal court hours but between 10 am and 9 pm, the clerk to the justices should be given notice and informed of this possibility, while the court is sitting if possible: Code C Guidance note 15D.

14 Ibid s 43(5)(b)(i).

15 Ibid s 43(5)(b)(ii).

16 Ibid s 43(5)(b). In such a case the person to whom the application relates may be kept in police detention until the application is heard (s 43(6)(a)) and the custody officer must make a note in that person's custody record of the fact that he was kept in police detention for more than 36 hours after the relevant time (s 43(6)(b)(i)) and of the reason why he was so kept (s 43(6)(b)(ii)). As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante; and as to custody records see PARA 940 ante.

Section 43(5)(b) is not limited to a situation in which the 36 hour period expires at a time when the magistrates are not sitting; where the court is already sitting, the justices have a discretion, on being notified of a constable's intention to make an application, either to hear it straight away or to wait for no longer than six hours after the end of the 36 hours: R v Slough Magistrates' Court, ex p Stirling (1987) 151 JP 603, DC.

18 Ibid s 43(7)(b). The requirements of s 43(7) are mandatory; thus where an information to support an application was drafted eight minutes before the 36-hour period expired and the court clerk advised that it was not practicable to hear the application at that time and it was adjourned, the application should not in those circumstances have been granted because it could not be said that it would have been unreasonable for the police to draft the information earlier so as to ensure that the application was heard before the end of the 36-hour period: R v Slough Magistrates' Court, ex p Stirling (1987) 151 JP 603, DC.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vi) Limits on Detention/1005. Extension of warrants of further detention.

1005. Extension of warrants of further detention.

On an application on oath made by a constable and supported by an information<sup>1</sup> a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup> may extend a warrant of further detention<sup>3</sup> if it is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of the person to whom the application relates is justified<sup>4</sup>. A court may not hear an application for an extension, however, unless the person to whom the application relates has been furnished with a copy of the information<sup>5</sup> and has been brought before the court for the hearing<sup>6</sup>.

The person to whom the application relates is entitled to be legally represented at the hearing and, if he is not so represented but wishes to be so represented, the court must adjourn the hearing to enable him to obtain representation<sup>7</sup> and he may be kept in police detention during the adjournment<sup>8</sup>.

A person's further detention is only so justified<sup>9</sup> if:

- 1423 (1) his detention without charge is necessary to secure or preserve evidence relating to an offence for which he is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning him<sup>10</sup>;
- 1424 (2) an offence for which he is under arrest is an indictable offence<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1425 (3) the investigation is being conducted diligently and expeditiously<sup>12</sup>.

The period for which a warrant of further detention may be extended is such period as the court thinks fit, having regard to the evidence before it<sup>13</sup>; but the period may not be longer than 36 hours<sup>14</sup> or end later than 96 hours after the relevant time<sup>15</sup>.

Where a warrant of further detention has been extended<sup>16</sup> or further extended<sup>17</sup> for a period ending before 96 hours after the relevant time, a magistrates' court may<sup>18</sup> further extend the warrant if it is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of the person to whom the application relates is justified<sup>19</sup>. A warrant of further detention must, if extended or further extended, be indorsed with a note of the period of the extension<sup>20</sup>.

Where an application under these provisions is refused, the person to whom the application relates must forthwith be charged or released, either on bail or without bail<sup>21</sup>. However, a person need not be so released before the expiry of any period for which a warrant of further detention issued in relation to him has been extended or further extended on an earlier application so made<sup>22</sup>.

1 Any information submitted in support of such an application must state:

384 (1) the nature of the offence for which the person to whom the application relates has been arrested (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 43(14)(a), 44(6));

385 (2) the general nature of the evidence on which that person was arrested (ss 43(14)(b), 44(6));

386 (3) what inquiries relating to the offence have been made by the police and what further inquiries are proposed by them (ss 43(14)(c), 44(6)); and

387 (4) the reasons for believing the continued detention of that person to be necessary for the purposes of such further inquiries (s 43(14)(d)).

The custody officer<sup>1</sup> at a police station must ascertain everything which a person has with him<sup>2</sup> when he is: (1) brought to the station after being arrested elsewhere or after being committed to custody by an order or sentence of a court<sup>3</sup>; or (2) arrested at the station or detained<sup>4</sup> there<sup>5</sup>. The custody officer may record or cause to be recorded all or any of the things which he so ascertains<sup>6</sup>; and in the case of an arrested person the record must be made as part of his custody record<sup>7</sup>.

A custody officer may seize and retain any such thing or cause any such thing to be seized and retained<sup>8</sup>. However, clothes and personal effects may be seized only if the custody officer:

- 1426 (a) believes that the person from whom they are seized may use them to cause physical injury to himself or any other person<sup>9</sup>, to damage property<sup>10</sup>, to interfere with evidence<sup>11</sup> or to assist him to escape<sup>12</sup>; or
- 1427 (b) has reasonable grounds for believing that they may be evidence relating to an offence<sup>13</sup>.

Where anything is so seized, the person from whom it is seized must be told the reason for the seizure unless he is violent or likely to become violent<sup>14</sup> or is incapable of understanding what is said to him<sup>15</sup>. A person may be searched if the custody officer considers it necessary for him to carry out his duty of ascertainment<sup>16</sup> and to the extent that the custody officer considers it necessary for that purpose<sup>17</sup>.

A person who is in custody at a police station or is in police detention<sup>18</sup> otherwise than at a police station may at any time be searched in order to ascertain whether he has with him anything which he could use for the purposes of causing physical injury to himself or any other person, damaging property, interfering with evidence or assisting him to escape<sup>19</sup>. A constable may seize and retain, or cause to be seized and retained, anything found on such a search<sup>20</sup>. However, a constable may seize clothes and personal effects only if he believes that the person from whom they are seized may use them to cause physical injury to himself or any other person, to damage property, to interfere with evidence or to assist him to escape, or if he has reasonable grounds for believing that they may be evidence relating to an offence<sup>21</sup>. A search under these provisions must be carried out by a constable<sup>22</sup>; and the constable carrying out the search must be of the same sex as the person searched<sup>23</sup>. An intimate search<sup>24</sup> may not, however, be conducted under any of these provisions<sup>25</sup>.

Any Act, including a local Act, passed before the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 has ceased to have effect in so far as it authorised any search by a constable of a person in police detention at a police station (s 53(1)(a)) or an intimate search of a person by a constable (s 53(1)(b)); and any rule of common law which authorised such a search is abolished (s 53(1)).

UPDATE

1006 Searches of detained persons

NOTE 4--Or as a person to whom the 1984 Act s 46ZA(4) or (5) (see PARA 945A) applies: s 54(1)(b) (amended by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 46(6) (in force in specified local justice areas: SI 2007/709, SI 2008/2785)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vii) Searches of Detained Persons/1007. Intimate searches.

1007. Intimate searches.

If an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>1</sup> has reasonable cause for believing:

- 1428 (1) that a person who has been arrested and is in police detention<sup>2</sup> may have concealed on him anything which he could use to cause physical injury to himself or to others<sup>3</sup> and he might so use while he is in police detention or in the custody of a court<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1429 (2) that such a person has a Class A drug<sup>5</sup> concealed on him<sup>6</sup> and was in possession of it with the appropriate criminal intent<sup>7</sup> before his arrest<sup>8</sup>, he may authorise an intimate search<sup>9</sup> of that person<sup>10</sup>. An officer may give such an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as practicable<sup>11</sup>. However, an officer may not authorise an intimate search of a person for anything unless he has reasonable grounds for believing that it cannot be found without his being intimately searched<sup>12</sup>. Before the search begins, a police officer, designated detention officer or staff custody officer must inform the detainee that the authority to carry out the search has been given<sup>13</sup> and tell the detainee the grounds for giving the authorisation and for believing that the article cannot be removed without an intimate search<sup>14</sup>.

A drug offence search under head (2) above<sup>15</sup> may not be carried out unless the appropriate consent has been given in writing<sup>16</sup>. Where it is proposed that a drug offence search be carried out, an appropriate officer<sup>17</sup> must inform the person who is to be subject to it of the giving of the authorisation for it<sup>18</sup> and of the grounds for giving the authorisation<sup>19</sup>.

An intimate search may be carried out only by a registered medical practitioner<sup>20</sup> or registered nurse<sup>21</sup>, unless an officer of at least the rank of inspector considers that this is not practicable and the search is to take place under head (1) above<sup>22</sup>. An intimate search under head (1) above may take place only at a police station<sup>23</sup>, a hospital<sup>24</sup>, a registered medical practitioner's surgery<sup>25</sup> or some other place used for medical purposes<sup>26</sup>. A search under head (2) above may not be carried out at a police station but may take place only at a hospital, surgery or other medical premises<sup>27</sup>.

An intimate search at a police station of a juvenile or a mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable<sup>28</sup> person may take place only in the presence of the appropriate adult<sup>29</sup> of the same sex, unless the detainee specifically requests a particular adult of the opposite sex who is readily available<sup>30</sup>. In the case of a juvenile, the search may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the juvenile signifies in the presence of the appropriate adult that he does not want the adult present during the search and the appropriate adult agrees<sup>31</sup>.

Where an intimate search under head (1) above is carried out by a police officer, the officer must be of the same sex as the person searched<sup>32</sup>. A minimum of two persons other than the detainee must be present during the search<sup>33</sup>. No person of the opposite sex who is not a medical practitioner or nurse may be present; nor may any person whose presence is unnecessary<sup>34</sup>. The search must be conducted with proper regard to the sensitivity and vulnerability of the detainee<sup>35</sup>.

If an intimate search of a person is carried out, the custody record relating to him must state which parts of his body were searched<sup>36</sup> and why<sup>37</sup>. If the intimate search is a drug offence search, the custody record relating to that person must also state the authorisation by virtue of which the search was carried out<sup>38</sup>, the grounds for giving the authorisation<sup>39</sup> and the fact that the appropriate consent was given<sup>40</sup>. In any case, the authorisation for carrying out the search, the grounds for giving the authorisation, the grounds for believing the article could not be removed without an intimate search, which parts of the detainee's body were searched, who carried out the search, who was present, and the result of the search, must be recorded<sup>41</sup>. Where the search is a drug offence search under head (2) above, the giving of the warning<sup>42</sup> and the fact that the appropriate consent was given or (as the case may be) refused, and if refused the reason, if any, for the refusal, must also be recorded<sup>43</sup>. All of this information must be recorded as soon as possible after the completion of the search<sup>44</sup>.

The custody officer<sup>45</sup> at a police station may seize and retain anything which is found on an intimate search of a person, or cause any such thing to be seized and retained, if he believes that the person from whom it was seized may use it to cause physical injury to himself or any other person<sup>46</sup>, to damage property<sup>47</sup>, to interfere with evidence<sup>48</sup> or to assist him to escape<sup>49</sup>, or if he has reasonable grounds for believing that it may be evidence relating to an offence<sup>50</sup>. Where anything is so seized, the person from whom it is seized must be told the reason for the seizure unless he is violent or likely to become violent<sup>51</sup> or is incapable of understanding what is said to him<sup>52</sup>.

2 For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante.

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(1)(a)(i).

4 Ibid s 55(1)(a)(ii).

5 For the meaning of 'Class A drug' see PARA 770 note 2 ante; and MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AND DRUGS vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 239 (definition applied by ibid s 55(17)).

6 Ibid s 55(1)(b)(i).

7 For these purposes, 'the appropriate criminal intent' means an intent to commit an offence under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 5(3) (possession of controlled drug with intent to supply to another: see PARA 772 ante) or the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 68(2) (exportation etc with intent to evade a prohibition or restriction: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1029): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(17).

8 Ibid s 55(1)(b)(ii).

9 For these purposes, 'intimate search' means a search which consists of the physical examination of a person's body orifices other than the mouth: ibid s 65(1) (definition added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 59(1)). See also R v Hughes [1994] 1 WLR 876, 99 Cr App Rep 160, CA (some form of physical intrusion is required; mere visual examination in order to attempt to cause a person to extrude something from an orifice is not an intimate search). The intrusive nature of such searches means that the actual and potential risks associated with intimate searches must never be underestimated: Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers Annex A para 1.

10 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 paras 97, 99; and the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 79); Code C Annex A para 2.

Every annual report under the Police Act 1996 s 22 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 191) or made by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner must contain information about searches under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55 (as amended) which have been carried out in the area to which the report relates during the period to which it relates: s 55(14) (amended by the Police Act 1996 s 103(1), Sch 7 para 36). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq. The information about such searches must include: (1) the total number of searches (s 55(15)(a)); (2) the number of searches conducted by way of examination by a suitably qualified person (s 55(15)(b)); (3) the number of searches not so conducted but conducted in the presence of such a person (s 55(15)(c)); and (4) the result of the searches carried out (s 55(15)(d)). The information must also include, as separate items, the total number of drug offence searches (s 55(16)(a)) and the result of those searches (s 55(16)(b)).

11 Ibid s 55(3).

12 Ibid s 55(2).

13 Code C Annex A para 2A(a).

14 Code C Annex A para 2A(b).

15 Is an intimate search for a Class A drug which an officer has authorised by virtue of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(1)(b) (see the text and notes 5-8 supra): s 55(17).

16 Ibid s 55(3A) (s 55(3A), (3B), (10A), (13A) added, and s 55(11) amended, by the Drugs Act 2005 s 3). For these purposes, 'appropriate consent' means: (1) in relation to a person who has attained the age of 17 years, the consent of that person; (2) in relation to a person who has not attained that age but has attained the age of 14 years, the consent of that person and his parent or guardian; and (3) in relation to a person who has not attained the age of 14 years, the consent of his parent or guardian: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1). Where the appropriate consent to a drug offence search of any person is refused without good cause, in any proceedings against that person for an offence: (1) the court, in determining whether there is a case to answer (s 55(13A)(a) (as so added)); (2) a judge, in deciding whether to grant an application made by the defendant under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 Sch 3 para 2 (applications for dismissal: see PARA 1138 post) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(13A)(b) (as so added)); and (3) the court or jury, in determining whether that person is guilty of the offence charged (s 55(13A)(c) (as so added)), may draw such inferences from the refusal as appear proper (s 55(13A) (as so added)).

Before a detainee is asked to give appropriate consent to a drug offence search he must be warned that if he refuses without good cause his refusal may harm his case if it comes to trial: Code C Annex A para 2B. The following form of words may be used 'You do not have to allow yourself to be searched, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial': Code C Annex A Guidance note A6). Such warning may be given by a police officer or a member of police staff: Code C Annex A para 2B. A detainee who is not legally represented must be reminded of his entitlement to have free legal advice (see Code C para 6.5; and PARA 953 ante) and the reminder noted in the custody record: Code C Annex A para 2B. As to the custody record see PARA 940 ante.

17 'Appropriate officer' means a constable, a person who is designated as a detention officer in pursuance of the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) if his designation applies Sch 4 para 33D (as added) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) or a person who is designated as a staff custody officer in pursuance of s 38 if his designation applies Sch 4 para 35C (as added) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(17) (definition added by the Drugs Act 2005 s 3).

20 As to registered medical practitioners see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 4.

21 As to the registration of nurses see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 716 et seq.

22 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(5) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 79); Code C Annex A para 3. An intimate search which is only a drug offence search must be by way of examination by a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse (a 'suitably qualified person'): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55(4), (17). An intimate search which is not carried out as mentioned in s 55(5) must be carried out by a constable: s 55(6). A constable's powers under s 55(6) to carry out an intimate search may now also be exercised by a suitably designated detention officer: see the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38(6), Sch 4 para 28; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529. If an intimate search is carried out by a police officer, the reason why it is impracticable for a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse to conduct it must be recorded: Code C Annex A para 8.

Any proposal for a search under head (1) in the text to be carried out by a person other than a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse must be considered only as a last resort and when the authorising officer is satisfied the risks associated with allowing the item to remain with the detainee outweigh the risks associated with removing it: Code C Annex A para 3A.

Before authorising any intimate search, the authorising officer must make every reasonable effort to persuade the detainee to hand the article over without a search; and if the detainee agrees, a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse should whenever possible be asked to assess the risks involved and, if necessary, attend to assist the detainee: Code C Annex A Guidance note A1.

If the detainee does not agree to hand the article over without a search, the authorising officer must carefully review all the relevant factors before authorising an intimate search; in particular, the officer must consider whether the grounds for believing an article may be concealed are reasonable: Code C Annex A Guidance note A2.

If authority is given for a search under head (1) in the text, a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse must be consulted whenever possible: Code C Annex A Guidance note A3. The presumption should be that the search will be conducted by the registered medical practitioner or registered nurse and the authorising officer must make every reasonable effort to persuade the detainee to allow the medical practitioner or nurse to conduct the search: Code C Annex A Guidance note A3.

A constable should be authorised to carry out a search only as a last resort and when all other approaches have failed: Code C Annex A Guidance note A4. In these circumstances, the authorising officer must be satisfied the detainee might use the article for one or more of the purposes in head (1) in the text and the physical injury likely to be caused is sufficiently severe to justify authorising a constable to carry out the search: Code C Annex A Guidance note A4.

If an officer has any doubts whether to authorise an intimate search by a constable, the officer should seek advice from an officer of superintendent rank or above: Code C Annex A Guidance note A5.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vii) Searches of Detained Persons/1008. X-rays and ultrasound scans.

1008. X-rays and ultrasound scans.

An officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>1</sup> may authorise an x-ray to be taken of, or an ultrasound scan to be carried out on<sup>2</sup>, a person who has been arrested for an offence and is in police detention<sup>3</sup>, if he has reasonable grounds for believing that that person may have swallowed a Class A drug<sup>4</sup> and was in possession of it with the appropriate criminal intent<sup>5</sup> before his arrest<sup>6</sup>. An x-ray must not be taken of a person and an ultrasound scan must not be carried out on him unless the appropriate consent has been given in writing<sup>7</sup>. If it is proposed that an x-ray is to be taken or an ultrasound scan is to be carried out, an appropriate officer<sup>8</sup> must inform the person who is to be subject to it of the giving of the authorisation for it<sup>9</sup> and of the grounds for giving the authorisation<sup>10</sup>. An x-ray may be taken or an ultrasound scan carried out only by a suitably qualified person<sup>11</sup> and only at a hospital<sup>12</sup>, a registered medical practitioner's<sup>13</sup> surgery<sup>14</sup>, or some other place used for medical purposes<sup>15</sup>.

The custody record of the person subjected to this procedure must state the authorisation by virtue of which the x-ray was taken or the ultrasound scan was carried out<sup>16</sup>, the grounds for giving the authorisation<sup>17</sup>, the giving of the required warning<sup>18</sup>, the fact that the appropriate consent was given<sup>19</sup>, where the x-ray or ultrasound was taken or carried out<sup>20</sup>, who took it or carried it out<sup>21</sup>, who was present<sup>22</sup>, and the result<sup>23</sup>. The information so required to be recorded must be recorded as soon as practicable after the x-ray has been taken or ultrasound scan carried out (as the case may be)<sup>24</sup>.

1 See PARA 858 ante.

2 Every annual report under the Police Act 1996 s 22 (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 191) or made by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner must contain information about x-rays which have been taken and ultrasound scans which have been carried out under these provisions in the area to which the report relates during the period to which it relates: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55A(7) (s 55A added by the Drugs Act 2005 s 5(1)). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq. The information about such x-rays and ultrasound scans must be presented separately and must include: (1) the total number of x-rays (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55A(8)(a) (as so added)); (2) the total number of ultrasound scans (s 55A(8)(b) (as so added)); (3) the results of the x-rays (s 55A(8)(c) (as so added)); and (4) the result of the ultrasound scans (s 55A(8)(d) (as so added)).

3 For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55A(1)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'Class A drug' see PARA 770 note 2 ante; and MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AND DRUGS vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 239 (definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 55(17), 55A(10) (s 55A as so added)).

5 For the meaning of 'the appropriate criminal intent' see PARA 1007 note 7 ante; definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55A(10) (as added: see note 2 supra).

6 Ibid s 55A(1)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra).

7 Ibid s 55A(2) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante. Where the appropriate consent is refused without good cause, in any proceedings against that person for an offence: (1) the court, in determining whether there is a case to answer; (2) a judge, in deciding whether to grant an application made by the defendant under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 Sch 3 para 2 (applications for dismissal: see PARA 1138 post); and (3) the court or jury, in determining whether that person is guilty of the offence charged, may draw such inferences from the refusal as appear proper: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 55A(9)(a)-(c) (as so added).

8 For the meaning of 'appropriate officer' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante; definition applied by ibid s 55A(10) (as added: see note 2 supra).

9 Ibid s 55A(3)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers, Annex K para 2(a).

10 Ibid s 55A(3)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code C Annex K para 2(b). Before a detainee is asked to give appropriate consent to an x-ray or an ultrasound scan, he must be warned that if he refuses without good cause his refusal may harm his case if it comes to trial: Code C Annex K para 3. If authority is given for an x-ray to be taken or an ultrasound scan to be carried out (or both), consideration should be given to asking a registered medical practitioner or registered nurse to explain to the detainee what is involved and to allay any concerns the detainee might have about the effect which taking an x-ray or carrying out an ultrasound scan might have on him: Code C Annex K Guidance note K1. If appropriate consent is not given, evidence of the explanation may, if the case comes to trial, be relevant to determining whether the detainee had a good cause for refusing: Code C Annex K Guidance note K1. In warning a detainee who is asked to consent to an x-ray being taken or an ultrasound scan being carried out (or both), as in Code C Annex K para 3, the following form of words may be used: 'You do not have to allow an x-ray of you to be taken or an ultrasound scan to be carried out on you, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial': Code C Annex K Guidance note K2. The giving of the warning must be recorded as soon as practicable in the detainee's custody record: Code C Annex K para 5(c). The warning may be given by a police officer or member of police staff: Code C Annex K para 3. A detainee who is not legally represented must be reminded of his entitlement to have free legal advice (see Code C para 6.5; and PARA 953 ante) and an appropriate adult (see PARA 940 note 9 ante) should be present when consent is sought: Code C Annex K para 5.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(vii) Searches of Detained Persons/1009. Strip searches.

1009. Strip searches.

A strip search is a search involving the removal of more than outer clothing<sup>1</sup>. A strip search may take place only if it is considered necessary to remove an article which a detainee would not be allowed to keep, and the officer reasonably considers that the detainee might have concealed such an article<sup>2</sup>. Strip searches must not be routinely carried out if there is no reason to consider that articles are concealed<sup>3</sup>.

When strip searches are conducted:

- 1430 (1) a police officer carrying out a strip search must be the same sex as the detainee<sup>4</sup>;
- 1431 (2) the search must take place in an area where the detainee cannot be seen by anyone who does not need to be present, nor by a member of the opposite sex except an appropriate adult<sup>5</sup> who has been specifically requested by the detainee<sup>6</sup>;
- 1432 (3) except in cases of urgency, where there is risk of serious harm to the detainee or to others, whenever a strip search involves exposure of intimate body parts, there must be at least two persons present other than the detainee, and if the search is of a juvenile or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person<sup>7</sup>, one of those persons must be the appropriate adult<sup>8</sup>;
- 1433 (4) except in urgent cases as above, a search of a juvenile may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the juvenile signifies in the presence of the appropriate adult that he does not want the adult to be present during the search and the adult agrees<sup>9</sup>;
- 1434 (5) the search must be conducted with proper regard to the sensitivity and vulnerability of the detainee in these circumstances and every reasonable effort must be made to secure the detainee's co-operation and minimise embarrassment<sup>10</sup>;
- 1435 (6) if necessary to assist the search, the detainee may be required to hold his arms in the air or to stand with his legs apart and bend forward so a visual examination may be made of the genital and anal areas provided that no physical contact is made with any body orifice<sup>11</sup>;
- 1436 (7) if articles are found, the detainee must be asked to hand them over<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1437 (8) a strip search must be conducted as quickly as possible and the detainee allowed to dress as soon as the procedure is complete<sup>13</sup>.

A record must be made on the custody record of a strip search including the reason why it was considered necessary, those present and any result<sup>14</sup>.

4 Code C Annex A para 11(a).

- 5 For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante.
- 6 Code C Annex A para 11(b).
- 7 For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', see PARA 940 note 9 ante.
- 8 Code C Annex A para 11(c).
- 9 Code C Annex A para 11(c). A record must be made of the juvenile's decision and signed by the appropriate adult: Code C Annex A para 11(c). The presence of more than two persons, other than an appropriate adult, is permitted only in the most exceptional circumstances: Code C Annex A para 11(c).
- 10 Code C Annex A para 11(d). Detainees who are searched may not normally be required to remove all their clothes at the same time, for example a person should be allowed to remove clothing above the waist and re-dress before removing further clothing: Code C Annex A para 11(d).
- 11 Code C Annex A para 11(e).
- 12 Code C Annex A para 11(f). If articles are found within any body orifice other than the mouth, and the detainee refuses to hand them over, their removal would constitute an intimate search, which must be carried out in accordance with the rules relating to such a search (see PARA 1007 ante): Code C Annex A para 11(f).
- 13 Code C Annex A para 11(g).
- 14 Code C Annex A para 12.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/A. CODE OF PRACTICE/1010. Code of practice.

(viii) Identification

A. CODE OF PRACTICE

1010. Code of practice.

A constable's powers relating to the identification of persons are governed by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>1</sup> and Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers<sup>2</sup>. Identification by witnesses arises, for example, if the offender is seen committing the crime and a witness is given an opportunity to identify the suspect in a video identification, identification parade or similar procedure<sup>3</sup>. The procedures are designed both to test the witness' ability to identify the person he saw on a previous occasion and to provide safeguards against mistaken identification<sup>4</sup>. While Code D concentrates on visual identification procedures, it does not preclude the police making use of aural identification procedures, such as a 'voice identification parade', where they judge that appropriate<sup>5</sup>. Identification by fingerprints applies when a person's fingerprints are taken to compare with fingerprints found at the scene of a crime, to check and prove convictions, and to help to ascertain a person's identity<sup>6</sup>. Identification by body samples and impressions includes taking samples such as blood or hair to generate a DNA profile for comparison with material obtained from the scene of a crime or a victim<sup>7</sup>. Taking photographs of arrested persons applies to recording and checking identity and locating and tracing persons who are wanted for offences and fail to answer their bail<sup>8</sup>. Another method of identification involves searching and examining detained suspects to find, for example, marks such as tattoos or scars which may help establish the person's identity or whether they have been involved in committing an offence<sup>9</sup>.

The relevant provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and Code D are designed to make sure that fingerprints, samples, impressions and photographs are taken, used and retained, and identification procedures carried out, only when justified and necessary for preventing, detecting or investigating crime<sup>10</sup>.

Where a record is made under Code D of any action requiring the authority of an officer of specified rank, his name and rank must be included in the record<sup>11</sup>; and all records must be timed and signed by the maker<sup>12</sup>. Records must be made in the custody record<sup>13</sup> unless otherwise specified<sup>14</sup>.

If a person is blind, seriously visually impaired or unable to read, the custody officer<sup>15</sup> or identification officer must make sure that his solicitor<sup>16</sup>, relative, appropriate adult<sup>17</sup> or some other person likely to take an interest in him and not involved in the investigation is available to help check any documentation<sup>18</sup>. When Code D requires written consent or signing, the person assisting may be asked to sign instead, if the detainee prefers<sup>19</sup>. If any person appears to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak or has difficulty orally because of a speech impediment, he must be treated as such for the purposes of Code D in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary<sup>20</sup>.

In the case of any procedure requiring a person's consent, the consent of a mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable person is valid only if given in the presence of the appropriate adult; and in the case of a juvenile<sup>21</sup> is valid only if the consent of his parent or guardian is also obtained, unless the juvenile is under 14, in which case the consent of his parent or guardian is sufficient in its own right<sup>22</sup>. In the case of any procedure requiring information to be given to or sought from a suspect, it must be given or sought in the presence of the appropriate adult if the suspect is mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a juvenile<sup>23</sup>. If an officer has any suspicion, or is told in good faith, that a person of any age may be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, in the absence of clear evidence to dispel that suspicion, the person must be treated as such for the purposes of Code D<sup>24</sup>. If the suspect appears deaf or there is doubt about his hearing ability, speaking ability or ability to understand English, and effective communication cannot be established, the information must be given or sought through an interpreter<sup>25</sup>.

Any procedure involving the participation of a suspect who is mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a juvenile must take place in the presence of the appropriate adult<sup>26</sup>. Any procedure involving the participation of a witness who is mentally disordered, otherwise mentally vulnerable or a juvenile must take place in the presence of a pre-trial support person; however the support person must not be allowed to prompt any identification of a suspect by a witness<sup>27</sup>.

1    le the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 61-65 (as amended) (see PARA 1021 et seq post).

2    As to Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers see PARAS 908 ante, 1011 et seq post. As to codes of practice under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 see further PARA 908 ante. Code D must be readily available at all police stations for consultation by police officers and police staff, detained persons and members of the public: Code D para 2.1. The provisions of Code D include the Annexes to it but do not include the Guidance notes: Code D para 2.2. Except as described by the code, nothing in Code D affects the powers and procedures:

388   (1)   for requiring and taking samples of breath, blood and urine in relation to driving offences etc when under the influence of drink or drugs or excess alcohol under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 4-11 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 975 et seq), the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 ss 15, 16 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 991) or the Transport and Works Act 1992 ss 26-38 (as amended) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 377 et seq; ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1626) (Code D para 2.17(i));

389   (2)   for taking photographs or fingerprints under the Immigration Act 1971 Sch 2 para 18 (as amended) of persons detained under Sch 2 para 16 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156), for taking fingerprints in accordance with the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 141 (as amended) and s 142(3) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 150), or other methods for collecting information about a person's external characteristics provided for by regulations under s 144 (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 150) (Code D para 2.17(ii));

390   (3)   for taking photographs, fingerprints, skin impressions, body samples or impressions under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 (as amended) (see PARA 421 et seq ante) from persons arrested under s 41 or detained for examination under Sch 7 (as amended) (see PARA 430 et seq ante) and to whom the code of practice issued under Sch 14 para 6 (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 545) applies (Code D para 2.17(iii)); or 391   (4)   for taking photographs, fingerprints, skin impressions, body samples or impressions from people arrested on warrants issued in Scotland or arrested or detained without warrant by officers from a Scottish police force under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 136(2), 137(2) (see PARAS 921, 928 ante) (in which cases, police powers and duties and the arrested person's rights and entitlements whilst at a police station in England and Wales are the same as if he had been arrested in Scotland by a Scottish police officer (Code D para 2.17(iv)).

3    Code D para 1.2. As to video identifications see PARA 1016 post. As to identification parades see PARA 1017 post.

4    Code D para 1.2.

5    Code D para 1.2.

6 Code D para 1.3. Identification using footwear impressions applies when a person's footwear impressions are taken to compare with impressions found at the scene of a crime: Code D para 1.3A.

7 Code D para 1.4.

8 Code D para 1.5.

9 Code D para 1.6.

10 Code D para 1.7. If these provisions are not observed, the application of the relevant procedures in particular cases may be open to question: Code D para 1.7.

11 Code D para 2.8. However, nothing in Code D requires the identity of officers or civilian support staff to be recorded or disclosed either in the case of inquiries linked to the investigation of terrorism (Code D para 2.18(a)) or if the officers or police staff reasonably believe that recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger (Code D para 2.18(b)). In these cases, officers and staff must use warrant or other identification numbers and the name of their police station: Code D para 2.18. The purpose of the exclusion relating to officers or police staff reasonably believing that recording or disclosing their names might put them in danger is to protect those involved in serious organised crime investigations or arrests of particularly violent suspects when there is reliable information that those arrested or their associates may threaten or cause harm to the officers: Code D Guidance note 2D. In cases of doubt, an officer of inspector rank or above should be consulted: Code D Guidance note 2D.

12 Code D para 2.10. This is subject to Code D para 2.18 (see note 11 supra): Code D para 2.10.

13 As to custody records see PARA 940 ante.

14 Code D para 2.11.

15 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. References in Code D to custody officers include those performing the functions of a custody officer: Code D para 2.7.

Any reference in Code D to a police officer includes a designated person (ie a person other than a police officer designated under the Police Reform Act 2002 Pt 4 (ss 38-77) (as amended) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) who has specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on him) acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on him by his designation: Code D para 2.19. If a power conferred on a designated person allows reasonable force to be used when exercised by a police officer, a designated person exercising that power has the same entitlement to use force: Code D para 2.20(a). If a power conferred on a designated person includes power to use force to enter any premises, that power is not exercisable by that designated person except in the company, and under the supervision, of a police officer (Code D para 2.20(b)(i)) or for the purpose of saving life or limb, or preventing serious damage to property (Code D para 2.20(b)(ii)).

Nothing in Code D prevents the custody officer, or other officer given custody of the detainee, from allowing police staff who are not designated persons to carry out individual procedures or tasks at the police station if the law allows: Code D para 2.21. However, the officer remains responsible for making sure the procedures and tasks are carried out correctly in accordance with the codes of practice: Code D para 2.21. Any such police staff must be either a person employed by a police authority maintaining a police force and under the control and direction of the chief officer of that force (Code D para 2.21(a)) or employed by a person with whom a police authority has a contract for the provision of services relating to persons arrested or otherwise in custody (Code D para 2.21(b)). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq. Designated persons and other police staff must have regard to any relevant provisions of the codes of practice: Code D para 2.22.

16 For the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 953 note 4 ante; definition applied by Code D para 2.6.

17 For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante; definition applied by Code D para 2.6.

18 Code D para 2.13.

19 Code D para 2.13. Persons who are seriously visually impaired or unable to read may be unwilling to sign police documents; the alternative, ie their representative signing on their behalf, seeks to protect the interests of both police and suspects: Code D Guidance note 2B. Code D para 2.13 does not require an appropriate adult to be called solely to assist in checking and signing documentation for a person who is not a juvenile, or mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable: Code D para 2.13. See also Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 3.15; and PARA 949 ante. For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', for the purposes of Code C see PARA 940 note 9 ante.

20 Code D para 2.5.

21 If any person appears to be under the age of 17, he must be treated as a juvenile for the purposes of Code D in the absence of clear evidence to show that he is older: Code D para 2.4.

22 Code D para 2.12. For these purposes, consent required from a parent or guardian may be given, in the case of a juvenile in the care of a local authority or voluntary organisation, by that authority or organisation: Code D Guidance note 2A. In the case of a juvenile, nothing in Code D para 2.12 requires the parent, guardian or representative of a local authority or voluntary organisation to be present to give his consent, unless he is acting as the appropriate adult under Code D para 2.14 (see the text and notes 23, 25 infra) or Code D para 2.15 (see the text and note 26 infra), but it is important that a parent or guardian not present is fully informed before being asked to consent: Code D Guidance note 2A. Such a person must be given the same information about the procedure and the juvenile's suspected involvement in the offence as the juvenile and appropriate adult, and must also be allowed to speak to the juvenile and the appropriate adult if he wishes: Code D Guidance note 2A. Provided the consent is fully informed and is not withdrawn, it may be obtained at any time before the procedure takes place: Code D Guidance note 2A.

23 Code D para 2.14. If the appropriate adult is not present when the information is first given or sought the procedure must be repeated in the presence of the appropriate adult when he arrives: Code D para 2.14.

24 Code D para 2.3.

25 Code D para 2.14. As to interpreters see PARAS 967-969 ante.

26 Code D para 2.15.

27 Code D para 2.15A. A pre-trial support person (who should not be, or be likely to be, a witness in the investigation) should accompany a vulnerable witness during any identification procedure: Code D Guidance note 2AB.

UPDATE

1010 Code of practice

TEXT AND NOTES--Revised Code of Practice D came into operation on 1 February 2008: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Codes of Practice) Order 2008, SI 2008/167.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1011. In general.

B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS

1011. In general.

A record must be made of the suspect's description as first given by a potential witness<sup>1</sup>. This record must:

- 1438 (1) be made and kept in a form which enables details of that description to be accurately produced from it, in a visible and legible form, which can be given to the suspect or the suspect's solicitor<sup>2</sup> in accordance with Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1439 (2) unless otherwise specified, be made before the witness takes part in any specified identification procedures<sup>4</sup>.

A copy of the record must, where practicable, be given to the suspect or his solicitor before any of the specified procedures are carried out<sup>5</sup>.

1 Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 3.1.

2 For the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 953 note 4 ante; definition applied by Code D para 2.6.

3 Code D para 3.1(a).

4 Code D para 3.1(b). The specified procedures are those under Code D paras 3.5-3.10 (suspect known and available: video identification; identification parade; and group identification: see PARAS 1016-1018 post) and Code D para 3.21 or 3.23 (suspect known but not available: identification; confrontation: see PARA 1019 post): Code D para 3.1(b).

5 Code D para 3.1. When it is proposed to show photographs to a witness in accordance with Code D Annex E (see PARA 1013 post) it is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to confirm to the officer responsible for supervising and directing the showing that the first description of the suspect given by that witness has been recorded: Code D Guidance note 3E. If this description has not been recorded, the procedure under Code D Annex E must be postponed: Code D Guidance note 3E. See also Code D Annex E para 2; and PARA 1013 post. In Code D, 'photographs', 'films', 'negatives' and 'copies' include relevant visual images recorded, stored or reproduced through any medium: Code D para 2.16.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1012. Cases when the suspect's identity is not known.

1012. Cases when the suspect's identity is not known.

In cases when the suspect's identity is not known, a witness may be taken to a particular neighbourhood or place to see whether he can identify the person he saw<sup>1</sup>. Although the number, age, sex, race, general description and style of clothing of other persons present at the location and the way in which any identification is made cannot be controlled, the principles applicable to the formal procedures<sup>2</sup> must be followed as far as practicable<sup>3</sup>. For example:

- 1440 (1) where it is practicable to do so, a record should be made<sup>4</sup> of the witness' description of the suspect before asking him to make an identification<sup>5</sup>;
- 1441 (2) care must be taken not to direct the witness' attention to any individual unless, taking into account all the circumstances, this cannot be avoided<sup>6</sup>;
- 1442 (3) where there is more than one witness, every effort should be made to keep them separate and witnesses should be taken to see whether they can identify a person independently<sup>7</sup>;
- 1443 (4) once there is sufficient information to justify the arrest of a particular individual for suspected involvement in the offence (for example, after a witness makes a positive identification), the provisions relating to cases where the suspect is known and available<sup>8</sup> apply for any other witnesses in relation to that individual<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1444 (5) the officer or police staff accompanying the witness must record the action taken in his pocket book<sup>10</sup>.

A witness must not be shown photographs<sup>11</sup>, computerised or artist's composite likenesses or similar likenesses or pictures (including e-fit images) if the identity of the suspect is known to the police and the suspect is available to take part in a video identification<sup>12</sup>, an identification parade<sup>13</sup> or a group identification<sup>14</sup>. If the suspect's identity is not known, the showing of such images to a witness to obtain identification evidence must be done in accordance with the prescribed procedure<sup>15</sup>.

drawn to that person (Code D Guidance note 3F(a)) or the suspect's identity becomes known before the procedure (Code D Guidance note 3F(b)).

7 Code D para 3.2(c).

8 le the provisions of Code D para 3.4 et seq: see PARAS 1014-1018 post.

9 Code D para 3.2(d). Subject to Code D paras 3.12, 3.13 (see PARA 1014 post), it is not necessary for the witness who makes such a positive identification to take part in a further procedure: Code D para 3.2(d).

10 Code D para 3.2(e). 'Pocket book' includes any official report book issued to police officers or police staff: Code D para 2.11. The action taken must be recorded as soon as, and in as much detail as, possible: Code D para 3.2(e). The record should include the date, time and place of the relevant occasion the witness claims to have previously seen the suspect; where any identification was made; how it was made and the conditions at the time (eg the distance the witness was from the suspect, the weather and the light); if the witness's attention was drawn to the suspect; the reason for this; and anything said by the witness or the suspect about the identification or the conduct of the procedure: Code D para 3.2(e).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1013. Prescribed procedure for showing photographs.

1013. Prescribed procedure for showing photographs.

An officer of sergeant rank or above must be responsible for supervising and directing the showing of photographs<sup>1</sup>, although the actual showing may be done by another officer or police staff<sup>2</sup>. The supervising officer must confirm that the first description of the suspect given by the witness has been recorded before the witness is shown the photographs; and if the supervising officer is unable to confirm the description has been recorded he must postpone showing the photographs<sup>3</sup>.

Only one witness may be shown photographs at any one time; and each witness must be given as much privacy as practicable and must not be allowed to communicate with any other witness in the case<sup>4</sup>. The witness must be shown no fewer than 12 photographs at a time, which must, as far as possible, all be of a similar type<sup>5</sup>.

When the witness is shown the photographs, he must be told that the photograph of the person he saw may, or may not, be amongst them and that if he cannot make a positive identification, he should say so<sup>6</sup>. The witness must also be told that he should not make a decision until he has viewed at least 12 photographs<sup>7</sup>. The witness must not be prompted or guided in any way but must be left to make any selection without help<sup>8</sup>.

If a witness makes a positive identification from photographs, and unless the person identified is otherwise eliminated from inquiries or is not available, other witnesses may not be shown photographs, but both they, and the witness who has made the identification, must be asked to attend a video identification<sup>9</sup>, an identification parade<sup>10</sup> or group identification<sup>11</sup> unless there is no dispute about the suspect's identification<sup>12</sup>.

If the witness makes a selection but is unable to confirm the identification, the person showing the photographs must ask him how sure he is that the photograph he has indicated is the person he saw on the specified earlier occasion<sup>13</sup>.

When the use of a computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness has led to there being a known suspect who can be asked to participate in a video identification, appear on an identification parade or participate in a group identification, that likeness must not be shown to other potential witnesses<sup>14</sup>.

When a witness attending a video identification, an identification parade or group identification has previously been shown photographs or computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness (and it is the responsibility of the officer in charge of the investigation to make the identification officer aware that this is the case), the suspect and his solicitor<sup>15</sup> must be informed of this fact before the identification procedure takes place<sup>16</sup>.

None of the photographs shown may be destroyed<sup>17</sup>, whether or not an identification is made, since they may be required for production in court<sup>18</sup>. The photographs must be numbered and a separate photograph taken of the frame or part of the album from which the witness made an identification as an aid to reconstituting it<sup>19</sup>.

Whether or not identification is made, a record must be kept of the showing of photographs on forms provided for the purpose, including anything said by the witness about any identification or the conduct of the procedure, any reasons why it was not practicable to comply with any of the provisions<sup>20</sup> governing the showing of photographs and the name and rank of the supervising officer<sup>21</sup>.

The supervising officer must inspect and sign the record as soon as practicable<sup>22</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1014. Cases when the suspect is known and available.

1014. Cases when the suspect is known and available.

If the suspect's identity is known<sup>1</sup> to the police, and he is available<sup>2</sup>, the arrangements for, and conduct of, the three principal identification procedures<sup>3</sup> and the circumstances in which an identification procedure must be held are<sup>4</sup> the responsibility of an officer not below inspector rank who is not involved with the investigation ('the identification officer')<sup>5</sup>. Unless otherwise specified, this officer may allow another officer or police staff<sup>6</sup> to make arrangements for, and conduct, any of these identification procedures<sup>7</sup>. In delegating these procedures, the identification officer must be able to supervise effectively and either intervene or be contacted for advice<sup>8</sup>. No officer or any other person involved with the investigation of the case against the suspect, beyond the extent required by these procedures, may take any part in these procedures or act as the identification officer<sup>9</sup>. When an identification procedure is required, in the interest of fairness to suspects and witnesses, it must be held as soon as practicable<sup>10</sup>.

Whenever a witness has identified a suspect or purported to have identified him prior to any of the three identification procedures having been held<sup>11</sup>, or there is a witness available who expresses an ability to identify the suspect, or where there is a reasonable chance of the witness being able to do so, and he has not been given an opportunity to identify the suspect in any of the three procedures<sup>12</sup>, and the suspect disputes being the person the witness claims to have seen, an identification procedure must be held unless it is not practicable or it would serve no useful purpose<sup>13</sup> in proving or disproving whether the suspect was involved in committing the offence<sup>14</sup>. Such a procedure may also be held if the officer in charge of the investigation considers it would be useful<sup>15</sup>.

If an identification procedure is to be held, the suspect must initially be offered a video identification unless:

- 1445 (1) a video identification is not practicable<sup>16</sup>;
- 1446 (2) an identification parade is both practicable and more suitable than a video identification<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1447 (3) the officer in charge of the investigation considers a group identification is the most suitable of the three procedures and the identification officer considers it practicable to arrange<sup>18</sup>.

The identification officer and the officer in charge of the investigation must consult each other to determine which option is to be offered<sup>19</sup>. An identification parade may not be practicable because of factors relating to the witnesses, such as their number, state of health, availability and travelling requirements<sup>20</sup>. A video identification would normally be more suitable if it could be arranged and completed sooner than an identification parade<sup>21</sup>.

A suspect who refuses the identification procedure first offered must be asked to state his reason for refusing and may get advice from his solicitor<sup>22</sup> and/or, if present, his appropriate adult<sup>23</sup>. The suspect, solicitor and/or appropriate adult must be allowed to make representations about why another procedure should be used<sup>24</sup>. A record should be made of the reasons for refusal and any representations made<sup>25</sup>. After considering any reasons given, and representations made, the identification officer must, if appropriate, arrange for the suspect to be offered an alternative which the officer considers suitable and practicable<sup>26</sup>. If the officer decides that it is not suitable and practicable to offer an alternative identification procedure, the reasons for that decision must be recorded<sup>27</sup>. A group identification may initially be offered if the officer in charge of the investigation considers it is more suitable than a video identification or an identification parade and the identification officer considers it practicable to arrange<sup>28</sup>.

A record must be made of the video identification, identification parade or group identification on forms provided for the purpose<sup>29</sup>. If the identification officer considers that it is not practicable to hold a video identification or identification parade requested by the suspect, the reasons must be recorded and explained to the suspect<sup>30</sup>. A record must be made of a person's failure or refusal to co-operate in a video identification, identification parade or group identification<sup>31</sup>.

Before any of the three identification procedures is arranged, the provisions about notice to suspects<sup>32</sup> must<sup>33</sup> be satisfied<sup>34</sup>.

1 References to a suspect being 'known' mean that there is sufficient information known to the police to justify the arrest of a particular person for suspected involvement in the offence: Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 3.4.

2 A suspect being 'available' means that he is immediately available or will be within a reasonably short time and willing to take an effective part in at least one of the following which it is practicable to arrange: (1) video identification; (2) identification parade; or (3) group identification: Code D para 3.4. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1015. Notice to suspect.

1015. Notice to suspect.

Before a video identification<sup>1</sup>, identification parade<sup>2</sup> or group identification<sup>3</sup> is arranged, there must<sup>4</sup> be explained to the suspect:

- 1448 (1) the purposes of the video identification, identification parade or group identification<sup>5</sup>;
- 1449 (2) his entitlement to free legal advice<sup>6</sup>;
- 1450 (3) the procedures for holding the identification, including the suspect's right to have a solicitor<sup>7</sup> or friend present<sup>8</sup>;
- 1451 (4) that he does not have to consent to or co-operate in a video identification, identification parade or group identification<sup>9</sup>;
- 1452 (5) that if he does not consent to, and co-operate in, a video identification, identification parade or group identification, his refusal may be given in evidence in any subsequent trial and the police may proceed covertly without his consent or make other arrangements to test whether a witness can identify him<sup>10</sup>;
- 1453 (6) whether, for the purposes of the video identification procedure, images of him have previously been obtained<sup>11</sup> and, if so, that he may co-operate in providing further, suitable images to be used instead<sup>12</sup>;
- 1454 (7) if appropriate, the special arrangements for juveniles<sup>13</sup>;
- 1455 (8) if appropriate, the special arrangements for mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable persons<sup>14</sup>;
- 1456 (9) that if he significantly alters his appearance between being offered an identification procedure and any attempt to hold one, this may be given in evidence if the case comes to trial, and the identification officer<sup>15</sup> may then consider other forms of identification<sup>16</sup>;
- 1457 (10) that a moving image or photograph<sup>17</sup> may be taken of him when he attends for any identification procedure<sup>18</sup>;
- 1458 (11) whether, before his identity became known, the witness was shown photographs, a computerised or artist's composite likeness or similar likeness or image by the police<sup>19</sup>;
- 1459 (12) that if he changes his appearance before an identification parade, it may not be practicable to arrange one on the day or subsequently and, because of the appearance change, the identification officer may consider alternative methods of identification<sup>20</sup>; and
- 1460 (13) that he or his solicitor will be provided with details of the description of the suspect as first given by any witnesses who are to attend the video identification, identification parade, group identification or confrontation<sup>21</sup>.

This information must also be recorded in a written notice handed to the suspect; and the suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to read the notice, after which he should be asked to sign a second copy to indicate if he is willing to co-operate with the making of a video or to take part in the identification parade or group identification<sup>22</sup>.

The duties<sup>23</sup> of the identification officer may be performed by the custody officer<sup>24</sup> or other officer not involved in the investigation if either:

- 1461 (a) it is proposed to release the suspect in order that an identification procedure can be arranged and carried out and an inspector is not available to act as the identification officer before the suspect leaves the station<sup>25</sup>; or
- 1462 (b) it is proposed to keep the suspect in police detention whilst the procedure is arranged and carried out and waiting for an inspector to act as the identification officer would cause unreasonable delay to the investigation<sup>26</sup>.

The officer concerned must inform the identification officer of the action taken and give him the signed copy of the notice<sup>27</sup>.

If the identification officer and officer in charge of the investigation suspect, on reasonable grounds, that if the suspect was given the information and notice<sup>28</sup> he would then take steps to avoid being seen by a witness in any identification procedure, the identification officer may arrange for images of the suspect suitable for use in a video identification procedure to be obtained before giving the information and notice<sup>29</sup>. If the suspect's images are obtained in these circumstances, the suspect may, for the purposes of a video identification procedure, co-operate in providing suitable new images to be used instead<sup>30</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1016. Video identification.

1016. Video identification.

A 'video identification' is when the witness is shown moving images<sup>1</sup> of a known suspect, together with similar images of others who resemble the suspect<sup>2</sup>. Video identifications must be carried out in accordance with a specified procedure<sup>3</sup>. The arrangements for obtaining and ensuring the availability of a suitable set of images to be used in a video identification must be the responsibility of an identification officer<sup>4</sup> who has no direct involvement with the case<sup>5</sup>.

The set of images must include the suspect and at least eight other people who, so far as possible, resemble the suspect in age, height, general appearance and position in life<sup>6</sup>. Only one suspect may appear in any set unless there are two suspects of roughly similar appearance, in which case they may be shown together with at least 12 other people<sup>7</sup>. The images used to conduct a video identification must, as far as possible, show the suspect and other persons in the same positions or carrying out the same sequence of movements<sup>8</sup>. They must also show the suspect and other persons under identical conditions unless the identification officer reasonably believes that because of the suspect's failure or refusal to co-operate or other reasons, it is not practicable for the conditions to be identical<sup>9</sup>, and that any difference in the conditions would not direct a witness' attention to any individual image<sup>10</sup>. The reasons why identical conditions are not practicable must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose<sup>11</sup>.

Provision must be made for each person shown to be identified by number<sup>12</sup>. If police officers are shown, any numerals or other identifying badges must be concealed<sup>13</sup>. If a prison inmate is shown, either as a suspect or not, then either all, or none of, the persons shown should be in prison clothing<sup>14</sup>.

The suspect or his solicitor<sup>15</sup>, friend, or appropriate adult<sup>16</sup> must be given a reasonable opportunity to see the complete set of images before it is shown to any witness<sup>17</sup>. If the suspect has a reasonable objection to the set of images or any of the participants, he must be asked to state the reasons for the objection and steps must, if practicable, be taken to remove the grounds for objection<sup>18</sup>. If this is not practicable, the suspect and/or his representative must be told why his objections cannot be met and the objection, the reason given for it and why it cannot be met must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose<sup>19</sup>.

Before the images are so shown<sup>20</sup>, the suspect or his solicitor must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are to attend the video identification<sup>21</sup>. When a broadcast or publication is made<sup>22</sup>, the suspect or his solicitor must also be allowed to view any material released to the media by the police for the purpose of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided that it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation<sup>23</sup>.

The suspect's solicitor, if practicable, must be given reasonable notification of the time and place at which the video identification is to be conducted so that a representative may attend on behalf of the suspect<sup>24</sup>. If a solicitor has not been instructed, this information must be given to the suspect<sup>25</sup>. The suspect may not be present when the images are shown to the witness or witnesses<sup>26</sup>. In the absence of the suspect's representative, the viewing itself must be recorded on video<sup>27</sup>. No unauthorised persons may be present<sup>28</sup>.

The identification officer is responsible for making the appropriate arrangements to make sure, before they see the set of images, that witnesses are not able to communicate with each other about the case, or see any of the images which are to be shown, or see, or be reminded of, any photograph<sup>29</sup> or description of the suspect or given any other indication as to the suspect's identity, or overhear a witness who has already seen the material<sup>30</sup>. There must be no discussion with a witness about the composition of the set of images and he must not be told whether a previous witness has made any identification<sup>31</sup>.

Only one witness may see the set of images at a time<sup>32</sup>. Immediately before the images are shown, the witness must be told that the person he saw on a specified earlier occasion may, or may not, appear in the images he is shown and that if he cannot make a positive identification he should say so<sup>33</sup>. The witness must be advised that at any point he may ask to see a particular part of the set of images or to have a particular image frozen for him to study<sup>34</sup>. Furthermore, it should be pointed out to the witness that there is no limit on how many times he can view the whole set of images or any part of them<sup>35</sup>. However, he should be asked not to make any decision as to whether the person he saw is on the set of images until he has seen the whole set at least twice<sup>36</sup>.

Once the witness has seen the whole set of images at least twice and has indicated that he does not want to view the images, or any part of them, again, he must be asked to say whether the individual he saw in person on a specified earlier occasion has been shown and, if so, to identify him by number of the image<sup>37</sup>. The witness will then be shown that image to confirm the identification<sup>38</sup>.

Care must be taken not to direct the witness' attention to any one individual image or give any indication of the suspect's identity<sup>39</sup>. Where a witness has previously made an identification by photographs, or a computerised or artist's composite or similar likeness, he must not be reminded of such a photograph or composite likeness once a suspect is available for identification by other means<sup>40</sup>. Nor must the witness be reminded of any description of the suspect<sup>41</sup>.

After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs, or any description of suspects relating to the offence and his reply must be recorded<sup>42</sup>.

Arrangements must be made for all relevant material containing sets of images used for specific identification procedures to be kept securely and their movements accounted for<sup>43</sup>. In particular, no person involved in the investigation may be permitted to view the material prior to it being shown to any witness<sup>44</sup>.

A record must be made of all those participating in, or seeing, the set of images whose names are known to the police<sup>45</sup>. A record of the conduct of the video identification must be made on forms provided for the purpose<sup>46</sup>.

1 For the circumstances in which still images may be used see Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 3.21; and PARA 1019 post. Moving images must be used unless the suspect is known but not available (see Code D para 3.21) or, in accordance with Code D Annex A para 2A (see note 6 infra) the identification officer does not consider that replication of a physical feature can be achieved or that it is not possible to conceal the location of the feature on the image of the suspect: Code D para 3.5. The identification officer may then decide to make use of video identification but using still images: Code D para 3.5.

2 Code D para 3.5.

3 Code D para 3.6. The procedure is set out in Code D Annex A: see the text and notes 4-46 infra.

4 As to the identification officer see PARA 1014 ante.

5 Code D Annex A para 1.

6 Code D Annex A para 2. If the suspect has an unusual physical feature (eg a facial scar, tattoo or distinctive hairstyle or hair colour) which does not appear on the images of the other persons that are available to be used, steps may be taken to conceal the location of the feature on the images of the suspect and the other persons (Code D Annex A para 2A(a)) or to replicate that feature on the images of the other persons (Code D Annex A para 2A(b)). For these purposes, the feature may be concealed or replicated electronically or by any other method which it is practicable to use to ensure that the images of the suspect and the other persons resemble each other: Code D Annex A para 2A. The identification officer has discretion to choose whether to conceal or replicate the feature and the method to be used: Code D Annex A para 2A. If an unusual physical feature has been described by the witness the identification officer should, if practicable, have that feature replicated; if it has not been described, concealment may be more appropriate: Code D Annex A para 2A. A video identification procedure using unmasked images of persons bearing an insufficient resemblance to a suspect in age and appearance, used where a witness had been unable to make an identification from images which masked differences in appearance, was unlawful: R v Marcus [2004] EWCA Crim 3387, [2005] Crim LR 384. If the identification officer decides that a feature should be concealed or replicated, the reason for the decision and whether the feature was concealed or replicated in the images shown to any witness should be recorded: Code D Annex A para 2B. If the witness requests to view an image where an unusual physical feature has been concealed or replicated without the feature being concealed or replicated he may be allowed to do so: Code D Annex A para 2C.

10 Code D Annex A para 3(b).

11 Code D Annex A para 4.

12 Code D Annex A para 5.

1017. Identification parade.

An 'identification parade' is when the witness sees the suspect in a line of others who resemble the suspect<sup>1</sup>. A suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to have a solicitor<sup>2</sup> or friend present, and must be asked to indicate on a second copy of the notice to suspect<sup>3</sup> whether or not he wishes to do so<sup>4</sup>. An identification parade may take place either in a normal room or in one equipped with a screen permitting witnesses to see members of the identification parade without being seen<sup>5</sup>. The procedures for the composition and conduct of the identification parade are the same in both cases<sup>6</sup> (except that an identification parade involving a screen may take place only when the suspect's solicitor, friend or appropriate adult<sup>7</sup> is present or the identification parade is recorded on video<sup>8</sup>).

Before the identification parade takes place, the suspect or his solicitor must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are attending the parade<sup>9</sup>. When a broadcast or publication is made<sup>10</sup>, the suspect or his solicitor should also be allowed to view any material released to the media by the police for the purpose of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided it is practicable to do so and would not unreasonably delay the investigation<sup>11</sup>.

If a prison inmate is required for identification, and there are no security problems about the person leaving the establishment, he may be asked to participate in an identification parade<sup>12</sup>. An identification parade may be held in a prison department establishment but must be conducted, as far as practicable, under normal identification parade rules<sup>13</sup>. Members of the public may make up the identification parade unless there are serious security, or control, objections to their admission to the establishment, in which case, or if a group identification<sup>14</sup> or video identification<sup>15</sup> is arranged within the establishment, other inmates may participate<sup>16</sup>. If an inmate is the suspect, he is not required to wear prison clothing for the identification parade unless the other persons taking part are other inmates in similar clothing, or are members of the public who are prepared to wear prison clothing for the occasion<sup>17</sup>.

Immediately before the identification parade, the suspect must be reminded of the procedures governing its conduct and cautioned<sup>18</sup>. All unauthorised persons must be excluded from the place where the parade is held<sup>19</sup>. Once the parade has been formed, everything afterwards, in respect of it, must take place in the presence and hearing of the suspect and any interpreter, solicitor, friend or appropriate adult who is present (unless the parade involves a screen, in which case everything said to, or by, any witness at the place where the parade is held must be said in the hearing and presence of the suspect's solicitor, friend or appropriate adult or be recorded on video)<sup>20</sup>.

The identification parade must consist of at least eight persons (in addition to the suspect) who, so far as possible, resemble the suspect in age, height, general appearance and position in life<sup>21</sup>. Only one suspect may be included in a parade unless there are two suspects of roughly similar appearance, in which case they may be paraded together with at least 12 other persons<sup>22</sup>. In no circumstances may more than two suspects be included in one parade; and where there are separate parades they must be made up of different persons<sup>23</sup>. If the suspect has an unusual physical feature, for example a facial scar, tattoo or distinctive hairstyle or hair colour which cannot be replicated on other members of the parade, steps may be taken to conceal the location of that feature on the suspect and the other members of the parade (for example, by use of a plaster or a hat, so that all members of the parade resemble each other in general appearance) if the suspect and his solicitor, or appropriate adult, agree<sup>24</sup>.

When all members of a similar group are possible suspects, separate identification parades must be held for each unless there are two suspects of similar appearance when they may appear on the same parade with at least 12 other members of the group who are not suspects<sup>25</sup>. When police officers in uniform form a parade any numerals or other identifying badges must be concealed<sup>26</sup>.

When the suspect is brought to the place where the parade is to be held, he must be asked if he has any objection to the arrangements for the parade or to any of the other participants in it and to state the reasons for the objection; and the suspect may obtain advice from his solicitor, or friend, if present, before the parade proceeds<sup>27</sup>. If the suspect has a reasonable objection to the arrangements or any of the participants, steps must, if practicable, be taken to remove the grounds for objection<sup>28</sup>. When it is not practicable to do so, the suspect must be told why his objections cannot be met, and the objection, the reason given for it and why it cannot be met must be recorded on forms provided for the purpose<sup>29</sup>.

The suspect may select his own position in the line, but may not otherwise interfere with the order of the people forming the line<sup>30</sup>. When there is more than one witness the suspect must be told, after each witness has left the room, that he can, if he wishes, change position in the line<sup>31</sup>. Each position in the line must be clearly numbered, whether by means of a number laid on the floor in front of each parade member or by other means<sup>32</sup>.

Appropriate arrangements must be made to make sure, before witnesses attend the identification parade, that they are not able to:

- 1463 (1) communicate with each other about the case or overhear a witness who has already seen the parade<sup>33</sup>;
- 1464 (2) see any member of the parade<sup>34</sup>;
- 1465 (3) see, or be reminded of, any photograph<sup>35</sup> or description of the suspect or be given any other indication as to the suspect's identity<sup>36</sup>; or
- 1466 (4) see the suspect before or after the parade<sup>37</sup>.

The person conducting a witness to an identification parade must not discuss with him the composition of the parade and, in particular, must not disclose whether a previous witness has made any identification<sup>38</sup>.

Witnesses must be brought in one at a time<sup>39</sup>. Immediately before the witness inspects the parade, he must be told that the person he saw on a specified earlier occasion may, or may not, be present and that if he cannot make a positive identification he should say so<sup>40</sup>. The witness must also be told that he should not make any decision about whether the person he saw is on the parade until he has looked at each member at least twice<sup>41</sup>.

When the officer or police staff<sup>42</sup> conducting the identification procedure is satisfied that the witness has properly looked at each member of the parade, he must ask the witness whether the person he saw on a specified earlier occasion is on the parade and, if so, to indicate the number of the person concerned<sup>43</sup>. If the witness wishes to hear any parade member speak, adopt any specified posture or move, he must first be asked whether he can identify any person or persons on the parade on the basis of appearance only<sup>44</sup>. When the request is to hear members of the parade speak, the witness must be reminded that the participants in the parade have been chosen on the basis of physical appearance only<sup>45</sup>. Members of the parade may then be asked to comply with the witness' request to hear them speak, see them move or adopt any specified posture<sup>46</sup>. If the witness requests that the person whom he has indicated remove anything used to conceal the location of an unusual physical feature<sup>47</sup>, that person may be asked to remove it<sup>48</sup>.

If the witness makes an identification after the identification parade has ended, the suspect and, if present, his solicitor, interpreter or friend must be informed; and consideration should be given to allowing the witness a second opportunity to identify the suspect<sup>49</sup>.

After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs, or any description of suspects relating to the offence and his reply must be recorded<sup>50</sup>.

When the last witness has left, the suspect must be asked whether he wishes to make any comments on the conduct of the parade<sup>51</sup>.

A video recording must normally be taken of the identification parade; and if that is impracticable, a colour photograph must be taken<sup>52</sup>. A copy of the video recording or photograph must be supplied, on request, to the suspect or his solicitor within a reasonable time<sup>53</sup>. If any person is asked to leave a parade because he was interfering with its conduct, the circumstances must be recorded<sup>54</sup>. A record must be made of all those present at a parade whose names are known to the police<sup>55</sup>. If prison inmates make up a parade, the circumstances must be recorded<sup>56</sup>. A record of the conduct of the parade must be made on forms provided for the purpose<sup>57</sup>.

1018. Group identification.

A 'group identification' is when the witness sees the suspect in an informal group of persons<sup>1</sup>. Group identifications must be carried out in accordance with a specified procedure<sup>2</sup>, the purpose of which is to make sure, as far as possible, that group identifications follow the principles and procedures for identification parades<sup>3</sup> so that the conditions are fair to the suspect in the way they test the witness' ability to make an identification<sup>4</sup>.

Group identifications may take place either with the suspect's consent and co-operation or covertly without his consent<sup>5</sup>. The location of the group identification is a matter for the identification officer<sup>6</sup>, although the officer may take into account any representations made by the suspect, appropriate adult<sup>7</sup>, his solicitor<sup>8</sup> or friend<sup>9</sup>. The place where the group identification is held should be one where other persons are either passing by or waiting around informally, in groups such that the suspect is able to join them and be capable of being seen by the witness at the same time as others in the group<sup>10</sup>. If the group identification is to be held covertly, the choice of locations will be limited by the places where the suspect can be found and the number of other persons present at that time<sup>11</sup>.

Although the number, age, sex, race and general description and style of clothing of other persons present at the location cannot be controlled by the identification officer, in selecting the location the officer must consider the general appearance and numbers of persons likely to be present<sup>12</sup>. In particular the officer must reasonably expect that over the period the witness observes the group, he will be able to see, from time to time, a number of others whose appearance is broadly similar to that of the suspect<sup>13</sup>. A group identification need not be held if the identification officer believes, because of the unusual appearance of the suspect, that none of the locations it would be practicable to use satisfy such requirements<sup>14</sup> necessary to make the identification fair<sup>15</sup>.

Immediately after a group identification procedure has taken place (with or without the suspect's consent), a colour photograph<sup>16</sup> or video should be taken<sup>17</sup> of the general scene, if practicable, to give a general impression of the scene and the number of persons present, or, if it is practicable, the group identification may be video recorded<sup>18</sup>. If it is not practicable so to take the photograph or video, a photograph or film<sup>19</sup> of the scene should be taken later at a time determined by the identification officer if he considers it practicable to do so<sup>20</sup>.

Before the group identification takes place, the suspect or his solicitor must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect by any witnesses who are to attend the identification<sup>21</sup>. When a broadcast or publication is made<sup>22</sup>, the suspect or his solicitor should also be allowed to view any material released by the police to the media for the purpose of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided that it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation<sup>23</sup>.

After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence and his reply recorded<sup>24</sup>.

Where the identification takes place with the consent of the suspect:

- 1467 (1) the suspect must be given a reasonable opportunity to have a solicitor or friend present, and must be asked to indicate on a second copy of the notice to suspect<sup>25</sup> whether or not he wishes to do so<sup>26</sup>;
- 1468 (2) the witness, the person carrying out the procedure and the suspect's solicitor, appropriate adult or friend or any interpreter for the witness, may be concealed from the sight of the individuals in the group he is observing, if the person carrying out the procedure considers this assists the conduct of the identification<sup>27</sup>;
- 1469 (3) the person conducting a witness to a group identification must not discuss with him the forthcoming group identification and, in particular, must not disclose whether a previous witness has made any identification<sup>28</sup>;
- 1470 (4) anything said to, or by, the witness during the procedure about the identification should be said in the presence and hearing of those present at the procedure<sup>29</sup>;
- 1471 (5) appropriate arrangements must be made to make sure that, before witnesses attend the group identification, they are not able to communicate with each other about the case or overhear a witness who has already been given an opportunity to see the suspect in the group<sup>30</sup>, or see the suspect<sup>31</sup>, or see, or be reminded of, any photographs or description of the suspect or be given any other indication as to the suspect's identity<sup>32</sup>; and
- 1472 (6) witnesses must be brought one at a time to the place where they are to observe the group<sup>33</sup>.

When the group in which the suspect is to appear is moving (for example, leaving an escalator), then:

- 1473 (a) if two or more suspects consent to a group identification, each should be the subject of separate identification procedures, which may be conducted consecutively on the same occasion<sup>34</sup>;
- 1474 (b) the person conducting the procedure must tell the witness to observe the group and ask him to point out any person he thinks he saw on the specified earlier occasion<sup>35</sup>;
- 1475 (c) once the witness has been so informed, the suspect should be allowed to take whatever position in the group he wishes<sup>36</sup>;
- 1476 (d) when the witness so points out a person he must, if practicable, be asked to take a closer look at the person to confirm the identification; if this is not practicable, or he cannot confirm his identification, he must be asked how sure he is that the person he has indicated is the relevant person<sup>37</sup>; and
- 1477 (e) the witness should continue to observe the group for the period which the person conducting the procedure reasonably believes is necessary in the circumstances for him to be able to make comparisons between the suspect and other individuals of broadly similar<sup>38</sup> appearance to the suspect<sup>39</sup>.

When the group in which the suspect is to appear is stationary (for example, persons waiting in a queue), then:

- 1478 (i) if two or more suspects consent to a group identification, each should be subject to separate identification procedures unless they are of broadly similar appearance when they may appear in the same group; and when separate group identifications are held, the groups must be made up of different persons<sup>40</sup>;
- 1479 (ii) the suspect may take whatever position in the group he wishes; and if there is more than one witness, the suspect must be told, out of the sight and hearing of any witness, that he can, if he wishes, change position in the group<sup>41</sup>;

- 1480 (iii) the witness must be asked to pass along, or amongst, the group and to look at each person in the group at least twice, taking as much care and time as possible according to the circumstances, before making an identification, and once the witness has done this he must be asked whether the person he saw on the specified earlier occasion is in the group and to indicate any such person by whatever means the person conducting the procedure considers appropriate in the circumstances<sup>42</sup>;
- 1481 (iv) when the witness makes an indication, arrangements should be made, if practicable, for the witness to take a closer look at the person to confirm the identification; if this is not practicable, or the witness is unable to confirm the identification, he must be asked how sure he is that the person he has indicated is the relevant person<sup>43</sup>.

In any group identification, if the suspect unreasonably delays joining the group, or having joined the group, deliberately conceals himself from the sight of the witness, this may be treated as a refusal to co-operate in a group identification<sup>44</sup>.

If the witness identifies a person other than the suspect, that person should be informed what has happened and asked if he is prepared to give his name and address, but there is no obligation upon any member of the public to give these details<sup>45</sup>. There is no duty to record any details of any other member of the public present in the group or at the place where the procedure is conducted<sup>46</sup>. When the group identification has been completed, the suspect must be asked whether he wishes to make any comments on the conduct of the procedure<sup>47</sup>; and, if the suspect has not been previously informed, he must be told of any identifications made by the witnesses<sup>48</sup>.

Group identifications held covertly without the suspect's consent should, as far as practicable, follow the rules for conduct of group identification by consent<sup>49</sup>. A suspect has no right to have a solicitor, appropriate adult or friend present as the identification will take place without the knowledge of the suspect<sup>50</sup>. Any number of suspects may be identified at the same time<sup>51</sup>.

Group identifications should take place only in police stations for reasons of safety, security or because it is not practicable to hold them elsewhere<sup>52</sup>. A group identification may take place either in a room equipped with a screen permitting witnesses to see members of the group without being seen, or anywhere else in the police station that the identification officer considers appropriate<sup>53</sup>. Any of the additional safeguards applicable to identification parades should be followed at a group identification in a police station if the identification officer considers it is practicable to do so in the circumstances<sup>54</sup>.

A group identification involving a prison inmate may be arranged only in the prison or at a police station<sup>55</sup>. When a group identification takes place involving a prison inmate, whether in a prison or in a police station, the arrangements should follow those in respect of group identifications in a police station<sup>56</sup>. If a group identification takes place within a prison, other inmates may participate<sup>57</sup>. If an inmate is the suspect, he does not have to wear prison clothing for the group identification unless the other participants are wearing the same clothing<sup>58</sup>.

When a photograph or video is taken<sup>59</sup>, a copy<sup>60</sup> of the photograph or video must be supplied on request to the suspect or his solicitor within a reasonable time<sup>61</sup>. A record of the conduct of the group identification must be made on forms provided for the purpose<sup>62</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1019. Cases when the suspect is known but not available.

1019. Cases when the suspect is known but not available.

When a known suspect is not available or has ceased to be available<sup>1</sup>, the identification officer may make arrangements for a video identification<sup>2</sup>. If necessary, the identification officer<sup>3</sup> may follow the video identification procedures<sup>4</sup> but using still images<sup>5</sup>. Any suitable moving or still images may be used and these may be obtained covertly if necessary<sup>6</sup>. Alternatively, the identification officer may make arrangements for a group identification<sup>7</sup>. These provisions may also be applied to juveniles where the consent of their parent or guardian is either refused or reasonable efforts to obtain that consent have failed<sup>8</sup>. Any covert activity should be strictly limited to that necessary to test the ability of the witness to identify the suspect<sup>9</sup>.

The identification officer may arrange for the suspect to be confronted by the witness if none of the options of video identification, identification parade, group identification or still images<sup>10</sup> is practicable<sup>11</sup>. A 'confrontation' is when the suspect is directly confronted by the witness; it does not require the suspect's consent<sup>12</sup>. Before a confrontation takes place, the witness must be told that the person he saw may, or may not, be the person he is to confront and that if he is not that person, then the witness should say so<sup>13</sup>, and the suspect or his solicitor<sup>14</sup> must be provided with details of the first description of the suspect given by any witness who is to attend<sup>15</sup>.

When a broadcast or publication is made<sup>16</sup>, the suspect or his solicitor should also be allowed to view any material released to the media for the purposes of recognising or tracing the suspect, provided that it is practicable to do so and would not unreasonably delay the investigation<sup>17</sup>.

Force may not be used to make the suspect's face visible to the witness<sup>18</sup>. Confrontation must take place in the presence of the suspect's solicitor, interpreter or friend unless this would cause unreasonable delay<sup>19</sup>. The suspect must be confronted independently by each witness, who must be asked 'Is this the person?'<sup>20</sup>. If the witness identifies the person but is unable to confirm the identification, he must be asked how sure he is that the person is the one he saw on the earlier occasion<sup>21</sup>.

The confrontation should normally take place in the police station, either in a normal room or in one equipped with a screen permitting a witness to see the suspect without being seen<sup>22</sup>. In both cases, the procedures are the same except that a room equipped with a screen may be used only when the suspect's solicitor, friend or appropriate adult<sup>23</sup> is present or the confrontation is recorded on video<sup>24</sup>.

After the procedure, each witness must be asked whether he has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs<sup>25</sup> or any descriptions of suspects relating to the offence and his reply must be recorded<sup>26</sup>.

A record must be made of the confrontation on forms provided for the purpose<sup>27</sup>.

1 See Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 3.4; and PARA 1014 ante. These provisions (ie Code D para 3.21: see the text and notes 2-8 infra) would apply when a known suspect deliberately makes himself 'unavailable' in order to delay or frustrate arrangements for obtaining identification evidence: Code D Guidance note 3D. They also apply when a suspect refuses or fails to take part in a video identification (see PARA 1016 ante), an identification parade (see PARA 1017 ante) or a group identification (see PARA 1018 ante), or refuses or fails to take part in the only practicable options from that list: Code D Guidance note 3D. The process enables any suitable images of the suspect, moving or still, which are available or can be obtained (eg images from custody and other closed circuit television systems and from visually recorded interview records (see Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recording with Sound of Interviews with Suspects Guidance note 2D, which provides that the recording of an interview may be used for an identification purposes)): Code D Guidance note 3D. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/B. IDENTIFICATION BY WITNESS/1020. Showing films and photographs of incidents and information released to the media.

1020. Showing films and photographs of incidents and information released to the media.

Nothing in Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Suspects by Police Officers inhibits showing films or photographs<sup>1</sup> to the public through the national or local media, or to police officers for the purposes of recognition and tracing suspects, but, when such material is shown to potential witnesses, including police officers<sup>2</sup>, to obtain identification evidence, it must be shown on an individual basis to avoid any possibility of collusion, and, as far as possible, the showing must follow the principles for video identification<sup>3</sup> if the suspect is known, or identification by photographs<sup>4</sup> if the suspect is not known<sup>5</sup>.

When a broadcast or publication is so made, a copy of the relevant material released to the media for the purposes of recognising or tracing the suspect must be kept<sup>6</sup>. The suspect or his solicitor<sup>7</sup> must be allowed to view such material before any procedure<sup>8</sup> involving video identification<sup>9</sup>, an identification parade<sup>10</sup>, a group identification<sup>11</sup> or a confrontation<sup>12</sup> is carried out, provided it is practicable and would not unreasonably delay the investigation<sup>13</sup>.

Each witness involved in the procedure must be asked, after he has taken part, whether he has seen any broadcast or published films or photographs relating to the offence or any description of the suspect and his replies must be recorded<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to the meanings of 'films' and 'photographs' see PARA 1011 note 5 ante.

2 Except for the provisions of Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers Annex E para 1 (see PARA 1013 ante), a police officer who is a witness for the purposes of Code D para 3 is subject to the same principles and procedures as a civilian witness: Code D Guidance note 3A.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/C. FINGERPRINTS AND FOOTWEAR IMPRESSIONS/1021. Identification by fingerprints.

C. FINGERPRINTS AND FOOTWEAR IMPRESSIONS

1021. Identification by fingerprints.

Subject to specified exceptions<sup>1</sup> no person's fingerprints<sup>2</sup> may be taken without the appropriate consent<sup>3</sup>. Consent to the taking of a person's fingerprints must be in writing if it is given at a time when he is at a police station<sup>4</sup>.

The fingerprints of a person detained at a police station<sup>5</sup> may be taken without the appropriate consent<sup>6</sup> if he is detained in consequence of his arrest for a recordable offence<sup>7</sup>, or if he has been charged with a recordable offence or informed that he will be reported for such an offence<sup>8</sup>, and he has not had his fingerprints taken in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police<sup>9</sup>. The fingerprints of a person who has answered to bail at a court or police station may be taken without the appropriate consent at the court or station if the court<sup>10</sup>, or an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>11</sup>, authorises them to be taken<sup>12</sup>. Any person's fingerprints may be taken without the appropriate consent if he has been convicted of a recordable offence<sup>13</sup>, he has been given a caution<sup>14</sup> in respect of a recordable offence which, at the time of the caution, he has admitted<sup>15</sup>, or he has been warned or reprimanded for a recordable offence<sup>16</sup>.

If a person has been convicted of, or given a caution, reprimand or warning in respect of<sup>17</sup>, a recordable offence<sup>18</sup>, has not at any time been in police detention for the offence<sup>19</sup> and has not had his fingerprints taken<sup>20</sup> either in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police<sup>21</sup> or since his conviction<sup>22</sup>, any constable may at any time not later than one month after the date of the conviction require him to attend a police station in order that his fingerprints may be taken<sup>23</sup>. Any constable may arrest without warrant a person who has failed to comply with such<sup>24</sup> a requirement<sup>25</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed a constable may take a person's fingerprints without the appropriate consent if he reasonably suspects that the person is committing or attempting to commit an offence, or has committed or attempted to commit an offence<sup>26</sup>, and either the name of the person is unknown to, and cannot be readily ascertained by, the constable<sup>27</sup>, or the constable has reasonable grounds for doubting whether a name furnished by the person as his name is his real name<sup>28</sup>. Fingerprints so taken may be checked against other fingerprints to which the person seeking to check has access and which are held by or on behalf of any one or more relevant law enforcement authorities<sup>29</sup> or which are held in connection with or as a result of an investigation of an offence<sup>30</sup>.

In any of the above cases, other than that of a person answering to bail<sup>31</sup>, where a person's fingerprints are taken without the appropriate consent he must be told the reason before his fingerprints are taken<sup>32</sup> and the reason must be recorded as soon as is practicable after the fingerprints are taken<sup>33</sup>.

If a person's fingerprints are taken at a police station (or, as from a day to be appointed, where they are taken at a place other than a police station on the grounds that the person's identity is in question<sup>34</sup>), whether with or without the appropriate consent, then:

- 1482 (1) before the fingerprints are taken, an officer<sup>35</sup> must inform him that they may be the subject of a speculative search<sup>36</sup>;
- 1483 (2) the fact that the person has been informed of this possibility must be recorded as soon as possible after the fingerprints have been taken<sup>37</sup>; and
- 1484 (3) the person must be informed that if his fingerprints are required to be destroyed, he may witness their destruction<sup>38</sup>.

If a person is detained at a police station when his fingerprints are taken, the reason for taking them must be recorded on his custody record<sup>39</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where a person's fingerprints are taken electronically, they must be taken in such a manner, and using such devices, as the Secretary of State has approved for the purposes of electronic fingerprinting<sup>40</sup>.

The power to take the fingerprints of a person detained at a police station without the appropriate consent is exercisable by any constable<sup>41</sup>.

1 See the text and notes 5-30 infra.

2 'Fingerprints' in relation to any person, means a record (in any form and produced by any method) of the skin pattern and other physical characteristics or features of: (1) any of that person's fingers; or (2) either of his palms: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1) (definition substituted by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 78(8)); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 4.1.

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(1); Code D para 4.2. For the meaning of 'appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante. Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61 (as amended) (see the text and notes 4-41 infra) affects any power conferred by the Immigration Act 1971 s 4, Sch 2 para 18(2) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156), the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 141 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 150) or regulations made under s 144 (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 150) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(9)(a) (amended by the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 169(1), Sch 14 para 80(1), (4))) or applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(9)(b) (substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (7))). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante. Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61 (as amended) applies to a person arrested under an extradition arrest power: s 61(10) (added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 169(3)). 'Extradition arrest power' means any of: a Part 1 warrant (within the meaning given by the Extradition Act 2003 s 2) in respect of which a certificate under s 2 has been issued; s 5; a warrant issued under s 71; and a provisional warrant (ie a warrant issued under s 73(3): see s 216(12)): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1) (definition added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 169(1), (6)). As to the Extradition Act 2003 see EXTRADITION.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(2); Code D para 4.2. A person's fingerprints may be taken, under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27 (see the text and notes 17-25 infra) and s 61, electronically: Code D para 4.5.

5 The words 'detained at' a police station in ibid s 61(3) include a person detained temporarily there after having been remanded in custody by a magistrates' court: R v Seymour [1995] 9 Archbold News 1, CA.

6 A record must as soon as possible be made of the reason for taking a person's fingerprints without consent: Code D para 4.8. Reasonable force may be used, if necessary, to take a person's fingerprints without his consent under the powers in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(3), (4), (4A), (6) (s 61(3), (4) as substituted; s 61(4A) as added) (see the text and notes 7-16 infra): s 117; Code D para 4.6. If force is used, a record must be made of the circumstances and those present: Code D para 4.8.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(3)(a) (s 61(3), (4) substituted, and s 61(5), (7) amended, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 9(1), (2), (4), (5)); Code D para 4.3(a). For these purposes, 'recordable offence' means any offence to which regulations under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27 (as amended) apply: s 118(1); Code D Guidance note 4A. As to recordable offences see PARA 1049 post.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(4)(a) (as substituted: see note 7 supra); Code D para 4.3(b).

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(3)(b), (4)(b) (as substituted: see note 7 supra); Code D para 4.3(a), (b). Where such a person has already had his fingerprints taken in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police, that fact must be disregarded for these purposes if either the fingerprints taken on the previous occasion do not constitute a complete set of his fingerprints (s 61(3A)(a) (s 61(3A), (4A), (4B) added, and s 61(6)(a)-(c) substituted, by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 78(3), (4), (6); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(3A) amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 9(1), (3))) or some or all of the fingerprints taken on the previous occasion are not of sufficient quality to allow satisfactory analysis, comparison or matching (whether in the case in question or generally) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(3A)(b) (as so added and amended)).

In relation to a sample, 'sufficient' and 'insufficient' means sufficient or insufficient (in point of quantity or quality) for the purpose of enabling information to be produced by the means of analysis used or to be used in relation to the sample: s 65(1) (definition added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 58(1), (4); and amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 80(5)(d)). This is subject to the proviso that references in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt V (ss 53-65) (as amended) to a sample's proving insufficient include references to where the sample has become unavailable or insufficient for the purpose of enabling information, or information of a particular description, to be obtained by means of analysis of the sample, as a consequence of either the loss, destruction or contamination of the whole or any part of the sample (s 65(2)(a) (s 65(2) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 80(6)); Code D Guidance note 6B(a)), any damage to the whole or a part of the sample (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(2)(b) (as so added); Code D Guidance note 6B(a)) or the use of the whole or a part of the sample for an analysis which produced no results or which produced results some or all of which must be regarded, in the circumstances, as unreliable (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(2)(c) (as so added); Code D Guidance note 6B(a)). An unsuitable sample is one which, by its nature, is not suitable for a particular form of analysis: Code D Guidance note 6B(b).

10 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(4A)(a) (as added: see note 9 supra); Code D para 4.3(c).

11 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(4A)(b) (as added: see note 9 supra). See PARA 858 ante.

12 An officer may give such an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable: ibid s 61(5) (as amended: see note 7 supra). A court or officer may give such an authorisation only if either the person who has answered to bail has answered to it for a person whose fingerprints were taken on a previous occasion and there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not the same person (s 61(4B)(a) (as added: see note 9 supra); Code D para 4.3(c)(i)) or the person who has answered to bail claims to be a different person from a person whose fingerprints were taken on a previous occasion (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(4B)(b) (as so added); Code D para 4.3(c)(ii)). Where the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(4A) (as added) applies, before any fingerprints are taken, with or without consent, the person must be informed of the grounds on which the relevant authority has been given: Code D para 4.7(b).

13 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(6)(a) (as substituted: see note 9 supra); Code D para 4.3(d)(i).

14 As to cautions see PARA 959 ante.

15 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(6)(b) (as substituted: see note 9 supra); Code D para 4.3(d)(ii).

16 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(6)(c) (as substituted: see note 9 supra); Code D para 4.3(d)(iii). As to reprimands and warnings see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 65 (as amended); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1235.

17 The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(1), (1A) (as added) (see the text and notes 18-23 infra) apply where a person has been given a caution in respect of a recordable offence which, at the time of the caution, he has admitted (s 27(1B)(a) (s 27(1A), (1B) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 78(1))) or where a person has been warned or reprimanded under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 65 (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1235) for a recordable offence (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(1B)(b) (as so added)) as they apply where a person has been convicted of an offence; and references to a conviction are to be construed accordingly (s 27(1B)).

19 Ibid s 27(1)(b); Code D para 4.4(a)(i).

20 Where a person convicted of a recordable offence has already had his fingerprints taken as mentioned in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(1)(c), that fact (together with any time when he has been in police detention for the offence) must be disregarded for these purposes if either the fingerprints taken on the previous occasion do not constitute a complete set of his fingerprints (s 27(1A)(a) (as added: see note 17 supra); Code D para 4.4(a)(ii)) or some or all of the fingerprints taken on the previous occasion are not of sufficient quality to allow satisfactory analysis, comparison or matching (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984

s 27(1A)(b) (as so added); Code D para 4.4(a)(ii)). This provision also applies to a person cautioned, warned or reprimanded as specified in note 17 supra: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(1B) (as so added).

21 Ibid s 27(1)(c)(i); Code D para 4.4(a)(i).

22 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(1)(c)(ii).

23 Ibid s 27(1); Code D para 4.4(a). Such requirement so made must give the person a period of at least seven days within which he must so attend (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(2)(a)) and may direct him so to attend at a specified time of day or between specified times of day (s 27(2)(b)). Every police officer holds the office of constable: see PARA 857 note 2 ante.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/C. FINGERPRINTS AND FOOTWEAR IMPRESSIONS/1022. Impressions of footwear.

1022. Impressions of footwear.

Where a person is detained at a police station<sup>1</sup>, an impression of his footwear may be taken without the appropriate consent<sup>2</sup> only if:

- 1485 (1) he is detained in consequence of his arrest for a recordable offence<sup>3</sup>, or has been charged with a recordable offence, or informed that he will be reported for a recordable offence<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1486 (2) he has not had an impression taken of his footwear in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police<sup>5</sup>.

Subject to this, no impression of a person's footwear may be taken without the appropriate consent<sup>6</sup>. Consent to the taking of an impression of a person's footwear must be in writing if it is given at a time when he is at a police station<sup>7</sup>.

If an impression of a person's footwear is taken at a police station, whether with or without the appropriate consent:

- 1487 (a) before it is taken, an officer must inform him that it may be the subject of a speculative search<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1488 (b) the fact that the person has been informed of this possibility must be recorded as soon as is practicable after the impression has been taken, and if he is detained at a police station, the record must be made on his custody record<sup>9</sup>.

In a case where an impression of a person's footwear is taken<sup>10</sup> without the appropriate consent, he must be told the reason before it is taken<sup>11</sup> and the reason must be recorded on his custody record as soon as is practicable after the impression is taken<sup>12</sup>.

The power to take an impression of the footwear of a person detained at a police station without the appropriate consent is exercisable by any constable<sup>13</sup>.

Before any footwear impression is taken (with or without consent), the person must be informed that if his footwear impressions are required to be destroyed he may witness their destruction<sup>14</sup>.

1 Cf para 1021 note 5 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante. A record must be made as soon as possible of the reason for taking the impression without consent: Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 4.20.

Where a person has already had an impression taken of his footwear in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police, that fact must be disregarded for these purposes if the impression taken previously is incomplete (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61A(4)(a) (as so added)) or is not of sufficient quality to allow satisfactory analysis, comparison or matching (whether in the case in question or generally) (s 61A(4)(b) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'sufficient' see PARA 1021 note 9 ante.

5 Ibid s 61A(3)(b) (as added: see note 4 supra). Reasonable force may be used, if necessary, to take a footwear impression from a detainee without consent under the power in s 61A (as added): Code D para 4.18. If force is used a record must be made of the circumstances and those present: Code D para 4.20.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61A(1) (as added: see note 4 supra). Nothing in s 61A (as added) applies to any person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (s 61A(8)(a) (as so added)) or arrested under an extradition arrest power (s 61A(8)(b) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante. For the meaning of 'extradition arrest power' see PARA 1021 note 3 ante.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/C. FINGERPRINTS AND FOOTWEAR IMPRESSIONS/1023. Searches and examination to ascertain identity.

1023. Searches and examination to ascertain identity.

If an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>1</sup> authorises it, a person who is detained in a police station<sup>2</sup> may be searched or examined, or both:

- 1489 (1) for the purpose of ascertaining whether he has any mark<sup>3</sup> that would tend to identify him as a person involved in the commission of an offence<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1490 (2) for the purpose of facilitating the ascertainment of his identity<sup>5</sup>.

An officer may authorise a search or examination for the purpose of ascertaining whether a person has any mark that would tend to identify him as a person involved in the commission of an offence<sup>6</sup> only if the appropriate consent<sup>7</sup> to a search or examination that would reveal whether the mark in question exists has been withheld<sup>8</sup> or it is not practicable to obtain such consent<sup>9</sup>. In any other case<sup>10</sup>, an officer may give such an authorisation only if the person in question has refused to identify himself<sup>11</sup> or the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that that person is not who he claims to be<sup>12</sup>.

An officer may give an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable<sup>13</sup>.

Any identifying mark<sup>14</sup> found on such a search or examination may be photographed<sup>15</sup> either with the appropriate consent<sup>16</sup> or, if the appropriate consent is withheld or it is not practicable to obtain it, without it<sup>17</sup>.

Where such a search or examination may be carried out, or a photograph may be so taken, the only persons entitled to carry out the search or examination, or to take the photograph, are constables<sup>18</sup>. A person may not carry out such a search or examination of a person of the opposite sex or take a photograph of any part of the body of a person of the opposite sex<sup>19</sup>; and an intimate search<sup>20</sup> may not be carried out<sup>21</sup>.

A photograph taken pursuant to these provisions may be used by, or disclosed to, any person for any purpose related to the prevention or detection of crime<sup>22</sup>, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution<sup>23</sup> by, or on behalf of, police and other law enforcement and prosecuting authorities inside and outside the United Kingdom<sup>24</sup>, and after being so used or disclosed may be retained<sup>25</sup>, but may not be used or disclosed except for a purpose so related<sup>26</sup>.

If it is established that a person is unwilling to co-operate sufficiently to enable a search and/or examination to take place or a suitable photograph to be taken, an officer may use reasonable force to search and/or examine a detainee, and photograph any identifying marks, without his consent<sup>27</sup>.

The thoroughness and extent of any search or examination carried out in accordance with these powers<sup>28</sup> must be no more than the officer considers necessary to achieve the required purpose<sup>29</sup>. Any search or examination which involves the removal of more than the person's outer clothing must be conducted in accordance with Code C: Code of Practice on the Questioning, Treatment and Detention of Persons by Police Officers<sup>30</sup>.

2 Cf para 1021 note 5 ante. Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 3-26 infra) applies to a person arrested under an extradition arrest power: s 54A(13) (s 54A added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 90(1); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(13) added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 169(2)). For the meaning of 'extradition arrest power' see PARA 1021 note 3 ante. A person detained at a police station to be searched under a stop and search power is not a detainee for these purposes: Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 5.1.

3 In the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A (as added and amended), 'mark' includes features and injuries; and a mark is an identifying mark for these purposes if its existence in any person's case facilitates the ascertainment of his identity or his identification as a person involved in the commission of an offence: s 54A(12) (as added: see note 2 supra).

4 Ibid s 54A(1)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.1(a).

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(1)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.1(b). References in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A (as added and amended) to ascertaining a person's identity include references to showing that he is not a particular person: s 54A(11)(a) (as so added).

The conditions in which fingerprints may be taken to assist in establishing a person's identity are described in PARA 1021 ante: Code D Guidance note 5A.

6 Ie a search or examination for the purpose mentioned in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(1)(a) (as added) (see the text and notes 1-4 supra).

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(2)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.2. As to the giving of consent in the case of a juvenile or a mentally disordered person see Code D para 2.12; and PARA 1010 ante.

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(2)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.2. Examples of when it would not be practicable to obtain a detainee's consent to a search, examination or the taking of a photograph of an identifying mark include:

392 (1) when the person is drunk or otherwise unfit to give consent (Code D Guidance note 5D(a));

393 (2) when there are reasonable grounds to suspect that if the person became aware a search or examination was to take place or an identifying mark was to be photographed, he would take steps to prevent this happening (eg by violently resisting, covering or concealing the mark etc) and it would not otherwise be possible to carry out the search or examination or to photograph any identifying mark (Code D Guidance note 5D(b));

394 (3) in the case of a juvenile, if the parent or guardian cannot be contacted in sufficient time to allow the search or examination to be carried out or the photograph to be taken (Code D Guidance note 5D(c)).

10 Ie a case in which the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(2) (as added) (see the text and notes 6-9 supra) does not apply.

11 Ibid s 54A(3)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.3.

13 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(4) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.8. A separate authority is required for each purpose referred to in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(1) (as added) which applies: Code D para 5.8.

14 Any marks that assist in establishing the detainee's identity, or his identification as a person involved in the commission of an offence, are identifying marks: Code D para 5.4.

15 In the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A (as added and amended), references to 'taking a photograph' include references to using any process by means of which a visual image may be produced; and references to 'photographing' a person are to be construed accordingly: s 54A(11)(b) (as so added). For the meaning of 'photograph' for the purposes of Code D see PARA 1011 note 5 ante; and as to 'taking a photograph' for those purposes see PARA 1017 note 52 ante.

19 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(7) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.5.

20 For the meaning of 'intimate search' see PARA 1007 note 9 ante.

21 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(8) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.11.

22 The reference to 'crime' includes a reference to any conduct which constitutes one or more criminal offences (whether under the law of a part of the United Kingdom or of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(10)(a)(i) (as added: see note 2 supra)) or is, or corresponds to, any conduct which, if it all took place in any one part of the United Kingdom, would constitute one or more criminal offences (s 54A(10)(a)(ii) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

Examples of purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions include:

- 395 (1) checking the photograph against other photographs held in records or in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence to establish whether the person is liable to arrest for other offences (Code D Guidance note 5B(a));
- 396 (2) when the person is arrested at the same time as other persons, or at a time when it is likely that other persons will be arrested, using the photograph to help establish who was arrested, at what time and where (Code D Guidance note 5B(b));
- 397 (3) when the real identity of the person is not known and cannot be readily ascertained or there are reasonable grounds for doubting a name and other personal details given by the person are his real name and personal details (in these circumstances, using or disclosing the photograph to help to establish or verify a person's real identity or determine whether he is liable to arrest for some other offence, eg by checking it against other photographs held in records or in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence) (Code D Guidance note 5B(c));
- 398 (4) when it appears that any procedure relating to identification by witnesses may need to be arranged for which the person's photograph would assist (Code D Guidance note 5B(d));
- 399 (5) when the person's release without charge may be required, and if the release is: (a) on bail to appear at a police station, using the photograph to help verify the person's identity when he answers his bail and if the person does not answer his bail, to assist in arresting him (Code D Guidance note 5B(e)(i)); or (b) without bail, using the photograph to help verify his identity or assist in locating him for the purposes of serving him with a summons to appear at court in criminal proceedings (Code D Guidance note 5B(e)(ii));
- 400 (6) when the person has answered to bail at a police station and there are reasonable grounds for doubting he is the person who was previously granted bail, using the photograph to help establish or verify his identity (Code D Guidance note 5B(f));
- 401 (7) when the person arrested on a warrant claims to be a different person from the person named on the warrant and a photograph would help to confirm or disprove his claim (Code D Guidance note 5B(g)); and
- 402 (8) when the person has been charged with, reported for, or convicted of, a recordable offence and his photograph is not already on record as a result of heads (1)-(6) supra or his photograph is on record but his appearance has changed since it was taken and the person has not yet been released or brought before a court (Code D Guidance note 5B(h)).

23 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(9)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra); Code D para 5.6. References to an investigation and to a prosecution include references, respectively, to any investigation outside the United Kingdom of any crime or suspected crime and to a prosecution brought in respect of any crime in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(10)(b)

(as so added). For examples of purposes related to the investigation of offences or the conduct of prosecutions see note 22 supra.

24 Code D para 5.6.

25 The powers of retention in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 54A(1) (a added) do not affect any separate requirement under the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 to retain material in connection with criminal investigations: Code D para 5.7.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/D. EXAMINATIONS TO ESTABLISH IDENTITY AND THE TAKING OF PHOTOGRAPHS/(A) Persons Other than those Voluntarily at Police Stations who are not Detainees/1024. Photographing of suspects.

D. EXAMINATIONS TO ESTABLISH IDENTITY AND THE TAKING OF PHOTOGRAPHS

(A) PERSONS OTHER THAN THOSE VOLUNTARILY AT POLICE STATIONS WHO ARE NOT DETAINEES

1024. Photographing of suspects.

A person who is detained at a police station<sup>1</sup> (or, under certain circumstances, who is not<sup>2</sup>) may be photographed<sup>3</sup> either with the appropriate consent<sup>4</sup> or, if the appropriate consent is withheld or it is not practicable to obtain it<sup>5</sup>, without it<sup>6</sup>.

A person proposing so to take<sup>7</sup> a photograph of any person:

- 1491 (1) may, for the purpose of doing so, require the removal of any item or substance worn on or over the whole or any part of the head or face of the person to be photographed<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1492 (2) if the requirement is not complied with, may remove the item or substance himself<sup>9</sup>.

If it is established that the detainee is unwilling to co-operate sufficiently to enable a suitable photograph to be taken and it is not reasonably practicable to take the photograph covertly, an officer may use reasonable force to take the person's photograph without his consent<sup>10</sup> and, for the purpose of taking the photograph, remove any item or substance worn on, or over, all, or any part of, the person's head or face which he has failed to remove when asked<sup>11</sup>.

Where a photograph may be so taken, the only persons entitled to take the photograph are constables<sup>12</sup>.

A photograph so taken:

- 1493 (a) may be used by, or disclosed to, any person for any purpose related to the prevention or detection of crime<sup>13</sup>, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution<sup>14</sup> or the enforcement of a sentence<sup>15</sup>; and
- 1494 (b) after being so used or disclosed, may be retained but may not be used or disclosed except for a purpose so related<sup>16</sup>.

A photograph may be obtained<sup>17</sup> without the person's consent by making a copy of an image of him taken at any time on a camera system installed anywhere in the police station<sup>18</sup>.

Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(7) added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 169(1), (5)). For the meaning of 'extradition arrest power' see PARA 1021 note 3 ante.

2 The circumstances are that the person has been:

- 403 (1) arrested by a constable for an offence (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(a) (s 64A as added (see note 1 supra); and s 64A(1A), (1B), (4)(c) added, and s 64A(4)(a) amended, by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 116(1)-(4)); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 5.12(b)(i));
- 404 (2) taken into custody by a constable after being arrested for an offence by a person other than a constable (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(b) (as so added); Code D para 5.12(b)(ii));
- 405 (3) made subject to a requirement to wait with a community support officer under the Police Reform Act 2002 Sch 4 para 2(3) or Sch 4 para 2(3B) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(c) (as so added); Code D para 5.12(b)(iii));
- 406 (4) given a penalty notice by a constable in uniform under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 1 Ch 1 (ss 1-11) (on the spot penalties for disorderly behaviour: see PARAS 587-589 ante), a penalty notice by a constable under the Education Act 1996 s 444A (as added and amended) (penalty notice in respect of failure to secure regular school attendance: see EDUCATION vol 15(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 523), or a fixed penalty notice by a constable in uniform under the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 54 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1097) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(d) (as so added); Code D para 5.12(b)(iv));
- 407 (5) given a notice in relation to a relevant fixed penalty offence (within the meaning of the Police Reform Act 2002 Sch 4 para 1: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529) by a community support officer by virtue of a designation applying Sch 4 para 1 to him (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(e) (as so added); Code D para 5.12(b)(v)); or
- 408 (6) given a notice in relation to a relevant fixed penalty offence (within the meaning of the Police Reform Act 2002 Sch 5 para 1: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 533) by an accredited person by virtue of accreditation specifying that Sch 5 para 1 applies to him (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1B)(f) (as so added); Code D para 5.12(b)(vi)).

3 In the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A (as added), a 'photograph' includes a moving image, and corresponding expressions are to be construed accordingly (s 64A(6A) (s 64A as added (see note 1 supra); and s 64A(6A) added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 116(1), (5)); and references to 'taking a photograph' include references to using any process by means of which a visual image may be produced, and references to photographing a person are to be construed accordingly (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(6) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'photograph' for the purposes of Code D see PARA 1011 note 5 ante; and as to 'taking a photograph' for those purposes see PARA 1017 note 52 ante. The officer proposing to take a detainee's photograph may, for this purpose, require the person to remove any item or substance worn on, or over, all, or any part of, his head or face: Code D para 5.13. If he does not comply with such a requirement, the officer may remove the item or substance: Code D para 5.13.

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1)(a), (1A)(a) (as added: see notes 1, 2 supra); Code D paras 5.12(a), (b), 5.12A(a). For the meaning of 'the appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante. As to the giving of consent in the case of a juvenile or a mentally disordered person see Code D para 2.12; and PARA 1010 ante.

5 Examples of when it would not be practicable to obtain the person's consent to a photograph being taken include:

- 409 (1) when the person is drunk or otherwise unfit to give consent (Code D Guidance note 5E(a));
- 410 (2) when there are reasonable grounds to suspect that if the person became aware that a photograph, suitable to be used or disclosed for the use and disclosure to any person for any purpose related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution (as to which see PARA 1023 note 22 ante), was to be taken, he would take steps to prevent it being taken (eg by violently resisting, covering or distorting his face etc) and it would not otherwise be possible to take a suitable photograph (Code D Guidance note 5E(b));
- 411 (3) when, in order to obtain a suitable photograph, it is necessary to take it covertly (Code D Guidance note 5E(c)); and 412 (4) in the case of a juvenile, if the parent or guardian cannot be contacted in sufficient time to allow the photograph to be taken (Code D Guidance note 5E(d)).

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64A(1)(b), (1A)(b) (as added: see notes 1, 2 supra); Code D paras 5.12(a), (b), 5.12A(a).

EXAMINATIONS TO ESTABLISH IDENTITY AND THE TAKING OF PHOTOGRAPHS/(A) Persons Other than those Voluntarily at Police Stations who are not Detainees/1025. Information to be given; records.

1025. Information to be given; records.

When a person is to be searched or examined<sup>1</sup>, or photographed<sup>2</sup>, or where his photograph is obtained without his consent by making a copy of an image<sup>3</sup>, he must be informed of:

- 1495 (1) the purpose of the search, examination or photograph<sup>4</sup>;
- 1496 (2) the grounds on which the relevant authority, if applicable, has been given<sup>5</sup>;
and
- 1497 (3) the purposes for which the photograph may be used, disclosed or retained<sup>6</sup>.

This information must be given before the search or examination commences or the photograph is taken, unless the photograph is to be taken covertly<sup>7</sup> or obtained without the person's consent by making a copy of an image, in which case the person must be informed as soon as practicable after the photograph is taken or obtained<sup>8</sup>.

A record must be made when a detainee is searched, examined, or a photograph of the person, or any identifying marks found on him, are taken<sup>9</sup>. The record must include:

- 1498 (a) the identity<sup>10</sup> of the officer carrying out the search or examination or taking the photograph<sup>11</sup>;
- 1499 (b) the purpose of the search, examination or photograph and the outcome<sup>12</sup>;
- 1500 (c) the detainee's consent to the search, examination or photograph, or the reason the person was searched, examined or photographed without consent<sup>13</sup>;
- 1501 (d) the giving of any authority<sup>14</sup>, the grounds for giving it and the authorising officer<sup>15</sup>.

If force is used when searching, examining or taking a photograph in accordance with these provisions, a record must be made of the circumstances and those present<sup>16</sup>.

(B) PERSONS VOLUNTARILY AT POLICE STATIONS WHO ARE NOT DETAINEES

1026. Examinations and photograph-taking.

When there are reasonable grounds for suspecting the involvement of a person in a criminal offence, but that person is at a police station voluntarily and is not detained, the provisions relating to the searching, examination and photographing of detainees<sup>1</sup> apply subject to modifications reflecting the fact that the person in question is not detained<sup>2</sup>.

Where a person is at a police station voluntarily and is not detained, force may not be used to:

- 1502 (1) search and/or examine him either to discover whether he has any marks that would tend to identify him as a person involved in the commission of an offence<sup>3</sup> or to establish his identity<sup>4</sup>;
- 1503 (2) take photographs<sup>5</sup> of any identifying marks<sup>6</sup>; or
- 1504 (3) take a photograph of the person<sup>7</sup>.

The photographs or images of persons not detained, or of their identifying marks, must be destroyed<sup>8</sup> (together with any negatives and copies<sup>9</sup>) unless the person:

- 1505 (a) is charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, a recordable offence<sup>10</sup>;
- 1506 (b) is prosecuted for a recordable offence<sup>11</sup>;
- 1507 (c) is cautioned for a recordable offence or given a warning or reprimand<sup>12</sup> for a recordable offence<sup>13</sup>; or
- 1508 (d) gives informed consent, in writing, for the photograph or image to be retained<sup>14</sup>.

When the destruction of any photograph or image is required<sup>15</sup>, the person must be given an opportunity to witness the destruction or to have a certificate confirming the destruction provided that he so requests the certificate within five days of being informed that the destruction is required<sup>16</sup>.

E. IDENTIFICATION BY BODY SAMPLES

1027. Intimate samples, non-intimate samples and skin impressions.

'Intimate sample' means:

- 1509 (1) a sample of blood, semen or any other tissue fluid, urine or pubic hair<sup>1</sup>;
- 1510 (2) a dental impression<sup>2</sup>;
- 1511 (3) a swab taken from any part of a person's genitals (including pubic hair) or from a person's body orifice other than the mouth<sup>3</sup>.

'Non-intimate sample' means:

- 1512 (a) a sample of hair other than pubic hair<sup>4</sup>;
- 1513 (b) a sample taken from a nail or from under a nail<sup>5</sup>;
- 1514 (c) a swab taken from any part of a person's body other than a part from which a swab would be an intimate sample<sup>6</sup>;
- 1515 (d) saliva<sup>7</sup>;
- 1516 (e) a skin impression<sup>8</sup>.

'Skin impression', in relation to any person, means any record (other than a fingerprint) which is a record (in any form and produced by any method) of the skin pattern and other physical characteristics or features of the whole or any part of his foot or of any other part of his body<sup>9</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/E. IDENTIFICATION BY BODY SAMPLES/1028. Taking intimate samples.

1028. Taking intimate samples.

An intimate sample<sup>1</sup> may<sup>2</sup> be taken from a person in police detention<sup>3</sup> only:

- 1517 (1) if a police officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>4</sup> authorises it to be taken<sup>5</sup>;
- 1518 (2) if the appropriate consent<sup>6</sup> is given<sup>7</sup>.

An intimate sample may be taken from a person who is not in police detention but from whom, in the course of the investigation of an offence, two or more non-intimate samples<sup>8</sup> suitable for the same means of analysis<sup>9</sup> have been taken which have proved insufficient<sup>10</sup>:

- 1519 (a) if a police officer of at least the rank of inspector authorises it to be taken<sup>11</sup>;
and
- 1520 (b) if the appropriate consent is given<sup>12</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions prevents samples being taken for elimination purposes with the consent of the person concerned<sup>13</sup>.

An officer may give an authorisation<sup>14</sup> only if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting the involvement of the person from whom the sample is to be taken in a recordable offence<sup>15</sup> and for believing that the sample will tend to confirm or disprove his involvement<sup>16</sup>. An officer may give such an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable<sup>17</sup>. The appropriate consent must be given in writing<sup>18</sup>.

Where such an authorisation has been given<sup>19</sup> and it is proposed that an intimate sample be taken in pursuance thereof<sup>20</sup>, an officer must inform the person from whom the sample is to be taken of the giving of the authorisation<sup>21</sup> and the grounds for giving it<sup>22</sup>.

If an intimate sample is taken from a person:

- 1521 (i) the authorisation by virtue of which it was taken<sup>23</sup>;
- 1522 (ii) the grounds for giving the authorisation<sup>24</sup>; and
- 1523 (iii) the fact that the appropriate consent was given<sup>25</sup>, must be recorded as soon as is practicable after the sample is taken<sup>26</sup>. If an intimate sample is taken from a person at a police station, before the sample is taken an officer must inform the person that it may be the subject of a speculative search<sup>27</sup>; and the fact that the person has been informed of this possibility must be recorded as soon as practicable after the sample has been taken<sup>28</sup>.

An intimate sample which is a dental impression may be taken from a person only by a registered dentist<sup>29</sup>. In the case of any other form of intimate sample, except a sample of urine, the sample may be taken from a person only by a registered medical practitioner<sup>30</sup> or a registered health care professional<sup>31</sup>.

Where the appropriate consent to the taking of an intimate sample from a person was refused without good cause, in any proceedings against that person for an offence the court, in determining either whether there is a case to answer<sup>32</sup> or (until a day to be appointed) whether to commit the person for trial<sup>33</sup>, may draw such inferences from the refusal as appear proper. A judge may also draw such inferences in deciding whether to grant an application<sup>34</sup> for dismissal<sup>35</sup>; and a court or jury may draw them in determining whether that person is guilty of the offence charged<sup>36</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'intimate sample' see PARA 1027 ante. Before a suspect is asked to provide an intimate sample under these provisions he must be warned that if he refuses without good cause his refusal may harm his case if it comes to trial: Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers para 6.3. In warning a person who is asked to provide an intimate sample, the following form of words may be used: 'You do not have to provide this sample/allow this swab or impression to be taken, but I must warn you that if you refuse without good cause, your refusal may harm your case if it comes to trial.': Code D Guidance note 6D. If the suspect is in police detention and not legally represented, he must also be reminded of his entitlement to have free legal advice (see Code C: Code of Practice for the Questioning, Treatment and Detention of Persons by Police Officers para 6.5; and PARA 953 ante) and the reminder must be noted in the custody record: Code D para 6.3. If the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(1A) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 8-12 infra) applies and the person is attending a police station voluntarily, his entitlement to free legal advice as in Code C para 3.21 (see PARA 909 ante) must be explained to him: Code D para 6.3. A record must be made of a warning given as required by Code D para 6.3: Code D para 6.11.

2 ie subject to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B (as added and amended) (see PARA 1031 post).

6 For the meaning of 'the appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante.

7 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(1)(b); Code D para 6.2(a)(ii). Nothing in the provisions relating to the taking of intimate samples (ie the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62 (as amended)) applies to:

413 (1) the taking of a specimen for the purposes of any of the provisions for requiring and taking samples of breath, blood and urine in relation to driving offences etc when under the influence of drink or drugs or excess alcohol under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 4-11 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 975 et seq) or the Transport and Works Act 1992 ss 26-38 (as amended) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 377 et seq; ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1626) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(11) (amended by the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 4, Sch 3 para 27(4); and by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 53(2))); or 414 (2) a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(12) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(2), Sch 10 para 62(4)(a); and substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (8)).

For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante.

Where any power to take a sample is exercisable in relation to a person the sample may be taken in a prison or other institution to which the Prison Act 1952 (see PRISONS) applies: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(3) (s 63A added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 56).

8 For the meaning of 'non-intimate sample' see PARA 1027 ante. These provisions (ie the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(1A) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 8-12 infra)) do not apply where the non-intimate samples were taken under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 10 (see PARA 421 ante); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(12) (as added and substituted: see note 7 supra); Code D Guidance note 6C.

9 In relation to a skin impression, 'analysis' includes comparison and matching: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1) (definition added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 80(5)(a)).

The duty imposed by s 62(5)(ii) includes a duty to state the nature of the offence in which it is suspected that the person from whom the sample is to be taken has been involved: s 62(6). Before any intimate sample is taken with consent, the person must be informed of the reason for taking the sample (Code D para 6.8(a)), of the grounds on which the relevant authority has been given (Code D para 6.8(b)), and that the sample or information derived from it may be retained and the subject of a speculative search, unless its destruction is required (see PARA 1039 post) (Code D para 6.8(c)). A record must be made of the fact that a person has been informed that samples may be the subject of a speculative search: Code D para 6.12. See also Code D Guidance note 4B; and PARA 1021 note 36 ante. As to speculative searches see PARA 1038 post.

If an intimate sample is taken from a person detained at a police station, the matters required to be recorded by s 62(7), (7A) (as added) (see the text and note 27 infra) must be recorded in his custody record: s 62(8) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 Sch 10 para 57(b)). A record of the reasons for taking a sample or impression and, if applicable, of its destruction must be made as soon as practicable; and if written consent is given to the taking of a sample or impression, the fact must be recorded in writing: Code D para 6.10.

- 30 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(9A)(a) (as added: see note 29 supra); Code D para 6.4. As to registered medical practitioners see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 4.
- 31 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 62(9A)(b) (as added: see note 29 supra); Code D para 6.4. 'Registered health care professional' means a person (other than a medical practitioner) who is either a registered nurse or a registered member of a health care profession which is designated for these purposes by an order made by the Secretary of State: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1) (definition added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 54(2)). See the Registered Health Care Profession (Designation) Order 2003, SI 2003/2461, which designates the profession of paramedics for this purpose. As to the registration of nurses see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 716 et seq. For these purposes, a 'health care profession' is any profession mentioned in the Health Act 1999 s 60(2) (as amended) (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 291), other than the profession of practising medicine and the profession of nursing: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1A) (s 65(1A), (1B) added by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 54(3)). An order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 65(1) (as amended) must be made by statutory instrument and is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 65(1B) (as so added).

When clothing needs to be removed in circumstances likely to cause embarrassment to the person, no person of the opposite sex who is not a registered medical practitioner or registered health care professional may be present (unless in the case of a juvenile, mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable person, that person specifically requests the presence of an appropriate adult of the opposite sex who is readily available), nor may there be present any person whose presence is unnecessary: Code D para 6.9. However, in the case of a juvenile, this is subject to the overriding proviso that such a removal of clothing may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the juvenile signifies, in his presence, that he prefers the adult's absence and the adult agrees: Code D para 6.9. For the meanings of 'mentally vulnerable' and 'appropriate adult', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', see PARA 940 note 9 ante.

1029. Non-intimate samples.

Non-intimate samples<sup>1</sup> may not in general<sup>2</sup> be taken from a person without the appropriate consent<sup>3</sup>. Consent to the taking of a non-intimate sample must be given in writing<sup>4</sup>.

A non-intimate sample may be taken from a person without the appropriate consent if:

- 1524 (1) he is in police detention<sup>5</sup> in consequence of his arrest for a recordable offence<sup>6</sup> and either he has not had a non-intimate sample of the same type and from the same part of the body taken in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police<sup>7</sup> or he has had such a sample taken but it proved insufficient<sup>8</sup>;
- 1525 (2) he is being held in custody by the police on the authority of a court<sup>9</sup> and an officer of at least the rank of inspector<sup>10</sup> authorises it to be taken without the appropriate consent<sup>11</sup> (provided that an officer may give such an authorisation only if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting the involvement of the person from whom the sample is to be taken in a recordable offence<sup>12</sup> and for believing that the sample will tend to confirm or disprove his involvement<sup>13</sup>);
- 1526 (3) whether or not he is in police detention or held in custody by the police on the authority of a court, he has been charged with a recordable offence or informed that he will be reported for such an offence<sup>14</sup> and either he has not had a non-intimate sample taken from him in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police or he has had a non-intimate sample taken from him but either it was not suitable for the same means of analysis<sup>15</sup> or, though so suitable, the sample proved insufficient<sup>16</sup>;
- 1527 (4) he has been convicted of a recordable offence<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1528 (5) he is a person detained following acquittal on grounds of insanity or finding of unfitness to plead<sup>18</sup>.

Where by virtue of these provisions<sup>19</sup> a sample is taken from a person without the appropriate consent he must be told the reason before the sample is taken<sup>20</sup> and the reason must be recorded as soon as practicable after the sample is taken<sup>21</sup>. The power to take a non-intimate sample from a person without the appropriate consent is exercisable by any constable<sup>22</sup>, who may, if necessary, use reasonable force<sup>23</sup>.

If a non-intimate sample is taken from a person at a police station, whether with or without the appropriate consent, before the sample is taken an officer must inform him that it may be the subject of a speculative search<sup>24</sup> and the fact that the person has been informed of this possibility must be recorded as soon as practicable after the sample has been taken<sup>25</sup>.

Where a sample of hair other than pubic hair is to be taken, the sample may be taken either by cutting hairs or by plucking hairs with their roots so long as no more are plucked than the person taking the sample reasonably considers to be necessary for a sufficient sample<sup>26</sup>. When hair samples are taken for the purpose of DNA analysis (rather than for other purposes such as making a visual match), the suspect should be permitted a reasonable choice as to what part of the body the hairs are taken from<sup>27</sup>. When hairs are plucked, they should be plucked individually, unless the suspect prefers otherwise and no more should be plucked than the person taking them reasonably considers necessary for a sufficient sample<sup>28</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed it is provided that where a non-intimate sample consisting of a skin impression is taken electronically from a person, it must be taken only in such manner, and using such devices, as the Secretary of State has approved for the purpose of the electronic taking of such an impression<sup>29</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'non-intimate sample' see PARA 1027 ante.

2 The exceptions to the general prohibition are set out in the text and notes 5-18 infra.

3 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(1); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers paras 6.5, 6.6(a). For the meaning of 'the appropriate consent' see PARA 1007 note 16 ante. Nothing in the provisions relating to the taking of non-intimate samples (ie the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63 (as amended) (see the text and notes 4-25 infra)) applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(10) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(2), Sch 10 para 62(4)(b); and substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (9))) or to a person arrested under an extradition arrest power (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(11) (added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 169(1), (4))). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante. For the meaning of 'extradition arrest power' see PARA 1021 note 3 ante.

Where any power to take a sample is exercisable in relation to a person the sample may be taken in a prison or other institution to which the Prison Act 1952 (see PRISONS) applies: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(3) (s 63A added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 56).

4 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(2); Code D paras 6.5, 6.6(a). If written consent is given to the taking of a sample or impression, the fact must be recorded in writing: Code D para 6.10.

11 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 80(1)); Code D para 6.6(aa)(ii). An officer may give such an authorisation orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as is practicable: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(5). An officer may not give an authorisation for the taking from any person of a non-intimate sample consisting of a skin impression if a skin impression of the same part of the body has already been taken from that person in the course of the investigation of the offence (s 63(5A)(a) (s 63(5A) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 80(3))) and the impression previously taken is not one that has proved insufficient (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(5A)(b) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'skin impression' see PARA 1027 ante.

Where an authorisation has been given (s 63(6)(a)) and it is proposed that a non-intimate sample be taken in pursuance of it (s 63(6)(b)), an officer must inform the person from whom the sample is to be taken of the giving of the authorisation (s 63(6)(i)) and of the grounds for giving it (s 63(6)(ii)). The duty imposed by s 63(6)(ii) includes a duty to state the nature of the offence in which it is suspected that the person from whom the sample is to be taken has been involved: s 63(7). If a non-intimate sample is taken from a person by virtue of s 63(3), the authorisation by virtue of which it was taken (s 63(8)(a)), and the grounds for giving it (s 63(8)(b)), must be recorded as soon as practicable after the sample is taken (s 63(8)). If a non-intimate sample is taken from a person detained at a police station, the matters required to be recorded by s 63(8) must be recorded in his custody record: s 63(9). 16 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3A)(b) (as added: see note 14 supra); Code D para 6.6(b)(i), (ii).

17 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3B) (as added: see note 14 supra); Code D para 6.6(c). This does not apply to any person convicted before 10 April 1995 unless he is a person to whom the Criminal Evidence (Amendment) Act 1997 s 1 (as amended) (persons imprisoned or detained by virtue of pre-existing conviction for sexual offence) applies: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(9A) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 55(1), (6); and renumbered and substituted by the Criminal Evidence (Amendment) Act 1997 s 1(2)).

Where the power to take a non-intimate sample under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3B) (as added) is exercisable in relation to any person who is detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt III (ss 35-55) (as amended) in pursuance of a hospital order or interim hospital order made following his conviction for the recordable offence in question (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(3A)(a)(i) (s 63A as added (see note 3 supra); and s 63A(3A), (3B) added by the Criminal Evidence (Amendment) Act 1997 s 3)) or a transfer direction given at a time when he was detained in pursuance of any sentence or order imposed following that conviction (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(3A)(a)(ii) (as so added)), the sample may be taken in the hospital where he is so detained (s 63A(3A)(a) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'hospital' see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 417; for the meanings of 'hospital order' and 'interim hospital order' see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 491; and for the meaning of 'transfer direction' see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 535 (definitions applied by s 63A(3A) (as so added)). Where the power to take a non-intimate sample under s 63(3B) (as added) (see the text and note 17 supra) is exercisable in relation to a person detained in pursuance of directions of the Secretary of State under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 92 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 81), the sample may be taken at the place where he is so detained: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(3B) (as so added; and amended by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 97).

18 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3C) (added by the Criminal Evidence (Amendment) Act 1997 s 2(2)(b)). A person subject to such detention or finding is a person to whom the Criminal Evidence (Amendment) Act 1997 s 2 applies: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(3C) (as so added). Where the power to take a non-intimate sample under s 63(3C) (as added) is exercisable in relation to any person the sample may be taken in the hospital where he is so detained: s 63A(3A)(b) (as added: see notes 3, 17 supra).

25 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63(8B)(b) (as added: see note 24 supra). If a non-intimate sample is taken from a person detained at a police station, the reason must be recorded in his custody record: s 63(9) (as amended: see note 21 supra).

Before any non-intimate sample is taken, with or without consent, the person must be informed of the reason for taking the sample (Code D para 6.8(a)), of the grounds on which the relevant authority has been given (Code D para 6.8(b)), and that the sample or information derived from the sample may be retained and the subject of a speculative search, unless its destruction (see Code D Annex F Pt A; and PARA 1039 post) is required: Code D para 6.8(c). A record must be made of the fact that a person has been so informed: Code D para 6.12. For the meaning of 'speculative search' see PARA 1021 note 36 ante. As to the making of speculative searches generally see PARA 1038 post. As to the retention and use of samples taken with consent for elimination purposes see Code D Annex F; and PARA 1040 post. 27 Code D Guidance note 6A. When clothing needs to be removed in circumstances likely to cause embarrassment to the person, no person of the opposite sex who is not a registered medical practitioner or registered health care professional may be present, (unless in the case of a juvenile, mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable person, that person specifically requests the presence of an appropriate adult of the opposite sex who is readily available), nor may there be present any person whose presence is unnecessary: Code D para 6.9. However, in the case of a juvenile, this is subject to the overriding proviso that such a removal of clothing may take place in the absence of the appropriate adult only if the juvenile signifies, in his presence, that he prefers the adult's absence and the adult agrees: Code D para 6.9. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/E. IDENTIFICATION BY BODY SAMPLES/1030. Taking of intimate and non-intimate samples from persons not in custody.

1030. Taking of intimate and non-intimate samples from persons not in custody.

Any constable may, within the allowed period, require a person who is neither in police detention<sup>1</sup> nor held in custody by the police on the authority of a court to attend a police station in order to have a sample taken where:

- 1529 (1) the person has been charged with a recordable offence<sup>2</sup> or informed that he will be reported for such an offence and either he has not had a sample taken from him in the course of the investigation of the offence by the police or he has had a sample so taken from him but it was not suitable for the same means of analysis<sup>3</sup> or, though so suitable, the sample proved insufficient<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1530 (2) the person has been convicted of a recordable offence and either he has not had a sample taken from him since the conviction or he has had a sample taken from him (before or after his conviction) but it was not suitable for the same means of analysis or, though so suitable, the sample proved insufficient<sup>5</sup>.

The period allowed for requiring a person so to attend a police station for such purpose is:

- 1531 (a) in the case of a person falling within head (1) above, one month beginning with the date of the charge or of his being informed as mentioned in head (1) above or one month beginning with the date on which the appropriate officer<sup>6</sup> is informed of the fact that the sample is not suitable for the same means of analysis or has proved insufficient, as the case may be<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1532 (b) in the case of a person falling within head (2) above, one month beginning with the date of the conviction or one month beginning with the date on which the appropriate officer<sup>8</sup> is informed of the fact that the sample is not suitable for the same means of analysis or has proved insufficient, as the case may be<sup>9</sup>.

Any such requirement must give the person at least seven days within which he must so attend<sup>10</sup> and may direct a person to attend at a specified time of day or between specified times of day<sup>11</sup>.

Any constable may arrest without a warrant a person who has failed to comply with any such requirement<sup>12</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/F. DRUG TESTING/1031. Testing for presence of Class A drugs.

F. DRUG TESTING

1031. Testing for presence of Class A drugs.

A sample of urine or a non-intimate sample<sup>1</sup> may be taken from a person in police detention<sup>2</sup> for the purpose of ascertaining whether he has any specified<sup>3</sup> Class A drug<sup>4</sup> in his body<sup>5</sup> if:

- 1533 (1) either the arrest condition<sup>6</sup> or the charge condition<sup>7</sup> is met<sup>8</sup>;
- 1534 (2) both the age condition<sup>9</sup> and the request condition<sup>10</sup> are met<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1535 (3) the notification condition<sup>12</sup> is met in relation to the arrest condition, the charge condition or the age condition (as the case may be)<sup>13</sup>.

Before requesting the person concerned to give a sample, an officer must warn<sup>14</sup> him that if, when so requested, he fails without good cause to do so he may be liable to prosecution<sup>15</sup>. The officer must also inform<sup>16</sup> the person that the purpose of taking the sample is for drug testing<sup>17</sup> under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984<sup>18</sup>. Where the person concerned:

- 1536 (a) has been arrested for an offence but has not been charged with that offence and a police officer of at least the rank of inspector has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by that person of a specified Class A drug caused or contributed to the offence and has authorised the sample to be taken<sup>19</sup>; or
- 1537 (b) has been charged with an offence and a police officer of at least the rank of inspector, who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by that person of any specified Class A drug caused or contributed to the offence, has authorised the sample to be taken<sup>20</sup>, an officer must additionally inform the person, before requesting him to give a sample, of the giving of the authorisation and of the grounds in question<sup>21</sup>. The officer must also remind him of his rights, which may be exercised at any stage during the period in custody; that is, he must remind him about the right to have someone informed of his arrest<sup>22</sup>, about the right to consult privately with a solicitor<sup>23</sup> and that free independent legal advice is available<sup>24</sup>, and about the right to consult the codes of practice<sup>25</sup>.

If a sample is taken under these provisions from a person in respect of whom the arrest condition is met no other sample may be taken from him under these provisions during the same continuous period of detention (although, if the charge condition is also met in respect of him at any time during that period, the sample must be treated as a sample taken by virtue of the fact that the charge condition is met)<sup>26</sup>. Despite this, a sample may be taken from a person under these provisions if:

- 1538 (i) he was arrested for an offence (the first offence)<sup>27</sup>;
- 1539 (ii) the arrest condition is met but the charge condition is not met<sup>28</sup>;
- 1540 (iii) before a sample is taken<sup>29</sup> he would (but for his continuing to be in police detention by virtue of his having been arrested for an offence<sup>30</sup>) be required to be released from police detention<sup>31</sup>;

- 1541 (iv) he continues to be in police detention by virtue of his having been arrested for an offence<sup>32</sup>; and
- 1542 (v) the sample is taken before the end of the period of 24 hours starting with the time when his detention by virtue of his arrest for the first offence began<sup>33</sup>.

A sample must not be taken from a person under these provisions if he is detained in a police station unless he has been brought before the custody officer<sup>34</sup>, and a sample may be taken only by a prescribed person<sup>35</sup>.

Information obtained from a sample so taken may be disclosed:

- 1543 (A) for the purpose of informing any decision about granting bail in criminal proceedings<sup>36</sup> to the person concerned<sup>37</sup>;
- 1544 (B) for the purpose of informing any decision about the giving of a conditional caution<sup>38</sup> to the person concerned<sup>39</sup>;
- 1545 (C) where the person concerned is in police detention or is remanded in or committed to custody by an order of a court or has been granted such bail, for the purpose of informing any decision about his supervision<sup>40</sup>;
- 1546 (D) where the person concerned is convicted of an offence, for the purpose of informing any decision about the appropriate sentence to be passed by a court and any decision about his supervision or release<sup>41</sup>;
- 1547 (E) for the purpose of a misuse of drugs assessment which the person concerned is required<sup>42</sup> to attend<sup>43</sup>;
- 1548 (F) for the purpose of proceedings against the person concerned for a specified<sup>44</sup> offence relating to the assessment of the misuse of drugs<sup>45</sup>; or
- 1549 (G) for the purpose of ensuring that appropriate advice and treatment is made available to the person concerned<sup>46</sup>.

A person who fails without good cause to give any sample which may be taken from him under any of these provisions is guilty of an offence<sup>47</sup>, and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>48</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>49</sup> or to both<sup>50</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'non-intimate sample' see PARA 1027 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante.

3 For these purposes 'specified', in relation to a Class A drug, means specified by an order made by the Secretary of State: Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 70(1); definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(6) (ss 63B, 63C added by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 57(1), (2)). The relevant order is the Criminal Justice (Specified Class A Drugs) Order 2001, SI 2001/1816.

4 For the meaning of 'Class A drug' see PARA 770 note 2 ante; definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(6) (as added: see note 3 supra).

5 Any sample taken may not be used for any purpose other than to ascertain whether the person concerned has a specified Class A drug present in his body (Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 17.16(a)), and may not be used for identification purposes in accordance with Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers (Code D Guidance note 6F). Samples must be retained until the person concerned has made his first appearance before the court: Code C para 17.16(b). Such retention allows for the sample to be sent for confirmatory testing and analysis if the detainee disputes the test: Code C Guidance note 17D. However, such samples, and the information derived from them, may not be subsequently used in the investigation of any offence or in evidence against the persons from whom they were taken: Code C Guidance note 17D. A sample has to be sufficient and suitable; and a sufficient sample is sufficient in quantity and quality to enable drug testing analysis to take place, and a suitable sample is one which, by its nature, is suitable for a particular form of drug analysis: Code C Guidance note 17B.

In the case of a person who has not attained the age of 17, the taking of the sample may not take place except in the presence of an appropriate adult: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5A)(c) (s 63B as added (see note 3 supra); and s 63B(5A) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 5(1), (3)(b)); Code C para 17.7(c). For these purposes, 'appropriate adult', in relation to a person who has not attained the age of 17, means: (1) his parent or guardian or, if he is in the care of a local authority or voluntary organisation, a person representing that authority or organisation; (2) a social worker of a local authority; or (3) if no person falling within head (1) or head (2) supra is available, any responsible person aged 18 or over who is not a police officer or a person employed by the police: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(10) (as so added; and amended by the Children Act 2004 s 64, Sch 5 Pt 4).

6 The 'arrest condition' is that the person concerned has been arrested for an offence but has not been charged with that offence and either the offence is a trigger offence (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1A)(a) (s 63B as added (see note 3 supra); and s 63B(1)(a)-(c), (3) substituted, s 63B(1A), (4A), (4B), (5B)-(5D), (7)(aa), (ca), (cb) added, and s 63B(2), (4), (5)(b) amended, by the Drugs Act 2005 ss 7(1)-(9), (11), 23(1), Sch 1 paras 1, 4); Code C para 17.3(a)) or a police officer of at least the rank of inspector (see PARA 858 ante) has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by that person of a specified Class A drug caused or contributed to the offence and that officer has authorised the sample to be taken (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1A)(b) (as so added); Code C para 17.3(b)). A 'trigger offence' is an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 1 (theft: see PARA 282 ante), s 8 (robbery: see PARA 293 ante), s 9 (burglary: see PARA 294 ante), s 10 (aggravated burglary: see PARA 295 ante), s 12 (taking motor vehicle or other conveyance without authority: see PARA 298 ante), s 12A (as added) (aggravated vehicle-taking: see PARA 299 ante), s 15 (obtaining property by deception: see PARA 310 ante), s 22 (handling stolen goods: see PARA 302 ante) or s 25 (going equipped for stealing, etc: see PARA 296 ante); an offence (if committed in respect of a specified Class A drug: see PARA 770 note 2 ante) under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 4 (restriction on production and supply of controlled drugs: see PARA 772 ante), s 5(2) (possession of controlled drug: see PARA 770 ante) or s 5(3) (possession of controlled drug with intent to supply: see PARA 772 ante); an offence under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) (see PARA 79 ante) if committed in respect of an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 1, s 8, s 9, s 15 or s 22; and an offence under the Vagrancy Act 1824 s 3 (begging: see PARA 833 ante) or s 4 (persistent begging: see PARA 834 ante); Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 70(1), Sch 6 (Sch 6 amended by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 (Amendment) Order 2004, SI 2004/1892, art 2); definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(6) (as added: see note 3 supra). See also Code C Guidance note 17E. The Secretary of State may by order amend the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 Sch 6 so as to add, modify or omit any description of offence: s 70(2). As to 'misusing' drugs see the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 37(2); and MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AND DRUGS vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 246 (definition applied by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(6) (as so added)).

A police officer may give an authorisation under s 63B (as added and amended) orally or in writing but, if he gives it orally, he must confirm it in writing as soon as practicable: s 63C(2) (as so added); Code C para 17.8. If a sample is taken by virtue of an authorisation, the authorisation and the grounds for the suspicion must be recorded as soon as is practicable after the sample is taken: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(3) (as so added). The authorisation and the grounds for suspicion must be recorded in the custody record: Code C para 17.12(a). As to custody records see PARA 940 ante.

7 The 'charge condition' is either that the person concerned has been charged with a trigger offence (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(2)(a) (as added and amended: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.4(a)) or that the person concerned has been charged with an offence and a police officer of at least the rank of inspector, who has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the misuse by that person of any specified Class A drug caused or contributed to the offence, has authorised the sample to be taken (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(2)(b) (as so added); Code C para 17.4(b)). See the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(2) (as added); Code C para 17.8; and note 6 supra.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1)(a) (as added and substituted: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.2(a).

9 The 'age condition' is that the person concerned has attained the age of either 18 (if the arrest condition is met) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(3)(a) (as added and substituted: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.5(a)) or 14 (if the charge condition is met) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(3)(b) (as so added and substituted); Code C para 17.5(b)). The Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument amend the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(3)(a) (as added and substituted) by substituting for the specified age of 18 a different age specified in the order or different ages so specified for different police areas so specified (s 63B(6A)(a) (s 63B as so added; s 63B(6A), (6B) added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 5(1), 5(3)(c); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(6A) substituted by the Drugs Act 2005 s 7(10))), and may so amend the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(6A)(b) (as added and substituted) by substituting for the specified age of 14 a different age specified in the order (s 63B(6A)(b) (as so added)). A statutory instrument containing such an order may not be made unless a draft of the instrument has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 63B(6B) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

10 The 'request condition' is that a police officer has requested the person concerned to give the sample: ibid s 63B(4) (as added and amended: see notes 3, 6 supra). In the case of a person who has not attained the age of 17, the making of the request under s 63B(4) (as added and amended) may not take place except in the presence of an appropriate adult: s 63B(5A)(a) (as added: see notes 3, 5 supra); Code C para 17.7(a).

11 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1)(b) (as added and substituted: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.2(b), (d).

12 The 'notification condition' is that: (1) the relevant chief officer has been notified by the Secretary of State that appropriate arrangements have been made for the police area as a whole, or for the particular police station, in which the person is in police detention (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(4A)(a) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra)); and (2) the notice has not been withdrawn (s 63B(4A)(b) (as so added)). For these purposes, 'appropriate arrangements' are arrangements for the taking of samples under s 63B (as added and amended) from whichever of the following is specified in the notification: (a) persons in respect of whom the arrest condition is met (s 63B(4B)(a) (as so added)); (b) persons in respect of whom the charge condition is met (s 63B(4B)(b) (as so added)); and (c) persons who have not attained the age of 18 (s 63B(4B)(c) (as so added); Code C para 17.1). In the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B (as added and amended) 'relevant chief officer' means: (i) in relation to a police area, the chief officer of police of the police force for that police area; or (ii) in relation to a police station, the chief officer of police of the police force for the police area in which the police station is situated: s 63B(10) (as so added).

In connection with the meeting of the notification condition on 1 December 2005 (ie the date on which the Drugs Act 2005 was brought into force by virtue of the Drugs Act 2005 (Commencement No 3) Order 2005, SI 2005/3053) see the Drugs Act 2005 s 7(13), (14).

13 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1)(c) (as added and substituted: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.2(c). Nothing in these provisions applies to:

- 415 (1) the taking of a specimen for the purposes of any of the provisions for requiring and taking samples of breath, blood and urine in relation to driving offences etc when under the influence of drink or drugs or excess alcohol under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 4-11 (as amended) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 975 et seq) or the Transport and Works Act 1992 ss 26-38 (as amended) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 377 et seq; ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1626) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 62(11), 63C(5) (s 62(11) amended by the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 4, Sch 3 para 27(4); and by the Police Reform Act 2002 s 53(2); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C as so added)); or
- 416 (2) a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (ss 62(12), 63C(5) (s 62(12) added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(2), Sch 10 para 62(4)(a); and substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 125(1), Sch 15 para 5(1), (8); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63C(5) as so added)).

For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante.

14 In the case of a person who has not attained the age of 17 the giving of the warning may not take place except in the presence of an appropriate adult: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5A)(b) (as added: see notes 3, 5 supra); Code C para 17.7(b).

15 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5)(a) (as added: see note 3 supra); Code C para 17.6(b). The following form of words may be used: 'You do not have to provide a sample, but I must warn you that if you fail or refuse without good cause to do so, you will commit an offence for which you may be imprisoned, or fined, or both': Code C Guidance note 17A. The giving of a warning of the consequences of failure to provide a specimen must be recorded in the custody record: Code C para 17.12(b).

16 In the case of a person who has not attained the age of 17 the giving of the information under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5) (as added) may not take place except in the presence of an appropriate adult: s 63B(5A)(b) (as added: see notes 3, 5 supra); Code C para 17.7(b).

17 Ie to ascertain whether he has a specified Class A drug present in his body: Code C para 17.6(a).

18 Code C para 17.6(a).

20 Ie in a case falling within ibid s 63B(2)(b) (as added) (see note 7 supra).

21 Ibid s 63B(5)(b) (as added and amended: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.6(c).

- 22 Code C para 17.6(d)(i). As to this right see Code C paras 5.1-5.8; and PARA 952 ante.
- 23 For the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 953 note 4 ante.
- 24 Code C para 17.6(d)(ii). As to this right see Code C paras 6.1-6.17; and PARA 953 ante.
- 25 Code C para 17.6(d)(iii).
- 26 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5B)(a) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra); Code C para 17.9. The fact that the sample is to be so treated must be recorded in the person's custody record (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(5B)(b) (as so added)), as must the time at which any sample is given and the time of charge or, where the arrest condition is being relied upon, the time of arrest and, where applicable, the fact that a sample taken after arrest is being treated as a sample taken by virtue of the charge condition, where that is met in the same period of continuous detention (Code C para 17.12(c), (d)).

- 29 Ie by virtue of ibid s 63B(1) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 1-13 supra).
- 30 Ie an offence not falling within ibid s 63B(1A) (as added) (see note 6 supra).
- 31 Ibid s 63B(5C)(c) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra).
- 32 Ibid s 63B(5C)(d) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra). The offence referred to in the text is an offence not falling within s 63B(1A) (as added) (see note 6 supra).
- 33 Ibid s 63B(5C)(e) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra).
- 34 Ibid s 63B(5D) (as added: see notes 3, 6 supra). Force may not be used to take any sample for the purpose of drug testing: Code C para 17.14. A detainee from whom a sample may be taken may be detained for up to six hours from the time of charge if the custody officer reasonably believes that the detention is necessary for the sample to be taken: Code C para 17.10. Where the arrest condition is met, a detainee whom the custody officer has decided to release on bail without charge may continue to be detained, but not beyond 24 hours from the relevant time (as to which see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 41(2); and PARA 1000 ante), to enable a sample to be taken: Code C para 17.10. A detainee in respect of whom the arrest condition, but not the charge condition, is met, and whose release would be required before a sample can be taken had he not continued to be detained as a result of being arrested for a further offence which does not satisfy the arrest condition, may have a sample taken at any time within 24 hours after the arrest for the offence that satisfies the arrest condition: Code C para 17.10.
- 35 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(6) (as added: see note 3 supra); Code C para 17.13; Code C Guidance note 17C. 'Prescribed person' means a person prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State by statutory instrument: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(6) (as so added). No regulations may be made under s 63B(6) (as added) unless a draft has been laid before, and approved by resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 63B(6) (as so added). The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Drug Testing of Persons in Police Detention) (Prescribed Persons) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2645, prescribe the persons who may take samples pursuant to these powers.

UPDATE

1031 Testing for presence of Class A drugs

NOTE 6--2000 Act Sch 6 further amended: Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 32, Sch 3; Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 (Amendment) Order 2007, SI 2007/2171.

NOTE 39--Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(7)(aa) amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 20(2) (in force in relation to specified police areas: see SI 2009/2780).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/F. DRUG TESTING/1032. Initial assessment following testing for presence of Class A drugs.

1032. Initial assessment following testing for presence of Class A drugs.

An initial assessment is an appointment with a suitably qualified person<sup>1</sup> (an 'initial assessor'):

- 1550 (1) for the purpose of establishing whether a person is dependent upon or has a propensity to misuse<sup>2</sup> any specified<sup>3</sup> Class A drug<sup>4</sup>;
- 1551 (2) if the initial assessor thinks that a person has such a dependency or propensity, for the purpose of establishing whether he might benefit from further assessment, or from assistance or treatment (or both), in connection with the dependency or the propensity<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1552 (3) if the initial assessor thinks that he might benefit from such assistance or treatment (or both), for the purpose of providing him with advice, including an explanation of the types of assistance or treatment (or both) which are available<sup>6</sup>.

If: (a) a sample is taken<sup>7</sup> for the purpose of testing for the presence of a specified Class A drug from a person detained at a police station<sup>8</sup>; (b) an analysis of the sample reveals that a specified Class A drug may be present in the person's body<sup>9</sup>; (c) the age condition is met<sup>10</sup>; and (d) the notification condition is met<sup>11</sup>, then a police officer may, at any time before the person is released from detention at the police station, require him to attend an initial assessment and remain for its duration<sup>12</sup>. Where a person is required to attend an initial assessment and remain for its duration by virtue of these provisions a police officer must inform him of the time when, and the place at which, the assessment is to take place<sup>13</sup>, warn him that he may be liable to prosecution if he fails without good cause to attend the assessment (and, if applicable, any follow-up assessment which he may be required to attend) and remain for its duration<sup>14</sup>, and explain that this information will be confirmed in writing<sup>15</sup>. A record must be made, as part of the person's custody record, of the information, warnings, explanations and notices<sup>16</sup> so given<sup>17</sup>. These duties<sup>18</sup> must be discharged before the person is released from detention at the police station<sup>19</sup>.

In exercising any functions conferred by the provisions concerned with assessments of the misuse of drugs, a police officer and a suitably qualified person must have regard to any guidance issued by the Secretary of State for the purpose<sup>20</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> I.e. a person who has such qualifications or experience as are from time to time specified by the Secretary of State for the purposes of the Drugs Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 9-19) (see PARA 1032 et seq post): s 19(1), (6).

9 Ibid s 9(1)(b).

10 Ibid s 9(1)(c); Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 17.17(a). The age condition is met if the person has attained the age of 18 or such different age as the Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument specify for these purposes: Drugs Act 2005 s 9(4). A statutory instrument containing an order under s 9(4) or s 10(5) (see PARA 1033 post) must not be made unless a draft of the instrument has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 18(1). Any such order may make different provision for different police areas (s 18(2)(a)) and make such provision as the Secretary of State considers appropriate in connection with requiring persons who have not attained the age of 18 to attend and remain for the duration of an initial assessment or a follow-up assessment (as the case may be), including provision amending Pt 3 (s 18(2)(b)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made. As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq. As to follow-up assessments see s 10(3); and PARA 1033 post.

11 Ibid s 9(1)(d); Code C para 17.7(b). The notification condition is met, depending on whether the person in question has attained the age of 18 or not, if the relevant chief officer has been notified by the Secretary of State that arrangements for conducting initial assessments for persons who have attained that age (s 9(5)(a)) or, where applicable, have not (s 9(6)(a)), have been made for persons from whom samples have been taken at the police station in which the person in question is detained, and the notice has not been withdrawn (s 9(5)(b), (6)(b)). In these provisions, 'relevant chief officer' means the chief officer of police of the police force for the police area in which the police station is situated: s 9(7).

12 Ibid s 9(2); Code C para 17.17. A record must be made, as part of the person's custody record, of any requirement so imposed on him: Drugs Act 2005 s 11(7)(a); Code C para 17.20(a). As to custody records see PARA 940 ante.

15 Drugs Act 2005 s 11(2)(b); Code C para 17.18(b). A police officer must give the person notice in writing which: (1) confirms that he is required to attend and remain for the duration of an initial assessment or both an initial assessment and a follow-up assessment (as the case may be) (Drugs Act 2005 s 11(5)(a); Code C para 17.19(a)); (2) confirms the information given in relation to the time when, and the place at which, the assessment is to take place (ie given in pursuance of the Drugs Act 2005 s 11(2) (see the text and note 13 supra)) (s 11(5)(b); Code C para 17.19(b)); and (3) repeats the warning as to the consequences of failure to attend either assessment (ie the warning given in pursuance of the Drugs Act 2005 s 11(3) and any warning given in pursuance of s 11(4) (see the text and note 14 supra)) (s 11(5)(c); Code C para 17.18(b)). If a person is given a notice in pursuance of these requirements, a police officer or a suitably qualified person may give the person a further notice in writing which informs the person of any change to the time when, or to the place at which, the initial assessment is to take place (Drugs Act 2005 s 11(8)(a); Code C para 17.21) and repeats the warning as to the consequences of failure to attend either assessment (Drugs Act 2005 s 11(8)(b); Code C para 17.21).

16 le the information, warnings, explanations and notices given in pursuance of the Drugs Act 2005 s 11(2)-(4) (see the text and notes 13-15 supra).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/F. DRUG TESTING/1033. Follow-up assessment.

1033. Follow-up assessment.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> provision is made for a follow-up assessment. A 'follow-up assessment' is an appointment with a suitably qualified person<sup>2</sup> (a 'follow-up assessor'):

- 1553 (1) for any of the purposes of the initial assessment which were not fulfilled at the initial assessment<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1554 (2) if the follow-up assessor thinks it appropriate, for the purpose of drawing up a care plan<sup>4</sup>.

A care plan is a plan which sets out the nature of the assistance or treatment (or both) which may be most appropriate for the person in connection with any dependency upon, or any propensity to misuse<sup>5</sup>, a specified<sup>6</sup> Class A drug<sup>7</sup> which the follow-up assessor thinks that he has<sup>8</sup>.

If a police officer requires<sup>9</sup> a person to attend an initial assessment and remain for its duration<sup>10</sup>, and the age condition<sup>11</sup> and notification condition<sup>12</sup> are met, the police officer must, at the same time as he imposes the initial assessment requirement<sup>13</sup>, require the person to attend a follow-up assessment and remain for its duration<sup>14</sup> and inform him that the requirement ceases to have effect if he is informed at the initial assessment that he is no longer required to attend the follow-up assessment<sup>15</sup>.

1 The Drugs Act 2005 s 10 (see the text and notes 4-15 infra), ss 11, 15, 16 so far as relating to s 10 (see note 14 infra; and PARA 1036 post), and ss 13, 14 (see note 14 infra; and PARAS 1034-1035 post) are to come into force as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Ibid s 10(1)(b). The age condition is met if the person has attained the age of 18 or such different age as the Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument specify for these purposes: s 10(5). As to the making of such orders see PARA 1032 note 10 ante. At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made.

12 Ibid s 10(1)(c). The notification condition is met, depending on whether the person in question has attained the age of 18 or not, if the relevant chief officer has been notified by the Secretary of State that arrangements for conducting initial assessments for persons who have attained that age (s 10(6)(a)) or, where applicable, have not (s 10(7)(a)), have been made for persons from whom samples have been taken at the police station in which the person in question is detained, and the notice has not been withdrawn (s 10(6)(b), (7)(b)). In these provisions, 'relevant chief officer' means the chief officer of police of the police force for the police area in which the police station is situated: s 10(8). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

13 Ie the initial assessment requirement under ibid s 9(2) (see PARA 1032 ante).

14 Ibid s 10(2)(a). A record must be made, as part of the person's custody record, of any requirement so imposed on him: s 11(7)(b). As to custody records see PARA 940 ante. It is provided that any such requirement ceases to have effect if the person is informed by the initial assessor that a follow-up assessment is not appropriate: see s 13(3); and PARA 1034 post.

1034. Arrangements for follow-up assessment.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, if a person attends<sup>2</sup> an initial assessment<sup>3</sup> and is required<sup>4</sup> to attend a follow-up assessment<sup>5</sup> and remain for its duration<sup>6</sup>, then providing the initial assessor<sup>7</sup> thinks that a follow-up assessment is appropriate, he must inform the person of the time when, and the place at which, the follow-up assessment is to take place<sup>8</sup>, warn him that, if he fails without good cause to attend the follow-up assessment and remain for its duration, he may be liable to prosecution<sup>9</sup>, and explain that this information will be confirmed in writing<sup>10</sup>. If, however, the initial assessor thinks that a follow-up assessment is not appropriate, he must inform the person concerned that he is no longer required to attend it<sup>11</sup>.

These duties<sup>12</sup> must be discharged before the conclusion of the initial assessment<sup>13</sup>.

1 See PARA 1033 note 1 ante.

2 Ie in pursuance of the Drugs Act 2005 s 9(2) (see PARA 1032 ante).

3 Ibid s 13(1)(a). For the meaning of 'initial assessment' see PARA 1032 ante.

8 Drugs Act 2005 s 13(4)(a).

9 Ibid s 13(5).

10 Ibid s 13(4)(b). The initial assessor must give the person notice in writing which confirms that he is required to attend and remain for the duration of the follow-up assessment (s 13(6)(a)), confirms the information given regarding the time when, and the place at which, the follow-up assessment is to take place (ie the information given pursuant to s 13(4)) (s 13(6)(b)), and repeats the warning given (ie in pursuance of s 13(5) (see the text and note 9 supra)) about liability to prosecution (s 13(6)(c)). If a person is given a notice in pursuance of s 13(6), the initial assessor or another suitably qualified person may give the person a further notice in writing which informs him of any change to the time when, or to the place at which, the follow-up assessment is to take place (s 13(8)(a)) and repeats the warning about liability to prosecution (s 13(8)(b)).

11 Ibid s 13(2). The requirement that a police officer imposing a requirement to attend and remain at an initial assessment under s 9(2) (see PARA 1032 ante) must at the same time require the person to attend and remain at a follow-up assessment imposed by virtue of s 10(2) (see PARA 1033 ante) ceases to have effect if the person is informed as mentioned in s 13(2): s 13(3).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/F. DRUG TESTING/1035. Attendance at assessments.

1035. Attendance at assessments.

If a person is required to attend an initial assessment<sup>1</sup> or (as from a day to be appointed<sup>2</sup>) a follow-up assessment<sup>3</sup> and remain for its duration, the initial assessor<sup>4</sup> or follow-up assessor<sup>5</sup> must inform a police officer or a police support officer<sup>6</sup> if the person either fails to attend the assessment at the specified time and place<sup>7</sup> or attends the assessment at the specified time and place but fails to remain for its duration<sup>8</sup>. A person is guilty of an offence if without good cause he either fails to attend an initial or follow-up assessment at the specified time and place<sup>9</sup> or attends the assessment at the specified time and place but fails to remain for its duration<sup>10</sup>. A person who is guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>11</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or to both<sup>12</sup>.

If a person fails to attend an initial assessment at the specified time and place, any requirement imposed on him<sup>13</sup> to attend a follow-up assessment and remain for its duration ceases to have effect<sup>14</sup>.

1036. Disclosure of information about assessments.

An initial assessor<sup>1</sup> may disclose information obtained as a result of an initial assessment<sup>2</sup>, and (as from a day to be appointed<sup>3</sup>) a follow-up assessor<sup>4</sup> may disclose information obtained as a result of a follow-up assessment<sup>5</sup>, to a person who is involved in the conduct of the assessment<sup>6</sup>. An initial assessor may also disclose information relating to an initial assessment for certain purposes connected with the granting of conditional bail<sup>7</sup>, and (as from a day to be appointed<sup>8</sup>) may also disclose information obtained as a result of an initial assessment to any person who is or may be involved in the conduct of any follow-up assessment<sup>9</sup>. Subject to this, information obtained as a result of an assessment may not be disclosed by any person without the written consent of the person to whom the assessment relates<sup>10</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/F. DRUG TESTING/1037. Circumstances in which assessment requirements cease to have effect.

1037. Circumstances in which assessment requirements cease to have effect.

A requirement for an initial assessment<sup>1</sup> or (as from a day to be appointed<sup>2</sup>) follow-up assessment<sup>3</sup> imposed on a person<sup>4</sup> ceases to have effect<sup>5</sup> if at any time before he has fully complied with the requirement:

- 1555 (1) a police officer makes arrangements for a further analysis of the sample taken<sup>6</sup> from him<sup>7</sup> and the analysis does not reveal that a specified<sup>8</sup> Class A drug<sup>9</sup> was present in the person's body<sup>10</sup>; or
- 1556 (2) he is charged with the related offence<sup>11</sup> and a court imposes on him a condition of bail<sup>12</sup>.

If a person fails to attend an assessment<sup>13</sup> which he is required to attend<sup>14</sup> or fails to remain for the duration of such an assessment but, at any time after his failure, the requirement to attend ceases to have effect:

- 1557 (a) no proceedings for an offence of failing to attend or failing to remain<sup>15</sup> may be brought against him<sup>16</sup>; and
- 1558 (b) if any such proceedings were commenced before the requirement ceased to have effect, those proceedings must be discontinued<sup>17</sup>.

10 Ibid s 16(1)(b). If a requirement ceases to have effect under these circumstances a police officer must so inform the person concerned: s 16(2).

11 Ibid s 17(1)(a). For these purposes, 'the related offence' is the offence in respect of which the condition specified in Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63B(1A) or (2) (as added and amended) (see PARA 1031 ante) is satisfied in relation to the taking of the sample mentioned in the Drugs Act 2005 s 9(1)(a) (see PARA 1032 ante): s 17(6). Nothing in s 17(1) affects the validity of anything done in connection with the requirement before it ceases to have effect (s 17(5)(a)) or any liability which the person may have for an offence under s 12(3) or s 14(3) (see PARA 1035 ante) committed before the requirement ceases to have effect (s 17(5)(b)).

12 Ibid s 17(1)(b). See note 11 supra. For these purposes, a 'condition of bail' is a condition of bail under the Bail Act 1976 s 3(6D) (as added) (see PARA 1167 post): Drugs Act 2005 s 17(1)(b).

13 Ie either an initial assessment or a follow-up assessment.

14 Ie by virtue of the Drugs Act 2005 s 9(2) (initial assessments: see PARA 1032 ante) or 10(2) (follow-up assessments: see PARA 1033 ante).

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/G. SPECULATIVE SEARCHES AND DESTRUCTION AND RETENTION OF SAMPLES AND PHOTOGRAPHS/1038. Speculative searches of fingerprints, footwear impressions and other samples.

G. SPECULATIVE SEARCHES AND DESTRUCTION AND RETENTION OF SAMPLES AND PHOTOGRAPHS

1038. Speculative searches of fingerprints, footwear impressions and other samples.

Where a person has been arrested on suspicion of being involved in a recordable offence<sup>1</sup> or has been charged with such an offence or has been informed that he will be reported for such an offence, fingerprints<sup>2</sup>, impressions of footwear<sup>3</sup> or samples<sup>4</sup>, or the information derived from samples, taken<sup>5</sup> from the person may be checked against:

- 1559 (1) other fingerprints, impressions of footwear or samples to which the person seeking to check has access and which are held by or on behalf of any one or more relevant law enforcement authorities<sup>6</sup> or which are held in connection with or as a result of an investigation of an offence<sup>7</sup>; and
- 1560 (2) information derived from other samples if the information is contained in records to which the person seeking to check has access and which are so held<sup>8</sup>.

Where fingerprints, impressions of footwear or samples have been taken from any person in connection with the investigation of an offence but otherwise than in these circumstances<sup>9</sup>, and that person has given his consent in writing<sup>10</sup> to the use in a speculative search<sup>11</sup> of the fingerprints, impressions or samples and of information derived from them<sup>12</sup>, the fingerprints or impressions or, as the case may be, those samples and that information may be checked against any of the fingerprints, impressions, samples or information mentioned in head (1) or head (2) above<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to recordable offences see PARA 1049 post.

2 For the meaning of 'fingerprints' see PARA 1021 note 2 ante. As to the power to take fingerprints see PARA 1021 ante.

3 As to the power to take impressions of footwear see PARA 1022 ante.

4 As to the power to take samples see PARAS 1027-1030 ante.

5 Ie under any power conferred by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt V (ss 53-65) (as amended) (see PARA 952 et seq ante).

6 For these purposes, 'relevant law enforcement authority' means:

417 (1) a police force (ibid s 63A(1A)(a) (s 63A added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 56; and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1) substituted, and s 63A(1A) added, by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 64; and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1A) substituted, and s 63A(1B)-(1D) added, by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 81(2)));

- 418 (2) the Serious Organised Crime Agency (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1A)(b) (s 63A(1A) as so added and substituted; and s 63A(1A)(b) substituted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 43, 46));
- 419 (3) a public authority (not falling within heads (1), (2) supra) with functions in any part of the British Islands which consist of or include the investigation of crimes or the charging of offenders (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1A)(d) (as so added and substituted));
- 420 (4) any person with functions in any country or territory outside the United Kingdom which correspond to those of a police force (s 63A(1A)(e)(i) (as so added and substituted)) or otherwise consist of or include the investigation of conduct contrary to the law of that country or territory, or the apprehension of persons guilty of such conduct (s 63A(1A)(e)(ii) (as so added and substituted));
- 421 (5) any person with functions under any international agreement which consist of or include the investigation of conduct which is unlawful under the law of one or more places (s 63A(1A)(f) (i) (as so added and substituted)), prohibited by such an agreement (s 63A(1A)(f)(ii) (as so added and substituted)) or contrary to international law (s 63A(1A)(f)(iii) (as so added and substituted)) or the apprehension of persons guilty of such conduct (s 63A(1A)(f) (as so added and substituted)).

The reference to a 'police force' is a reference to: any police force maintained under the Police Act 1996 s 2 (police forces in England and Wales outside London: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1B)(a) (as so added)); the metropolitan police force (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 137 et seq) (s 63A(1B)(b) (as so added)); the City of London police force (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 138) (s 63A(1B)(c) (as so added)); any police force maintained under or by virtue of the Police (Scotland) Act 1967 s 1 (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1B)(d) (as so added)); the Police Service of Northern Ireland (s 63A(1B)(e) (as so added)); the Police Service of Northern Ireland Reserve (s 63A(1B)(f) (as so added)); the Ministry of Defence Police (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 120 et seq) (s 63A(1B)(g) (as so added)); the Royal Navy Regulating Branch (s 63A(1B)(h) (as so added)); the Royal Military Police (s 63A(1B)(i) (as so added)); the Royal Air Force Police (s 63A(1B)(j) (as so added)); the Royal Marines Police (s 63A(1B)(k) (as so added)); the British Transport Police (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 129) (s 63A(1B)(l) (as so added)); the States of Jersey Police Force (s 63A(1B)(m) (as so added)); the salaried police force of the Island of Guernsey (s 63A(1B)(n) (as so added)); and the Isle of Man Constabulary (s 63A(1B)(o) (as so added)); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1B) (as so added and substituted). As to the Serious Organised Crime Agency see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 430 et seq. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

7 Ibid s 63A(1)(a) (as added and substituted (see note 6 supra); and amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 81(1); and by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(1), (3)(a)); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers Guidance note 6E.

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1)(b) (as added and substituted: see note 6 supra); Code D Guidance note 6E.

9 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1C)(a) (as added (see note 6 supra); and s 63A(1C) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(3)(b)(i)).

10 A consent given for these purposes is not capable of being withdrawn: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1D) (as added: see note 6 supra). A basic form of words for such consent is 'I consent to my fingerprints/DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that this sample may be checked against other fingerprints/DNA records held by or on behalf of relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for the sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent': Code D Guidance note 6E. At the date at which this volume states the law Code D Guidance note 6E had not been updated to take account of the amendments made to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A (as added and amended) by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118 (which brought impressions of footwear within the scope of the provisions described in this paragraph) but it is clear that a consent for the taking of a footwear impression may be given in the form set out above with appropriate modifications to the wording.

1038 Speculative searches of fingerprints, footwear impressions and other samples

NOTE 6--For 'Royal Navy Regulating Branch' now read 'Royal Naval Police': 1984 Act s 63A(1B)(h) (amended by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 100(a)). 1984 Act s 63A(1B)(k) repealed: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 100(b), Sch 17.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(viii) Identification/G. SPECULATIVE SEARCHES AND DESTRUCTION AND RETENTION OF SAMPLES AND PHOTOGRAPHS/1039. Destruction of fingerprints, impressions of footwear and samples.

1039. Destruction of fingerprints, impressions of footwear and samples.

If fingerprints<sup>1</sup>, impressions of footwear<sup>2</sup> or samples<sup>3</sup> are taken from a person in connection with the investigation of an offence<sup>4</sup> and that person is not suspected of having committed the offence<sup>5</sup> they must be destroyed as soon as they have fulfilled the purpose for which they were taken<sup>6</sup>. Samples, fingerprints and impressions of footwear are not, however, so required to be destroyed<sup>7</sup> if:

- 1561 (1) they were taken for the purposes of the investigation of an offence of which a person has been convicted<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1562 (2) a sample, fingerprint or, as the case may be, an impression of footwear was also taken from the convicted person for the purposes of that investigation<sup>9</sup>.

Where a person is entitled<sup>10</sup> to the destruction of any fingerprint, impression of footwear or sample taken from him (or would be but for the restriction on destruction<sup>11</sup>), neither the fingerprint, nor the impression of footwear nor the sample, nor any information derived from the sample, may be used<sup>12</sup> in evidence against the person who is or would be entitled to the destruction of that fingerprint, impression of footwear or sample<sup>13</sup> or for the purposes of the investigation of any offence<sup>14</sup>.

If fingerprints or impressions of footwear are destroyed any copies<sup>15</sup> of the fingerprints or impressions must also be destroyed<sup>16</sup> and any chief officer of police controlling access to computer data relating to the fingerprints or impressions must, as soon as it is practicable to do so, make access to the data impossible<sup>17</sup>. A person who asks to be allowed to witness the destruction of his fingerprints or footwear impressions (or copies of them) has a right to witness it<sup>18</sup>.

Provision is made, notwithstanding these provisions, for the retention of fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples in certain circumstances<sup>19</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'fingerprints' see PARA 1021 note 2 ante. As to the power to take fingerprints see PARA 1021 ante.

2 As to the power to take impressions of footwear see PARA 1022 ante.

3 As to the power to take samples see PARAS 1027-1030 ante. The provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 (as amended) (see the text and notes 4-19 infra; and PARA 1040 post) apply to DNA profiles: R v Nathaniel [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 565, CA.

If a sample is improperly retained, the evidence derived from it is not automatically excluded: see A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1999) [2001] 2 AC 91, [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 475, HL (concerned with provisions in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 which have now been replaced). The use of DNA profiles for statistical purposes is not contrary to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 (as amended): R v Willoughby [1997] 1 Archbold News 2, CA.

Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 (as amended) affects any power conferred by the Immigration Act 1971 s 4, Sch 2 para 18(2) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156) or the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 20 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 142) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(7)(a) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (5))) or applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(7)(b)). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante.

7 Ibid s 64(3), (3AA) (s 64(3) amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 57(1), (2); and by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (3); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AA), (3AB) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (4), (6); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AA) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(4)(d)).

8 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AA)(a) (as added: see note 7 supra).

9 Ibid s 64(3AA)(b) (as added and amended: see note 7 supra).

10 Ie under ibid s 64(3) (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-7 supra) or, as from a day to be appointed, under s 64(1BA) (prospectively added) (see PARA 1021 ante): s 64(3AB) (as added (see note 7 supra); prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 117(1), (9)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Ie under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AA) (as added and amended) (see the text and notes 7-9 supra).

12 For these purposes, the reference to 'using' a fingerprint or an impression of footwear includes a reference to allowing any check to be made against it under ibid s 63A(1) (as added, substituted and amended) (see PARA 1038 ante) or s 63A(1C) (as added) (see PARA 1038 ante) and to disclosing it to any person (s 64(1B) (a) (s 64(1B) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (2), (6); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(1B)(a) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(4)(b)); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AB) (as added: see note 7 supra)); and the reference to 'using' a sample includes a reference to allowing any check to be made under s 63A(1) (as added, substituted and amended) or s 63A(1C) (as added) against it or against information derived from it and to disclosing it or any such information to any person (s 64(1B)(b) (as so added)). This provision is subject to s 64(3AC) (as added and amended) (see PARA 1040 post).

13 Ibid s 64(3AB)(a) (as added (see note 7 supra); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(4)(e)).

14 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AB)(b) (as added: see note 7 supra); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers Annex F para 3(d). For these purposes, the reference to an 'investigation' includes reference to any investigation outside the United Kingdom of any crime or suspected crime: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(1B)(d) (as added: see note 12 supra). A reference to 'crime' includes a reference to any conduct which either: (1) constitutes one or more criminal offences (whether under the law of a part of the United Kingdom or of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom) (s 64(1B)(c)(i) (as so added)); or (2) is, or corresponds to, any conduct which, if it all took place in any one part of the United Kingdom, would constitute one or more criminal offences (s 64(1B)(c)(ii) (as so added)). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

15 As to the meaning of 'copies' for these purposes see PARA 1011 note 5 ante.

16 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(5)(a) (s 64(5) substituted, and s 64(6A), (6B) added, by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 148(1); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(5), (6A) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(4)(h), (j)); Code D Annex F para 3(a).

17 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(5)(b) (as substituted and amended: see note 16 supra); Code D Annex F para 3(c). If this requirement falls to be complied with (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(6A)(a) (as added: see note 16 supra)) and the person to whose fingerprints or impressions the data relate asks for a certificate that it has been complied with (s 64(6A)(b) (as so added and amended)), such a certificate must be issued to him, not later than the end of the period of three months beginning with the day on which he asks for it, by the responsible chief officer of police or a person authorised by him or on his behalf for these purposes (s 64(6A) (as so added); Code D Annex F para 3(c)). For these purposes, 'the responsible chief officer of police' means the chief officer of police in whose police area the computer data were put onto the computer: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(6B) (as so added; and amended by the Police Act 1996 s 103(1), Sch 7 para 37). As to police areas and authorities see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136 et seq.

Retention of fingerprints impressions of footwear and samples.

1040. Retention of fingerprints impressions of footwear and samples.

Where fingerprints<sup>1</sup>, impressions of footwear<sup>2</sup> or samples<sup>3</sup> are taken from a person in connection with the investigation<sup>4</sup> of an offence<sup>5</sup> and they are not required<sup>6</sup> to be destroyed<sup>7</sup>, the fingerprints, impressions or samples may be retained after they have fulfilled the purposes for which they were taken but must not be used by any person except for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime<sup>8</sup>, the investigation of an offence, the conduct of a prosecution<sup>9</sup> or the identification of a deceased person or of the person from whom a body part came<sup>10</sup>.

Where a person from whom a fingerprint, impression of footwear or sample has been taken consents in writing<sup>11</sup> to its retention:

- 1563 (1) the impression or sample need not be destroyed<sup>12</sup>;
- 1564 (2) the restriction on the use<sup>13</sup> of the fingerprint, impression or sample<sup>14</sup> does not restrict the use that may be made of the fingerprint, impression or sample or, in the case of a sample, of any information derived from it<sup>15</sup>; and
- 1565 (3) that consent must be treated as comprising a consent for the purposes of the provisions<sup>16</sup> relating to checking fingerprints, impression or samples against other fingerprints, impressions, samples or information<sup>17</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'fingerprints' see PARA 1021 note 2 ante. As to the power to take fingerprints see PARA 1021 ante.

2 As to the power to take impressions of footwear see PARA 1022 ante.

3 As to the power to take samples see PARAS 1027-1030 ante. The provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 (as amended) apply to DNA profiles: R v Nathaniel [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 565, CA.

4 As to the meaning of 'investigation' for these purposes see PARA 1039 note 14 ante.

5 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(1A)(a) (s 64(1A), (1B) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (2), (6); and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(1A)(a) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(4)(a)).

6 Ie by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3) (as amended) (see PARA 1039 ante).

7 Ibid s 64(1A)(b) (as added: see note 5 supra).

8 As to the meaning of 'crime' for these purposes see PARA 1039 note 14 ante.

9 For these purposes, the references to a 'prosecution' include references to a prosecution brought in respect of any crime in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(1B)(d) (as added: see note 5 supra).

10 Ibid s 64(1A) (as added (see note 5 supra); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 117(6), (7), 118(4)(a)); Code D: Code of Practice for the Identification of Persons by Police Officers Annex F para 4. Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples so retained may also be subject to a speculative search, which includes checking them against other fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA records held by, or on behalf of, the police and other law enforcement authorities in, as well as outside, the United Kingdom: Code D Annex F para 4. As to speculative searches see PARA 1038 ante. The provisions for the retention of fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples allow for all fingerprints and samples in a case to be available for any subsequent miscarriage of justice investigation: Code D Annex F Guidance note F2.

These provisions are not incompatible with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1973); Cmnd 8969) art 8(1) (right to private life); even if art 8 is engaged, the interference is justified under art 8(2): R (on the application of S) v Chief Constable of South Yorkshire [2004] UKHL 39, [2004] 4 All ER 193, [2004] 1 WLR 2196. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

Nothing in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64 (as amended) affects any power conferred by the Immigration Act 1971 s 4, Sch 2 para 18(2) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 156) or the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 20 (as amended) (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 142) (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(7)(a) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (5))) or applies to a person arrested or detained under the terrorism provisions (Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(7)(b)). For the meaning of 'the terrorism provisions' see PARA 952 note 4 ante.

11 For these purposes, it is immaterial whether the consent is given at, before or after the time when the entitlement to the destruction of the fingerprint, impression or sample arises: ibid s 64(3AD) (s 64(3AC), (3AD) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 82(1), (4), (6); Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AD) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(1), (4)(g)). A consent given for these purposes is not capable of being withdrawn: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AC) (as so added).

To minimise the risk of confusion, each consent should be physically separate and the volunteer should be asked to sign one or the other, not both: Code D Annex F note F1. Code D Annex F provides examples of consents, as follows:

- 422 (1) where a DNA sample is taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screen and is to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards: 'I consent to my DNA/mouth swab being taken for forensic analysis. I understand that the sample will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my profile will only be compared to the crime stain profile from this inquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the sample may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of it' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(a)(i));
- 423 (2) where a DNA sample is to be retained on the national DNA database and used in the future: 'I consent to my DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that this sample may be checked against other DNA records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for the sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(a)(ii));
- 424 (3) where fingerprints are taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screen and to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards: 'I consent to my fingerprints being taken for elimination purposes. I understand that the fingerprints will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my fingerprints will only be compared to the fingerprints from this inquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the fingerprints may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of it' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(b)(i));
- 425 (5) where fingerprints are to be retained for future use: 'I consent to my fingerprints being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that my fingerprints may be checked against other records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for my fingerprints to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(b)(ii));
- 426 (6) where footwear impressions are taken for the purposes of elimination or as part of an intelligence-led screen and to be used only for the purposes of that investigation and destroyed afterwards: 'I consent to my footwear impressions being taken for elimination purposes. I understand that the footwear impressions will be destroyed at the end of the case and that my footwear impressions will only be compared to the footwear impressions from this inquiry. I have been advised that the person taking the footwear impressions may be required to give evidence and/or provide a written statement to the police in relation to the taking of them' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(c)(i));

- 427 (7) where footwear impressions are to be retained for future use: 'I consent to my footwear impressions being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that my footwear impressions may be checked against other records held by, or on behalf of, relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for my footwear impressions to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent' (Code D Annex F Guidance note F1(c)(ii)).

12 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AC)(a) (s 64(3AC) as added (see note 11 supra); and s 64(3AC)(a), (b) amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 118(1), (4)(f)); Code D Annex F para 2. As from a day to be appointed the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AC) (as added and amended) is further amended so as to provide that fingerprints, in addition to impressions of footwear and samples, need not be destroyed if consent to their retention is given (s 64(3AC)(a) (as so added and amended; prospectively amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 117(6), (10))) and that the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 64(3AC) (as added and amended) does not apply to fingerprints taken by virtue of s 61(6A) (as added) (see PARA 1021 ante) (s 64(3AC) (as so added and amended; prospectively amended)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The 'destruction' referred to in the text is destruction under s 64(3) (as amended) (see PARA 1039 ante).

Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples given voluntarily for the purposes of elimination play an important part in many police investigations, and it is therefore important to make sure that innocent volunteers are not deterred from participating and their consent to their fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA being used for the purposes of a specific investigation is fully informed and voluntary: Code D Annex F Guidance note F1. If the police or volunteer seek to have the fingerprints, footwear impressions or samples retained for use after the specific investigation ends, it is important that the volunteer's consent to this is also fully informed and voluntary: Code D Annex F Guidance note F1.

- 13 As to 'using' a fingerprint, impression or sample for these purposes see PARA 1039 note 12 ante.

1041. Destruction and retention of photographs taken or used in identification procedures.

Photographs (and all negatives and copies)<sup>1</sup> of suspects<sup>2</sup> which are taken for the purposes of, or in connection with, the procedures concerned with video and group identification, identification parades and confrontations<sup>3</sup> must be destroyed<sup>4</sup> unless the suspect:

- 1566 (1) is charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, a recordable offence<sup>5</sup>;
- 1567 (2) is prosecuted for a recordable offence<sup>6</sup>;
- 1568 (3) is cautioned, warned or reprimanded for a recordable offence<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1569 (4) gives informed consent, in writing, for the photograph or images to be retained for specified purposes<sup>8</sup>.

When the destruction of any photograph is so required<sup>9</sup>, the person must be given an opportunity to witness the destruction or to have a certificate confirming the destruction if he requests one within five days of being informed that the destruction is required<sup>10</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ix) Charge/1042. Charging detained persons.

1042. Charging detained persons.

When the officer in charge of the investigation reasonably believes that there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of the detainee's conviction<sup>1</sup> he must without delay inform the custody officer<sup>2</sup> who is then responsible for considering whether or not he should be charged<sup>3</sup>. When a person is detained in respect of more than one offence it is permissible to delay informing the custody officer until these conditions are satisfied in respect of all the offences<sup>4</sup>. If the detainee is a juvenile or mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable<sup>5</sup>, any resulting action must be taken in the presence of the appropriate adult<sup>6</sup> if he is present at the time<sup>7</sup>. Where, in compliance with the guidance issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions, the custody officer decides that the case should be immediately referred to the Crown Prosecution Service to make the charging decision, consultation should take place with a Crown prosecutor as soon as is reasonably practicable; and where the Crown prosecutor is unable to make the charging decision on the information available at that time, the detainee may be released without charge and on bail<sup>8</sup> (with conditions if necessary)<sup>9</sup>.

When a detainee is charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for an offence<sup>10</sup>, he must, unless the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies<sup>11</sup>, be cautioned as follows: 'You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention now something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence'<sup>12</sup>. There are alternative terms of the caution to be used when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies<sup>13</sup>. Whenever the restriction either begins to apply or ceases to apply after a caution has already been given, the person must be re-cautioned in the appropriate terms<sup>14</sup>. The changed position on drawing inferences and that the previous caution no longer applies must also be explained to the detainee in ordinary language<sup>15</sup>.

When a detainee is charged he must be given a written notice showing particulars of the offence with which he is charged and including the name of the officer in the case<sup>16</sup> and the reference number for the case<sup>17</sup>. So far as possible the particulars of the charge must be stated in simple terms, but they must also show the precise offence in law with which the detainee is charged<sup>18</sup>. The notice must begin 'You are charged with the offence(s) shown below', and be followed by the caution<sup>19</sup>. If the detainee is a juvenile, mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable, the notice must be given to the appropriate adult<sup>20</sup>.

If, after a detainee has been charged with or informed that he may be prosecuted for an offence, an officer wants to tell him about any written statement or interview with another person relating to such an offence, the detainee must either be handed a true copy of the written statement or the content of the interview record must be brought to his attention<sup>21</sup>. Nothing may be done, however, to invite any reply or comment save to caution the detainee 'You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence'<sup>22</sup> and to remind him about his right to legal advice<sup>23</sup>.

If the detainee cannot read, the document may be read to him<sup>24</sup>. If the detainee is a juvenile or mentally disordered or mentally vulnerable, the copy must also be given to, or the interview record brought to the attention of, the appropriate adult<sup>25</sup>.

A detainee may not be interviewed about an offence after he has been charged with it, or informed that he may be prosecuted for it, unless the interview is necessary either for the purpose of preventing or minimising harm or loss to some other person or to the public<sup>26</sup> or for clearing up an ambiguity in a previous answer or statement<sup>27</sup>, or where it is in the interests of justice that the detainee should have put to him, and have an opportunity to comment on, information concerning the offence which has come to light since he was charged or informed that he might be prosecuted<sup>28</sup>. Before any such interview, the interviewer must caution the detainee 'You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence'<sup>29</sup> and remind him about his right to legal advice<sup>30</sup>.

When a juvenile is charged with an offence and the custody officer authorises his continuing detention, the custody officer must try to make arrangements for the juvenile to be taken into the care of a local authority to be detained pending appearance in court unless the custody officer certifies<sup>31</sup> that it is impracticable to do so or, in the case of a juvenile at least 12 years old, no secure accommodation is available and there is a risk to the public of serious harm from that juvenile<sup>32</sup>. If it is not practicable so to make arrangements for the transfer of a juvenile into local authority care, the custody officer must record the reasons and make out a certificate to be produced before the court together with the juvenile<sup>33</sup>.

A record must be made of anything a detained person says when charged<sup>34</sup>. Any questions put in an interview after charge and answers given relating to the offence must be recorded in full during the interview on the forms for that purpose and the record signed by that detainee or, if he refuses, by the interviewer and any third parties present<sup>35</sup>. If the questions are audibly<sup>36</sup> or visually<sup>37</sup> recorded, the arrangements set out in the relevant codes of practice apply<sup>38</sup>.

1 See Code C: Code of Practice for the Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers para 11.6; and PARA 960 ante.

2 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante. When a person is arrested under the provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 which allow a person to be retried after being acquitted of a serious offence which is a qualifying offence by virtue of Sch 5 and not precluded from further prosecution by virtue of s 75(3) (see PARA 1937 post), it is the responsibility of an officer of the rank of superintendent or above who has not been involved in the investigation to determine whether the evidence is sufficient to charge: Code C Guidance note 16AA.

3 Code C para 16.1. See Code C Guidance note 11B; and PARA 960 ante. The custody officer must take into account alternatives to prosecution under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, reprimands and warning applicable to persons under 18 (see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 65 (as amended)); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1235), and national guidance on the cautioning of offenders, for persons aged 18 and over: Code C Guidance note 16A.

Where guidance issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37A (as added) (see PARAS 941-942 ante) is in force, the custody officer must comply with that guidance in deciding how to act in dealing with the detainee: Code C para 16.1A. Where guidance issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37B (as added) (see PARA 942 ante) is in force, a custody officer who determines in accordance with that guidance that there is sufficient evidence to charge the detainee may detain that person for no longer than is reasonably necessary to decide how that person is to be dealt with under s 37(7) (as amended) (see PARA 941 ante), including (where appropriate) consultation with a duty prosecutor: Code C Guidance note 16AB. The period is subject to the maximum period of detention before charge determined by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 41-44 (as amended) (see PARAS 1000-1005 ante). Where in accordance with the guidance the case is referred to the Crown Prosecution Service for decision, the custody officer should ensure that an officer involved in the investigation sends to the Crown Prosecution Service such information as is specified in the guidance: Code C Guidance note 16AB.

The giving of a warning or the service of the Notice of Intended Prosecution required by the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 1 (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1028) does not amount to informing a detainee he may be prosecuted for an offence and so does not preclude further questioning in relation to that offence: Code C Guidance note 16B.

4 Code C para 16.1. See, however, Code C para 11.6; and PARA 960 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'mentally vulnerable', and as to the meaning of 'mental disorder', see PARA 940 note 9 ante.

6 For the meaning of 'appropriate adult' see PARA 940 note 9 ante. The provisions of Code C paras 16.2-16.5 (see the text and notes 10-30 infra) must be complied with in the appropriate adult's presence if he is already at the police station; and if he is not at the police station then these provisions must be complied with again in his presence when he arrives unless the detainee has been released: Code C para 16.6. There is, however, no power under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to detain a person and delay action under Code C paras 16.2-16.5 solely to await the arrival of the appropriate adult: Code C Guidance note 16C. After charge, bail cannot be refused, or release on bail delayed, simply because an appropriate adult is not available, unless the absence of that adult provides the custody officer with the necessary grounds to authorise detention after charge under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38 (as amended) (see PARA 944 ante): Code C Guidance note 16C.

7 Code C para 16.1.

8 le under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37(7)(a) (as substituted) (see PARA 941 ante).

9 Code C para 16.1B. In such circumstances, the detainee should be informed that he is being released to enable the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 37B (as added) (see PARA 942 ante): Code C para 16.1B.

10 Code C para 16.2. See Code C Guidance note 16B; and note 3 supra.

11 See Code C Annex C.

The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 34, 36, 37 (as amended) describe the conditions under which adverse inferences may be drawn from a person's failure or refusal to say anything about his involvement in the offence when interviewed, after being charged or informed he may be prosecuted: see PARAS 1552-1554 post. These provisions are subject to an overriding restriction on the ability of a court or jury to draw adverse inferences from a person's silence. This restriction applies:

- 428 (1) to any detainee at a police station who, before being interviewed or being charged or informed he may be prosecuted, has asked for legal advice (Code C Annex C para 1(a)(i)), not been allowed an opportunity to consult a solicitor, including the duty solicitor (Code C Annex C para 1(a)(ii)), and not changed his mind about wanting legal advice (Code C Annex C para 1(a)(iii)); and
- 429 (2) to any person charged with, or informed that he may be prosecuted for, an offence who has had brought to his notice a written statement made by another person or the content of an interview with another person which relates to that offence (Code C Annex C para 1(b)(i)), is interviewed about that offence (Code C Annex C para 1(b)(ii)), or makes a written statement about that offence (Code C Annex C para 1(b)(iii)).

Note that the condition in Code C Annex C para 1(a)(ii) (see head (1) supra) will apply when a detainee who has asked for legal advice is interviewed before speaking to a solicitor but will not apply if he declines to ask for the duty solicitor: Code C Annex C para 1(a).

As to the limitation of the application of these provisions to detainees at police stations see Code C Guidance note 10C; and PARA 959 ante. As to interviews see Code C paras 11.1A-11.20; and PARAS 960-963 ante. As to the right to legal advice see Code C paras 6.1-6.17; and PARA 953 ante. As to a person who changes his mind about wanting legal advice see Code C para 6.6(d); and PARA 953 text and note 30 ante. As to the bringing to a person's notice of a written statement made by another person or the content of an interview with another person which relates to the offence in connection with which the first person has been charged or in respect of which he has been informed he may be prosecuted, and as to interviews of the first person in connection with such an offence, see Code C paras 16.4, 16.5; and the text and notes 21-30 infra. As to the making of a written statement in respect of such an offence see Code C Annex D paras 4, 9; and PARA 966 ante.

12 Code C para 16.2.

13 When a requirement to caution arises at a time when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies, the caution must be: 'You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence' (Code C Annex C para 2).

14 Code C Annex C para 3.

15 Code C Annex C para 3. Code C contains a suggested framework to help explain changes in the position on drawing adverse inferences from silence, as follows:

- 430 (1) if the restriction begins to apply, the changed position should be explained in terms that 'The caution you were previously given no longer applies. This is because after that caution' [either] 'you asked to speak to a solicitor but have not yet been allowed an opportunity to speak to a solicitor' (Code C Annex C Guidance note C2(a)(i)) [or] 'you have been charged/informed you may be prosecuted' (Code C Annex C Guidance note C2(a)(ii)). 'This means that from now on, adverse inferences cannot be drawn at court and your defence will not be harmed just because you choose to say nothing. Please listen carefully to the caution I am about to give you because it will apply from now on. You will see that it does not say anything about your defence being harmed' (Code C Annex C Guidance note C2(a));
- 431 (2) if the restriction ceases to apply before or at the time the person is charged or informed he may be prosecuted, the changed position should be explained in terms that 'The caution you were previously given no longer applies. This is because after that caution you have been allowed an opportunity to speak to a solicitor. Please listen carefully to the caution I am about to give you because it will apply from now on. It explains how your defence at court may be affected if you choose to say nothing' (Code C Annex C Guidance note C2(b)).

The restriction on drawing inferences from silence does not apply to a person who has not been detained and who therefore cannot be prevented from seeking legal advice if he wants to: Code C Annex C Guidance note 1. See further see Code C paras 3.15, 10.2; and PARAS 949, 959 ante.

31 It is in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 38(6) (as substituted) (see PARA 944 ante).

32 Code C para 16.7. Except as in Code C para 16.7, neither a juvenile's behaviour nor the nature of the offence with which he is charged provides grounds for the custody officer to decide it is impracticable to arrange the juvenile's transfer to local authority care: Code C Guidance note 16D. Similarly, the lack of secure local authority accommodation does not make it impracticable to transfer the juvenile: Code C Guidance note 16D. The availability of secure accommodation is only a factor in relation to a juvenile aged 12 or over when the local authority accommodation would not be adequate to protect the public from serious harm from him: Code C Guidance note 16D. The obligation to transfer a juvenile to local authority accommodation applies as much to a juvenile charged during the daytime as to a juvenile to be held overnight, subject to a requirement to bring the juvenile before a court under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46 (as amended) (see PARA 1043 post): Code C Guidance note 16D.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(ix) Charge/1043. Detention after charge.

1043. Detention after charge.

A person who is charged with an offence<sup>1</sup> and after being charged is kept in police detention<sup>2</sup> or is detained by a local authority<sup>3</sup> must be brought before a magistrates' court<sup>4</sup>. If he is to be brought before a magistrates' court in the local justice area<sup>5</sup> in which the police station at which he was charged is situated, he must be brought before such a court as soon as is practicable and in any event not later than the first sitting after he is charged with the offence<sup>6</sup>. If no magistrates' court in that area is due to sit either on the day on which he is charged or on the next day, the custody officer<sup>7</sup> for the police station at which he was charged must inform the designated officer in the area that there is a person in the area<sup>8</sup> who is required to be so brought before a magistrates' court<sup>9</sup>.

If the person charged is to be brought before a magistrates' court in a local justice area other than that in which the police station at which he was charged is situated, he must be removed to that area as soon as is practicable and brought before such a court as soon as is practicable after his arrival in the area and in any event not later than the first sitting of a magistrates' court in that area after his arrival in the area<sup>10</sup>. If no magistrates' court in that area is due to sit either on the day on which the person arrives in the area or on the next day, he must be taken to a police station in the area<sup>11</sup> and the custody officer at that station must inform the designated officer for the area that there is a person in the area<sup>12</sup> who must be so brought before a magistrates' court<sup>13</sup>.

Where the designated officer for a local justice area has been informed that there is a person in the area who must be brought before a magistrates' court<sup>14</sup>, he must arrange for a magistrates' court to sit not later than the day next following the relevant day<sup>15</sup>.

2 Ibid s 46(1)(b)(i). For the meaning of 'in police detention' see PARA 939 note 9 ante.

3 Ibid s 46(1)(b)(ii). The reference in the text to a person being detained by a local authority is a reference to his being detained in pursuance of arrangements made under s 38(6) (see PARA 944 ante): s 46(1)(b)(ii).

4 Ibid s 46(1). Nothing in s 46 (as amended) requires a person who is in hospital to be brought before a court if he is not well enough: s 46(9).

5 As to local justice areas see the Courts Act 2003 s 8; and MAGISTRATES.

6 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46(2) (s 46(2)-(8) amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 282(1)-(8)). Where a person has been charged with an offence at a police station, any requirement imposed under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (ss 34-52) (as amended) (see PARA 938 et seq ante) for the person to appear or be brought before a magistrates' court is taken to be satisfied if the person appears or is brought before a justices' clerk in order for the clerk to conduct a hearing under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 50 (see PARA 1101 post): Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 47A (added by the Crime and Disorder Act 1984 s 119, Sch 8 para 62; and amended by the Courts Act 2003 Sch 8 para 284).

7 As to custody officers see PARA 939 ante.

8 I.e. a person to whom the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 46(2) (as amended) (see the text and notes 5-6 supra) applies: s 46(3) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

10 Ibid s 46(4) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

11 Ibid s 46(5)(a) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

12 Ie a person to whom ibid s 46(4) (as amended) (see the text and note 10 supra) applies: s 46(5)(b) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

13 Ibid s 46(5)(b) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

14 Ie either informed under ibid s 46(3) (as amended) that there is a person in the area to whom s 46(2) (as amended) applies (s 46(6)(a) (as amended: see note 6 supra)) or informed under s 46(5) (as amended) that there is a person in the area to whom s 46(4) (as amended) applies (s 46(6)(b) (as so amended)). See the text and notes 5-13 supra.

15 Ibid s 46(6) (as amended: see note 6 supra). For these purposes, 'the relevant day' means either the day on which the person was charged (in relation to a person who is to be brought before a magistrates' court in the local justice area in which the police station at which he was charged is situated) (s 46(7)(a) (as so amended)) or the day on which he arrives in the relevant local justice area (in relation to a person who is to be brought before a magistrates' court in any other local justice area) (s 46(7)(b) (as so amended)). Where the day next following the relevant day is Christmas Day, Good Friday or a Sunday, the duty of the designated officer under s 46(6) (as amended) is a duty to arrange for a magistrates' court to sit not later than the first day after the relevant day which is not one of those days: s 46(8) (as so amended). As to the clerk's duty under s 46(6) (as amended) see also R v Avon Magistrates' Courts Committee, ex p Broome [1988] 1 WLR 1246, 152 JP 529, DC.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(x) Cautions, Reprimands and Warnings/1044. Conditional cautions.

(x) Cautions, Reprimands and Warnings

1044. Conditional cautions.

A 'conditional caution' is a caution which is given in respect of an offence and which has conditions attached to it with which the offender must comply<sup>1</sup>. A conditional caution may be given only in respect of a person aged 18 or over<sup>2</sup> and may be given, by an authorised person<sup>3</sup>, only if:

- 1570 (1) the authorised person has evidence that the offender has committed an offence<sup>4</sup>;
- 1571 (2) a relevant prosecutor decides that there is sufficient evidence to charge the offender with the offence<sup>5</sup> and that a conditional caution should be given to the offender in respect of it<sup>6</sup>;
- 1572 (3) the offender admits to the authorised person that he committed the offence<sup>7</sup>;
- 1573 (4) the authorised person explains the effect of the conditional caution to the offender and warns him that failure to comply with any of the conditions attached to the caution may result in his being prosecuted for the offence<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1574 (5) the offender signs a document which contains details of the offence<sup>9</sup>, an admission by him that he committed the offence<sup>10</sup>, his consent to being given the conditional caution<sup>11</sup>, and the conditions attached to the caution<sup>12</sup>.

The conditions which may be attached to such a caution are those which have the object of facilitating the rehabilitation of the offender<sup>13</sup>, or ensuring that he makes reparation for the offence<sup>14</sup>, or both.

If the offender fails without reasonable excuse to comply with any of the conditions attached to the conditional caution, criminal proceedings may be instituted against him for the offence in question<sup>15</sup>; and where such proceedings are instituted the conditional caution ceases to have effect<sup>16</sup>.

1 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 22(2). The Secretary of State has prepared a code of practice in relation to conditional cautions: see s 25; and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Conditional Cautions: Code of Practice) Order 2004, SI 2004/1683.

3 I.e. a constable (ibid ss 22(4)(a), 27), an investigating officer (s 22(4)(b)) or a person authorised by a relevant prosecutor for these purposes (s 22(4)(c)). 'Investigating officer' means an officer of Revenue and Customs appointed in accordance with the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 2(1) (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE; INCOME TAXATION) or a person designated as an investigating officer under the Police Reform Act 2002 s 38 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 529); Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 27 (amended by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 ss 50(6), 52(2), Sch 4 para 129, Sch 5). 'Relevant prosecutor' means the Attorney General, the Director of the Serious Fraud Office, the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions, the Director of Public Prosecutions, a Secretary of State or a person who is specified in an order made by the Secretary of State as being a relevant prosecutor for the purposes of the Criminal Justice

Act 2003 Pt 3 (ss 22-27) (as amended): s 27 (as so amended). As to prosecution authorities see PARA 1065 et seq post. As to officers of Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

UPDATE

1044 Conditional cautions

TEXT AND NOTES--A condition that the offender pay a financial penalty (a 'financial penalty condition') may not be attached to a conditional caution given in respect of an offence unless the offence is one that is prescribed, or of a description prescribed, in an order made by the Secretary of State: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23A(1) (s 23A added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 17(4) (s 17 in force in relation to specified police areas: SI 2009/1679, SI 2009/2774)). See the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Conditional Cautions: Financial Penalties) Order 2009, SI 2009/2773. An order under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23A(1) must prescribe, in respect of each offence or description of offence in the order, the maximum amount of the penalty that may be specified under head (a) below: s 23A(2). The amount that may be prescribed in respect of any offence must not exceed (1) one quarter of the amount of the maximum fine for which a person is liable on summary conviction of the offence, or (2) £250, whichever is the lower: s 23A(3). The Secretary of State may by order amend s 23A(3) by substituting a different fraction in head (1) or substituting a different figure in head (2): s 23A(4). Where a financial penalty condition is attached to a conditional caution, a relevant prosecutor must also specify (a) the amount of the penalty, (b) the person to whom the financial penalty is to be paid and how it may be paid: s 23A(5) (amended by Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 60(2)). To comply with the condition, the offender must pay the penalty in accordance with the provision specified under head (a) above: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23A(6) (amended by Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 60(3)). Where a financial penalty is (in accordance with the provision specified under head (b) above) paid to a person other than a designated officer for a local justice area, the person to whom it is paid must give the payment to such an officer: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23A(6A) (added by Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 60(4)).

The conditions which may be attached to a conditional caution include (i) (subject to the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23A) a condition that the offender pay a financial penalty, or (ii) a condition that the offender attend at a specified place at specified times: s 22(3A) (s 22(3A)-(3C) added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 17(3) (in force in relation to specified police areas: SI 2009/1679, SI 2009/2774)). 'Specified' means specified by a relevant prosecutor: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 22(3A). Conditions attached by virtue of head (ii) above may not require the offender to attend for more than 20 hours in total, not including any attendance required by conditions attached for the purpose of facilitating the offender's rehabilitation: s 22(3B) (not yet in force). The Secretary of State may by order amend s 22(3B) by substituting a different figure: s 22(3C) (not yet in force).

A relevant prosecutor may, with the consent of the offender, vary the conditions attached to a conditional caution by (A) modifying or omitting any of the conditions, or (B) adding a condition: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 23B (added by Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 61).

NOTE 1--See now the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Conditional Cautions: Code of Practice) Order 2010, SI 2010/133.

NOTES 1, 15--If a constable has reasonable grounds for believing that the offender has failed, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of the conditions attached to the conditional caution, he may arrest him without warrant: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24A(1) (ss 24A, 24B added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 18). A person arrested under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24A must be (1) charged with the offence in question; (2) released without charge and on bail to enable a decision to be made as to whether he should be charged with the offence; or (3) released without charge and without bail, with or without any variation in the conditions attached to the caution: s 24A(2). Section 24A(2) also applies in the case of (a) a person who, having been released on bail under head (2) above, returns to a police station to answer bail or is otherwise in police detention at a police station; (b) a person who, having been released on bail under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 30A as applied by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B below, attends at a police station to answer bail or is otherwise in police detention at a police station; (c) a person who is arrested under the 1984 Act s 30D or s 46A as applied by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B below: s 24A(3). Where a person is released under head (2) above, the custody officer must inform him that he is being released to enable a decision to be made as to whether he should be charged with the offence in question: s 24A(4). A person arrested under s 24A, or any other person in whose case head (2) above, applies, may be kept in police detention (i) to enable him to be dealt with in accordance with s 24A(2), or (ii) where applicable, to enable the power under the 1984 Act s 37D(1) (see PARA 943), as applied by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B below, to be exercised; if the person is not in a fit state to enable him to be so dealt with, or to enable that power to be exercised, he may be kept in police detention until he is: s 24A(5). The power under head (i) above, includes power to keep the person in police detention if it is necessary to do so for the purpose of investigating whether he has failed, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of the conditions attached to the conditional caution: s 24A(6). Section 24A(2) must be complied with as soon as practicable after the person arrested arrives at the police station or, in the case of a person arrested at the police station, as soon as practicable after the arrest: s 24A(7). Section 24A(2) does not require a person who falls within head (a) or (b) above, and is in police detention in relation to a matter other than the conditional caution, to be released if he is liable to be kept in detention in relation to that other matter: s 27A(8). 'Police detention' has the same meaning as in the 1984 Act s 118(2) (see PARA 939): s 24A(9).

In the case of a person arrested under s 24A, the 1984 Act ss 30-31 (see PARAS 933, 934), s 34(1)-(5) (see PARA 945), s 36 (see PARA 939), s 37(4)-(6) (see PARA 941), s 38 (see PARA 944), s 39 (see PARA 946), s 55A (see PARA 1008) apply with the modifications specified in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B(3) and with such further modifications as are necessary, as they apply in the case of a person arrested for an offence: s 24B(1), (2). The modifications are (A) in the 1984 Act s 30CA(5)(a), for the reference to being involved in the investigation of the offence mentioned in that provision substitute a reference to being involved in the investigation of the offence in respect of which the person was given the conditional caution, or in investigating whether the person has failed, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of the conditions attached to the conditional caution; (B) in s 36(5), (7), for the references to being involved in the investigation of an offence for which the person is in police detention substitute references to being involved in the investigation of the offence in respect of which the person was given the conditional caution, or in investigating whether the person has failed, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any of the conditions attached to the conditional caution; (C) in s 38(1)(a)(iii), (iv), for 'arrested for' substitute 'charged with'; (D) in s 39(2), (3), for the references to an offence substitute references to a failure to comply with conditions attached to the conditional caution: 2003 Act s 24B(3). The 1984 Act s 40 (see PARA 941) applies to a person in police detention by virtue of s 24A as it applies to a person in police detention in connection with the investigation of an offence, but omitting s 40(8), (8A), and in s 40(9), for the reference to s 37(9) or s 37D(5) substitute a reference to the second sentence of the 2003 Act s 24A(5): s 24B(4). The 1984 Act ss 37D(1)-(3) (see PARA 941), 46A (see PARA 941), 47 (see PARA 935) apply to a person released on bail under the 2003 Act s 24A(2) (b) as they apply to a person released on bail under the 1984 Act s 37: 2003 Act s 24B(5). The 1984 Act s 54 applies in the case of a person who falls within the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24A(3) and is detained in a police station under s 24A as it applies in the case of a person who falls within s 34(7) and is detained at a police station under s 37: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B(6). The 1984 Act s 54A (see PARA 1023) applies with the following modifications in the case of a person who is detained in a police station under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24A: (i) in the 1984 Act s 54A(1)(a), (12), after 'as a person involved in the commission of an offence' add 'or as having failed to comply with any of the conditions attached to his conditional caution'; (ii) in s 54A(9)(a), after 'the investigation of an offence' add ',the investigation of whether the person in question has failed to comply with any of the conditions attached to his conditional caution': Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 24B(7).

NOTE 1--Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 25 amended: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 58, Sch 15 Pt 2; Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 para 62.

TEXT AND NOTES 13, 14--Such conditions may also be those which have the object of punishing the offender: Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 22(3) (substituted by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 17(1) (in force in relation to specified police areas: SI 2009/1679)).

1045. Reprimands and warnings.

In certain circumstances where a person aged under 18 has admitted an offence and there is evidence that would lead to a conviction but it would not be in the public interest to prosecute, he may be given a reprimand or warning by a constable and, where a warning is given, the constable must refer the person to a youth offending team<sup>1</sup> which must assess him and arrange for him to participate in a rehabilitation programme<sup>2</sup>.

ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(xi) Restrictions on Proceedings/1046. Restrictions on vexatious proceedings.

(xi) Restrictions on Proceedings

1046. Restrictions on vexatious proceedings.

If, on an application made by the Attorney General, the High Court is satisfied that any person has habitually and persistently<sup>1</sup> and without any reasonable ground instituted vexatious<sup>2</sup> prosecutions (whether against the same person or different persons), the court may, after hearing that person or giving him an opportunity of being heard, make a criminal proceedings order (that is, an order that no information may be laid before a justice of the peace by the person against whom the order is made without the leave of the High Court and no application for leave to prefer a bill of indictment may be made by him without the leave of the High Court)<sup>3</sup>. An order so made may provide that it is to cease to have effect at the end of a specified period, but otherwise remains in force indefinitely<sup>4</sup>. Leave for the laying of an information or for an application for leave to prefer a bill of indictment by a person who is the subject of such an order may not be given unless the High Court is satisfied that the institution of the prosecution is not an abuse of the criminal process and that there are reasonable grounds for the institution of the prosecution by the applicant<sup>5</sup>. No appeal lies from a decision of the High Court refusing such leave<sup>6</sup>.

1 'Habitually and persistently' connote an element of repetition which although needing to be present does not need to be over a long period: A-G v Barker [2000] 2 FCR 1, [2000] 1 FLR 759, DC. Also see A-G v Covey, A-G v Matthews [2001] EWCA Civ 254, (2001) Times, 2 March (cumulative effect of a person's conduct on a number of different defendants satisfied the requirement of repetition, notwithstanding that he had not repeatedly brought proceedings against the same party on the same issue, and was a valid factor to consider in the making of an order under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 42 (as amended)).

As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 In considering whether any proceedings are vexatious, the court must look at the whole history of the matter; and proceedings may be held to be vexatious notwithstanding that in each individual case taken singly the pleading discloses a cause of action: see Re Vernazza [1959] 2 All ER 200, [1959] 1 WLR 622; affd [1960] 1 QB 197, [1960] 1 All ER 183, CA; revsd in part on other grounds sub nom A-G v Vernazza [1960] AC 965, [1960] 3 All ER 97, HL.

The court considers the number, general character and result of the proceedings alleged to be vexatious, and may make an order even though there may have been reasonable grounds for the proceedings in each case considered by itself: Re Chaffers, ex p A-G (1897) 76 LT 351. See also Re Jones, Re Vexatious Actions Act (1902) 18 TLR 476.

3 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 42(1)(c), (1A) (s 42(1)(c), (1A), (3A) added, and s 42(4) amended, by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 24(1), (2)(c), (3), (5), (6)). As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 ante. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The High Court may also make an all proceedings order: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 42(1) (as so amended). For these purposes, an 'all proceedings order' means an order which has the combined effect of a criminal proceedings order and a civil proceedings order: see s 42(1A) (as added); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 258.

A copy of any order made pursuant to these provisions must be published in the London Gazette: s 42(5).

1046 Restrictions on vexatious proceedings

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(xi) Restrictions on Proceedings/1047. Limitation of time in criminal proceedings.

1047. Limitation of time in criminal proceedings.

Except where there are statutory provisions to the contrary<sup>1</sup>, criminal prosecutions may be commenced at any time after the commission of the offence<sup>2</sup>. A prosecution is commenced when an information is laid before a justice of the peace<sup>3</sup> (or, as from a day to be appointed, when a written charge is issued by a public prosecutor<sup>4</sup>) or, if there is no information (or written charge), when the defendant is brought before a justice to answer the charge<sup>5</sup> or, if there are no preliminary proceedings before a justice, when an indictment is preferred<sup>6</sup>.

Prolonged delay in starting or conducting criminal proceedings may be an abuse of process as, for example, when substantial delay has been caused by some improper use of procedure by, or inefficiency on the part of, the prosecution and the defendant has not himself caused or contributed to it and has been prejudiced by it, in which case the judge may stay proceedings for abuse of process<sup>7</sup>. The jurisdiction to decline to allow criminal proceedings to continue should be used sparingly<sup>8</sup>.

1 See eg the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s 19(1) (no proceedings in respect of an offence under the Act may be commenced after the expiration of three years from the commission of the offence or one year from its discovery by the prosecutor whichever is the earlier: see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 499); and the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 146A(1)-(3) (as added) (except as otherwise provided by the customs and excise Acts, proceedings for an indictable offence under those Acts may not be commenced after the expiration of the period of 20 years, beginning with the day on which the offence was committed; and proceedings for a summary offence under those Acts may not be commenced after the end of the period of three years beginning with the day on which it was committed but, subject to that, may be commenced at any time within six months from the date on which sufficient evidence to warrant the proceedings came to the knowledge of the prosecuting authority: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1198). As to the restrictions on the institution of proceedings for conspiracy see PARA 70 ante. Except as otherwise expressly provided, a magistrates' court may not try an information or written charge for a summary offence unless the information was laid, or the written charge issued, within six months from the time when the offence was committed: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 127(1); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 589.

2 Unless the statute otherwise provides, where there is a time limited for the commencement of a prosecution, the day on which the offence was committed must be excluded in the computation of the prescribed time: Radcliffe v Bartholomew [1892] 1 QB 161; and see Pellew v Wonford Inhabitants (1829) 9 B & C 134; Williams v Burgess (1840) 12 Ad & El 635. Sundays are to be included in the computation of time, unless the statute prescribing the time expressly excludes them: R v Middlesex Justices (1843) 2 Dowl NS 719. A period of limitation does not exclude, where otherwise admissible, evidence of other acts done by the accused more than the prescribed period before the prosecution was commenced: R v Shellaker [1914] 1 KB 414, 9 Cr App Rep 240, CCA.

3 R v Willace (1797) 1 East PC 186, CCR. Where an information, laid in time, is amended after the expiration of the time, the amendment relating to the date when the offence is alleged to have been committed and not charging a different offence from that charged in the information as originally laid, the consequent proceedings are in time: R v Wakeley [1920] 1 KB 688, CCA. Proof of the issue of a warrant which is not executed within the time limited for commencing the prosecution is not proof that the prosecution is commenced in time, unless proof is also given of the information: R v Phillips (1818) Russ & Ry 369, CCR; R v Parker and Smith (1864) Le & Ca 459, CCR; R v Hull (1860) 2 F & F 16.

4 See the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29(1) (not yet in force); and PARA 915 ante.

5 R v Austin (1845) 1 Car & Kir 621.

6 R v Killminster (1835) 7 C & P 228. If an indictment is presented within the time limited and is ignored, it would seem that the prosecution has been commenced in time, and another indictment found after the expiration of the limited time would be valid: R v Killminster supra.

7 R v Grays Justices, ex p Graham [1982] QB 1239, 75 Cr App Rep 229, DC; R v Oxford City Justices, ex p Smith (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 200, DC; R v West London Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p Anderson (1984) 80 Cr App Rep 143, DC; Bell v DPP [1985] AC 937, sub nom Bell v DPP of Jamaica [1985] 2 All ER 585, PC.

In criminal proceedings mere delay which gave rise to prejudice and unfairness might by itself amount to an abuse of the process; and in some circumstances prejudice would be presumed from substantial delay; but, in the absence of a presumption, where there was substantial delay, it would be for the prosecution to justify it: R v Bow Street Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p DPP, R v Bow Street Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p Cherry (1989) 91 Cr App Rep 283, 154 JP 237, DC. See also Daventry District Council v Olins (1990) 154 JP 478. Justices must consider whether a fair trial remains possible and not whether the delay is justifiable: R v Telford Justices, ex p Badhan [1991] 2 QB 78, [1991] 2 All ER 854, DC; R v JAK [1992] Crim LR 30. A trial based on even a very long delayed complaint by an alleged victim of sexual abuse within a home would only rarely amount to an abuse of the court's process: R v LPB (1990) 91 Cr App Rep 359. However, the judge must direct the jury appropriately as to the delay and its relevance: R v B [1996] Crim LR 406, CA; R v Wilkinson [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 81, CA. Where there has been no unjustifiable delay, manipulation or misuse of process by the prosecution, justices should first inquire into the full facts of the delay from both the prosecution and the defence: R v Crawley Justices, ex p DPP (1991) 155 JP 841, DC. Where the conduct of the defendant is alleged to have contributed to a delay, such conduct must be taken into account but is not necessarily a bar to the grant of a stay of proceedings: A-G of Hong Kong v Cheung Wai-bun [1994] 1 AC 1, [1993] 2 All ER 510, PC. See also R v Dutton [1994] Crim LR 910, CA; R v Henry [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 161, CA (judge's direction on possible prejudice of delay on defence); and R v Liverpool City Justices, ex p Price (1998) 162 JP 766, DC (very exceptional circumstances must exist for the Divisional Court to intervene and quash a decision by justices in the exercise of their discretion not to stay criminal proceedings for abuse of process); Charles v State of Trinidad and Tobago, Carter v State of Trinidad and Tobago [2000] 1 WLR 384, PC (prosecution's decision to continue with a third trial against a defendant who had spent almost a decade in prison on a murder charge was an abuse of process).

8 R v Oxford City Justices, ex p Smith (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 200, DC. As to when proceedings may be stayed because of delay see A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1990) [1992] QB 630 at 643-644, 95 Cr App Rep 296 at 302-303, CA, per Lord Lane CJ (stays imposed on the grounds of delay should be employed only in exceptional circumstances). Even where the delay can be said to be unjustifiable, the imposition of a permanent stay should be the exception rather than the rule. Still more rare should be cases where a stay can properly be imposed in the absence of any fault on the part of the complainant or prosecution. Delay due merely to the complexity of the case or contributed to by the actions of the defendant himself should never be the foundation for a stay. No stay should be imposed unless the defendant shows on the balance of probabilities that owing to the delay he will suffer serious prejudice to the extent that no fair trial can be held: in other words, that the continuance of the prosecution amounts to a misuse of the process of the court. In assessing whether there is likely to be prejudice and if so whether it can properly be described as serious, there should be borne in mind the power of the judge to regulate the admissibility of evidence, the trial process itself, which should ensure that all relevant factual issues arising from delay will be placed before the jury as part of the evidence for its consideration, and the powers of the judge to give appropriate directions to the jury before it considers its verdict. See also R v S [2006] All ER (D) 379 (Mar), CA, in which it was held that in considering whether to grant a stay, the judge should bear in mind: (1) that even where delay was unjustifiable, a permanent stay should be the exception rather than the rule; (2) that where there was no fault on the part of the complainant or the prosecution, it would be very rare for a stay to be granted; (3) that no stay should be granted in the absence of serious prejudice to the defence so that no fair trial could be held; (4) that when assessing possible serious prejudice, the judge should bear in mind his power to regulate the admissibility of evidence, and that the trial process itself should ensure that all the relevant factual issues which arose from delay would be placed before the jury; and (5) that if, after considering all those factors, the judge concluded that a fair trial would be possible, a stay should not be granted.

See also R v E [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 88, CA; R v Sawoniuk [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 220, [2000] Crim LR 506, CA (proceedings commenced 56 years after the commission of the alleged crimes would not be stayed). The right to a fair and public hearing under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 includes a reasonable time requirement which may result in proceedings being stayed, but only if a fair hearing is no longer possible, or it is for any compelling reason unfair to try the defendant: A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2001) [2003] UKHL 68, [2004] 2 AC 72, [2004] 1 All ER 1049. See also R v Henworth [2001] EWCA Crim 120, [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 47 (there is no principle of law that where the prosecution of a criminal offence has failed twice, it is necessarily an abuse of process to hold a third trial). The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

UPDATE

1047 Limitation of time in criminal proceedings

NOTE 1--Where a defendant is acquitted of an offence by a court of a member state on the basis that prosecution for the offence was time barred, the Convention implementing the Schengen Agreement art 54 applies so as to preclude prosecution of the defendant on the same facts in another member state: Case C-467/04 Criminal proceedings against Gasparini [2007] 1 CMLR 367, ECJ. Where different acts are carried out in two different member states, such acts ought not to be regarded as 'same acts' within the meaning of the Convention implementing the Schengen Agreement art 54 merely because the competent national court finds that those acts are linked together by the same criminal intention: Case C-367/05 Re Criminal proceedings against Kraaijenbrink [2007] 3 CMLR 1207, [2007] All ER (D) 275 (Jul), ECJ.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/13. ARREST AND DETENTION/(6) TREATMENT OF DETAINED PERSONS/(xii) Extradition/1048. Extradition.

(xii) Extradition

1048. Extradition.

Extradition is the handing over in accordance with law by one country to another country of a person who is accused of having committed an offence over which the latter country has jurisdiction or who has been convicted of such an offence and is unlawfully at large: it is a transaction between states facilitated by the existence of extradition arrangements contained in treaties<sup>1</sup>.

There are two categories of procedure under the law of the United Kingdom for extradition from the United Kingdom to another territory; and the relevant category depends on the territory involved<sup>2</sup>. The Secretary of State has power by order to designate territories for the purposes of each<sup>3</sup>.

In the first category, the procedure commences where a judicial authority with the function of issuing arrest warrants in a category 1 territory issues such a warrant, which is received by a designated authority in the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup>. If the designated authority issues a certificate that the authority issuing the warrant is a judicial authority in a category 1 territory and has the function of issuing warrants in that territory<sup>5</sup>, the warrant is executed by a constable, an officer of Revenue and Customs or (in specified circumstances) a service policeman<sup>6</sup>. The arrested person is given a copy of the warrant and is brought as soon as practicable before a designated District Judge (Magistrates' Courts)<sup>7</sup>. The judge conducts an initial hearing to decide whether, on the balance of probabilities, the person brought before him is the person named in the warrant: if he decides that the person brought before him is the person named in the warrant, he must fix a date for an extradition hearing and remand the person in custody or on bail<sup>8</sup>. At the extradition hearing the judge decides whether the offence specified in the warrant is an extradition offence and if it is not the judge must discharge the person<sup>9</sup>. If the offence specified in the warrant is an extradition offence, the judge must decide whether extradition is barred by reason of one of a number of considerations<sup>10</sup> or whether (in a case following conviction) the person must be discharged because the conviction was in his non-deliberate absence and he would not be entitled to a re-trial, in which case he must be discharged<sup>11</sup>. If extradition is not so barred or (as the case may be) the person is not so discharged, the judge must proceed to decide whether extradition would be compatible with the person's Convention rights<sup>12</sup>. If the judge decides that extradition would not be incompatible with those rights, he must order extradition and remand the person in custody or on bail<sup>13</sup>.

In the second category, on receipt of a valid request for extradition of a person from a category 2 territory the Secretary of State must issue a certificate to the effect that the request is made in the approved way, and must send to the appropriate judge the extradition request, his certificate and a copy of any relevant Order in Council<sup>14</sup>. On receipt of such documents the judge may issue a warrant for the arrest of the person whose extradition is requested if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the offence in respect of which extradition is requested is an extradition offence and there is evidence that would either justify the issue of a warrant for the arrest of a person accused of the offence within the judge's jurisdiction, if the person whose extradition is requested is accused of the commission of the offence, or justify the issue of a warrant for the arrest of a person unlawfully at large after conviction of the offence within the judge's jurisdiction, if the person whose extradition is requested is alleged to be unlawfully at large after conviction of the offence<sup>15</sup>. Such a warrant may be executed by the person to whom it is directed or by any police officer or officer of Revenue and Customs or (in specified circumstances) by a service policeman<sup>16</sup>. A person so arrested must be brought as soon as practicable before the appropriate judge unless granted bail by a constable or unless the Secretary of State decides that the extradition request is not to be proceeded with<sup>17</sup>. When the person first appears before the appropriate judge the judge must fix a date for the extradition hearing and remand him in custody or on bail<sup>18</sup>. If the judge is satisfied at the extradition hearing as to technical matters, he must proceed to decide whether on the balance of probabilities the person's extradition to a category 2 territory is barred by reason of a number of considerations<sup>19</sup>.

If the judge decides that extradition is not so barred, he must decide whether extradition is barred because there is insufficient evidence to make a case requiring an answer (if the person is accused, but has not been convicted, of the offence in question) or whether the person must be discharged because he was convicted in his non-deliberate absence and has no right of re-trial (if the person has been convicted and is unlawfully at large)<sup>20</sup>. If the judge decides such a person would have a right to re-trial, the judge must decide whether there is evidence sufficient to make a case requiring an answer by the person; if the judge decides that there is not, he must discharge the person<sup>21</sup>.

If extradition is not so barred or (as the case may be) the person is not so discharged, the judge must decide whether the person's extradition would be compatible with his Convention rights<sup>22</sup>. If he decides that it would not be incompatible with those rights, he must send the case to the Secretary of State for his decision whether the person is to be extradited and remand the person in custody or on bail<sup>23</sup>. The Secretary of State must order extradition unless he is prohibited from ordering extradition on specified grounds<sup>24</sup>.

Where a person's convictions are so recordable, there may also be recorded his convictions for any other offence in the same proceedings<sup>69</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'caution' means a caution given to a person in England and Wales or Northern Ireland in respect of an offence which, at the time when the caution is given, he has admitted: Police Act 1997 s 126(1); definition applied by the National Police Records (Recordable Offences) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1139, reg 3(2)(b).

2 For these purposes, 'reprimand' and 'warning' mean a reprimand or, as the case may be, a warning given under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 65 (as amended) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1235): National Police Records (Recordable Offences) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1139, reg 3(2)(c).

3 The reference to offences punishable with imprisonment is to be construed without regard to any prohibition or restriction imposed by or under any enactment on the punishment of young offenders: ibid reg 3(2)(a).

4 Ibid reg 3(1) (made under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 27(4), which empowers the Secretary of State by regulations to make provision for recording in national police records convictions, cautions, reprimands or warnings for such offences as are specified in the regulations). Any such regulations must be made by statutory instrument and are subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 27(5).

At the date at which this volume states the law no day had been appointed for the purposes of these provisions. The taking of fingerprints by virtue of these provisions does not count for any of the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 as taking them in the course of the investigation of an offence by the police: s 61(6C) (as so prospectively added). Fingerprints taken from a person by virtue of s 61(6A) (prospectively added) must be destroyed as soon as they have fulfilled the purpose for which they were taken: s 64(1BA) (as so prospectively added). As to the destruction of fingerprints and other samples see PARA 1039 post.

33 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(7)(b).

34 Ie where fingerprints are taken by virtue of ibid s 61(6A) (prospectively added) (see the text and notes 26-30 supra).

35 Or, as from a day to be appointed, in a case where fingerprints are taken at a place other than a police station on the grounds that the person's identity is in question, the constable: ibid s 61(6A) (prospectively added: see note 26 supra); s 61(7A)(a) (as added (see note 36 infra); prospectively amended (see note 26 supra)).

36 Ibid s 61(7A)(a) (s 61(7A) added, and s 61(8) amended, by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(2), Sch 10 para 56; and the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(7A)(a) prospectively amended (see note 26 supra)); Code D para 4.7(c). 'Speculative search', in relation to a person's fingerprints or samples, means such a check against other fingerprints or samples or against information derived from other samples as is referred to in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 63A(1) (as added, substituted and amended) (see PARA 1038 post): s 65(1) (definition added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 58(4)). Fingerprints, footwear impressions or a DNA sample (and the information derived from it) taken from a person arrested on suspicion of being involved in a recordable offence, or charged with such an offence, or informed he will be reported for such an offence, may be the subject of a speculative search: Code D Guidance note 4B. This means that the fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample may be checked against other fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA records held by, or on behalf of, the police and other law enforcement authorities in, or outside, the United Kingdom, or held in connection with, or as a result of, an investigation of an offence inside or outside the United Kingdom: Code D Guidance note 4B. Fingerprints, footwear impressions and samples taken from a person suspected of committing a recordable offence but not arrested, charged or informed that he will be reported for it, may be subject to a speculative search only if the person consents in writing: Code D Guidance note 4B. The following is an example of a basic form of words: 'I consent to my fingerprints, footwear impressions and DNA sample and information derived from it being retained and used only for purposes related to the prevention and detection of a crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution either nationally or internationally. I understand that my fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample may be checked against other fingerprint, footwear impression and DNA records held by or on behalf of relevant law enforcement authorities, either nationally or internationally. I understand that once I have given my consent for my fingerprints, footwear impressions or DNA sample to be retained and used I cannot withdraw this consent': Code D Guidance note 4B. As to the retention and use of fingerprints taken with consent for elimination purposes see Code D Annex F; and PARAS 1039-1040 post.

A record must be made when a person has been informed under these provisions of the possibility that his fingerprints may be subject of a speculative search: Code D para 4.9. As to speculative searches see PARA 1038 post.

37 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(7A)(b) (as added: see note 36 supra). The fact that a person has been informed of the possibility that his fingerprints may be the subject of a speculative search must be referred to in his custody record: s 61(8) (as amended: see note 36 supra). As to custody records see PARA 940 ante.

38 Code D para 4.7(d). As to the destruction of fingerprints see PARA 1039 post.

39 Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 61(8) (as amended: see note 36 supra). As to fingerprint evidence generally see PARAS 1455, 1460 post.

40 Ibid s 61(8A) (prospectively added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 78(7)). At the date at which this volume states the law no day had been appointed for the commencement of these provisions.

1050. Courts of ordinary criminal jurisdiction.

The courts which exercise original criminal jurisdiction<sup>1</sup>, administering the ordinary criminal law in England and Wales, are: (1) the magistrates' courts (which include the youth courts)<sup>2</sup>; and (2) the Crown Court<sup>3</sup>. The former are inferior courts; and the latter is a superior court of record<sup>4</sup>, and part of the Supreme Court<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> As to any original criminal jurisdiction remaining in the High Court of Parliament see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 351 et seq.

NOTE 4--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(1) CRIMINAL JURISDICTION OF COURTS/1051. Magistrates' courts.

1051. Magistrates' courts.

In regard to criminal matters it is the function of magistrates' courts<sup>1</sup> to conduct the trial of summary offences<sup>2</sup> and of offences triable either way<sup>3</sup> which are not to be tried on indictment<sup>4</sup>, and to conduct preliminary hearings in regard to indictable offences and offences triable either way which are not to be tried summarily<sup>5</sup>. Youth courts (formerly known as juvenile courts) conduct the trials of most alleged juvenile offenders, even for offences that in the case of an adult are triable only on indictment, but in exceptional cases it may be necessary for juveniles to be tried on indictment<sup>5</sup> or in adult magistrates' courts<sup>6</sup>.

The jurisdiction of a magistrates' court over summary offences was previously limited to offences committed within its own commission area or within 500 yards of the boundary between that and another commission area, but this limitation has now been removed<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace and district judges, see PARAS 1098-1099 post; and as to the office of magistrates see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 501.

2 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(1) (as substituted and amended); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 524. As to trial of summary offences see PARA 1104 post; and MAGISTRATES.

3 See ibid s 2(3); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 501. As to the procedure for offences triable either way see PARAS 1103, 1105 et seq post; and as to determining the mode of trial see PARA 1102 post.

4 See MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 524.

5 See MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 654.

6 See CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1259 et seq. As to circumstances in which a juvenile defendant may be tried in an adult magistrates' court, see PARAS 1098 note 8, 1116 post.

7 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(1) (as substituted); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 524. A number of provisions still remain in force in which 'for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction' offences may be deemed to have been committed at any place where the offender may be found, etc, but these are now obsolete both in respect of indictable offences (see PARA 1052 post) and in respect of summary offences.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(1) CRIMINAL JURISDICTION OF COURTS/1052. The Crown Court.

1052. The Crown Court.

All proceedings on indictment must be brought before the Crown Court<sup>1</sup>. In addition, the Crown Court has jurisdiction to sentence or deal with persons committed to it by a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup> and to deal with certain appeals from magistrates' courts<sup>3</sup>.

1 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 46(1). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1; and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The jurisdiction of the Crown Court with respect to proceedings on indictment includes jurisdiction in proceedings on indictment for offences wherever committed, and in particular proceedings on indictment for offences within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England (Supreme Court Act 1981 s 46(2)); but as to limitations on the ambit of English criminal law itself see PARA 1054 post. See also COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 625 et seq.

There are, in addition to those courts administering the ordinary criminal law<sup>1</sup>, certain courts having special criminal jurisdiction. These are (1): courts-martial<sup>2</sup>, which have jurisdiction in respect of offences committed by persons (including civilians) subject to naval, military and air force law; (2) standing civilian courts<sup>3</sup> for the summary trial outside the United Kingdom of certain civilians subject to naval, military or air force law; and (3) the ecclesiastical courts, exercising a limited jurisdiction of a criminal nature over the clergy and other members of the Church of England<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARAS 1050-1052 ante. At a coroner's inquest into the death of a person who came by his death by murder, manslaughter or infanticide, the purpose of the proceedings does not include the finding of any person guilty of the murder, manslaughter or infanticide; and accordingly a coroner's inquisition may in no case charge a person with any of those offences: Coroners Act 1988 s 11(6). See further CORONERS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1025, 1046.

By the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 art 69, no proceedings by way of a criminal suit, other than those authorised by Pts IV, V and VI of that Measure, may be instituted against a person in the consistory court of a diocese or in the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, and no proceedings so authorised may be instituted except in accordance with those Parts. When brought into force, the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 44(2), Sch 1 paras 1 and 12 will confine such proceedings to those authorised by Pt VI of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 only.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1054. Territorial jurisdiction.

(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW

1054. Territorial jurisdiction.

English criminal law extends to the acts or omissions of individuals or corporations<sup>1</sup> of whatever nationality or status<sup>2</sup> within the territorial limits of England and Wales<sup>3</sup>. The general rule is that English criminal law applies only within those limits<sup>4</sup>. At common law, acts or omissions outside the realm cannot amount to offences under English law<sup>5</sup> and statutory provisions creating offences will ordinarily be presumed to have no extra-territorial effect<sup>6</sup>, but there are now many statutory exceptions to the general rule<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the criminal liability of corporations see PARA 38 ante.

2 This includes accredited foreign diplomats and other persons enjoying immunity from prosecution, because such persons are still required to comply with the law and their immunity from prosecution or punishment under English law may in some cases be waived by their governments: see PARA 42 et seq ante; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 283. As to jurisdictional immunities granted to visiting armed forces see PARA 46 ante; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 324.

This is not strictly speaking a matter concerning the jurisdiction of the courts, but rather one concerning the ambit or extent of the law itself. See Treacy v DPP [1971] AC 537 at 559, 55 Cr App Rep 113 at 136-137, HL, per Lord Diplock.

5 R v Keyn (1876) 2 Ex D 63, CCR. As to the basis of the common law rule see R v Page [1954] 1 QB 170 at 175, [1953] 2 All ER 1355 at 1356, C-MAC, per Lord Goddard CJ. As to offences committed partly within and partly outside England and Wales see PARA 1059 post.

6 'It has been recognised from time immemorial that there is a strong presumption that when Parliament, in an Act applying to England, creates an offence by making certain things punishable, it does not intend this to apply to any act done by anyone in any country other than England. Parliament, being sovereign, is fully entitled to make an enactment on a wider basis. But the presumption is well known to draftsmen, and where there is an intention to make an English Act or part of such an Act apply to acts done outside England, that intention is and must be made clear in the Act': Treacy v DPP [1971] AC 537 at 551, 55 Cr App Rep 113 at 124-125, HL, per Lord Reid.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1055. The territorial limits of England and Wales.

1055. The territorial limits of England and Wales.

Criminal jurisdiction at common law extends to England and Wales<sup>1</sup> and the airspace above<sup>2</sup>. It includes all English and Welsh islands<sup>3</sup>, but excludes Scotland<sup>4</sup>, Northern Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man<sup>5</sup>.

The boundary of the realm ordinarily lies on the foreshore, where the land meets the open sea according to the prevailing state of the tides<sup>6</sup>, but those tidal rivers, creeks, inlets and harbours that lie inter fauces terrae (that is, within the jaws of the land) nevertheless fall within county boundaries and thus lie within the realm<sup>7</sup>. The realm does not, however, include the territorial waters adjacent to England and Wales<sup>8</sup>, nor does it include those waters that are deemed to be 'internal' only on the basis that they lie to landward of the baselines from which the territorial sea is measured<sup>9</sup>.

1 'England' means, subject to any alteration of boundaries of local government areas, the area consisting of the counties established by the Local Government Act 1972 s 1 (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 5, 24), Greater London and the Isles of Scilly (see note 3 infra): Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. 'Wales' means the combined area of the counties which were created by the Local Government Act 1972 s 20 (as originally enacted) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 5, 37), but subject to any alteration made under s 73 (as amended) (consequential alteration of boundary following alteration of watercourse) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 90): Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1 (definition substituted by the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 s 1(3), Sch 2 para 9). As to local government areas see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 22 et seq; and as to boundary changes see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 54 et seq. As to Greater London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 29.

The Channel Tunnel system, as far as the French frontier, is deemed to form part of the county of Kent, and thus lies within the realm: see the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 s 10(1); and RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 324. Foreign embassies and other diplomatic or consular premises sited within the realm remain part of the realm and are subject to English law: see R v Nejad (22 January 1981, unreported) (acts committed by terrorists within Iranian embassy in London held to be justiciable as offences under English law).

2 As to airspace see PARA 1058 post.

3 These include Anglesey (in the county of Gwynedd), the Isle of Wight and Lundy Island: see Harman v Bolt (1931) 47 TLR 219. The Isles of Scilly are defined by reference to a map, copies of which are deposited at the offices of the Secretary of State, the Duchy of Cornwall and the Council of the Isles of Scilly: see the Isles of Scilly Order 1978, SI 1978/1844, art 2(1).

Rockall was annexed in 1955 and is the most recent addition to the land territory of the United Kingdom, but forms part of the territory of Scotland: see the Island of Rockall Act 1972 s 1 (amended by the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 s 214(2), Sch 27 para 202).

4 As to jurisdiction over fisheries offences committed on or in respect of the border rivers (namely, the Eden, Esk, Sark and Tweed): see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 845. This may involve the application of Scots criminal law by English courts in respect of offences committed on certain stretches of the Tweed and its tributaries: Ryan v Ross [1963] 2 QB 151, [1963] 1 All ER 853, DC; Gibson v Ryan [1968] 1 QB 250, [1967] 3 All ER 184, DC.

5 As to the legal status of the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man (which are not within the United Kingdom) see COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 790 et seq; and see also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 3.

per Bridge LJ. One reason for rejecting the low water mean meridian tide line as the border of the realm (even though this is marked on ordnance survey maps) is that the considerable areas of shore left bare below that line on at least three days in every lunar week would not then form part of the realm or lie within the jurisdiction of a county, and crimes committed there would have to be regarded as committed on the high seas: Anderson v Alnwick District Council [1993] 3 All ER 613 at 620, DC, per Evans LJ. See also WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 100 (2009) PARA 31. The precise location of the boundary of the realm is of little importance in respect of offences that are triable on indictment, because the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 2 extends the ambit of such offences to all waters lying to landward of the outer limit of territorial waters, but its location may be of significance in respect of summary offences to which that Act does not apply: see s 7.

7 R v Bruce (1812) Russ & Ry 243; R v Mannion (1846) 2 Cox CC 158, CCR; R v Cunningham (1859) Bell CC 72; The Fagernes [1927] P 311, CA; R v Kent Justices, ex p Lye [1967] 2 QB 153, [1967] 1 All ER 560, DC. Historically, common law and Admiralty jurisdiction shared a concurrent criminal jurisdiction within waters inter fauces terrae, but this is no longer of any practical significance. As to historical matters concerning the Admiralty jurisdiction see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 80.

8 As to the general legal status and extent of territorial waters see generally para 1056 post; and WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 100 (2009) PARA 31 et seq.

9 This is because no provision is made for such waters to be included within littoral county boundaries. The distinction is of significance only in respect of summary offences (see note 6 supra; and PARA 1056 post).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1056. Jurisdiction over offences within territorial or internal waters.

1056. Jurisdiction over offences within territorial or internal waters.

Although at common law no criminal jurisdiction extends beyond waters lying inter fauces terrae (that is, within the jaws of the land)<sup>1</sup>, legislation has extended the ambit of Admiralty jurisdiction over indictable offences to cover things done or omitted anywhere within the outer limits of territorial waters<sup>2</sup>, even when committed on board or by means of a foreign ship<sup>3</sup>. Admiralty jurisdiction over indictable offences<sup>4</sup> is now exercised by the ordinary criminal courts<sup>5</sup>. Proceedings against a defendant who is not of British nationality require the consent of the Secretary of State and his certificate that the institution of such proceedings is expedient<sup>6</sup>. In practice, no jurisdiction would ordinarily be asserted over things done on foreign or Commonwealth naval vessels in English territorial or internal waters, but English law would still apply should sovereign immunity be waived by the flag state<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> See the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878, ss 2, 7. An offence committed on the open sea within the territorial limits falls within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, although it may have been committed aboard or by means of a foreign ship: see s 2. Under s 7 (as originally enacted), any part of the open sea within one marine league (ie three nautical miles) of the coast measured from low-water mark was deemed to lie within territorial waters. This has now been extended by the Territorial Waters Order in Council 1964, which enables the base line from which the outer territorial limit is measured to be drawn across the mouths of bays in accordance with public international law, although the location of that baseline, where it encloses such bays, is not officially published: see R v Kent Justices, ex p Lye [1967] 2 QB 153, [1967] 1 All ER 560, DC; Post Office v Estuary Radio Ltd [1968] 2 QB 740, [1967] 3 All ER 663, CA.

The Territorial Sea Act 1987 s 1 extends the breadth of the territorial sea to 12 nautical miles, measured from its landward baselines. See also the Territorial Sea (Limits) Order 1989, SI 1989/482, which specifies the seaward limits of English jurisdiction in the English Channel. The landward baselines ordinarily follow the line of lowest astronomical tides, but this is not expressed in any legislation. As to the location of the boundary between English and Scottish territorial waters see the Scottish Adjacent Waters Boundaries Order 1999, SI 1999/1126, made under the Scotland Act 1998 s 126.

<sup>3</sup> 'Ship' for this purpose includes every description of ship, boat or other floating craft (Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 7), and now includes hovercraft (Hovercraft (Application of Enactments) Order 1972, SI 1972/971, art 4, Sch 1). 'Foreign ship' means any ship which is not a British ship: Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 7. As to jurisdiction over things done aboard British or United Kingdom ships see PARA 1057 post.

<sup>4</sup> 'Offence' means an act, neglect or default of such a description as would if committed within the body of a county in England, be punishable on indictment according to the law of England for the time being in force: Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 7. There has never been Admiralty jurisdiction over summary offences.

As to the jurisdiction in relation to offences under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1104.

6 See the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 3. This provision does not apply to proceedings for an offence specified in the Energy Act 2004 s 86: see s 86(6); and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1311. See also the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990 s 21(3). Proceedings for offences under the Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 ss 1-54 committed outside Great Britain may be excluded from the operation of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 s 3: see the Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 s 84(4)(d); and HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK vol 52 (2009) PARA 305.

1056 Jurisdiction over offences within territorial or internal waters

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1057. Offences aboard British or United Kingdom ships etc.

1057. Offences aboard British or United Kingdom ships etc.

British ships<sup>1</sup> are not part of the United Kingdom, nor are they floating British territory<sup>2</sup>. Provisions dealing with acts committed or events occurring 'within England and Wales' or 'within the United Kingdom' do not automatically apply to acts or events aboard British ships. Specific provision must be made within the relevant legislation, or within legislation dealing with such ships, if such an effect is desired<sup>3</sup>. Persons aboard British ships do, however, sail under British Admiralty jurisdiction when on the high seas<sup>4</sup>. Admiralty jurisdiction over indictable offences is now exercised by the ordinary criminal courts<sup>5</sup>. Persons aboard United Kingdom ships<sup>6</sup> are subject to further criminal jurisdiction, including jurisdiction over summary offences<sup>7</sup>.

Offshore oil and gas platforms and drilling rigs cannot ordinarily be classified as ships<sup>8</sup>, but special provision has been made for the exercise of criminal jurisdiction over offences committed aboard (or within 500 meters around) platforms sited above designated areas of the continental shelf within which the United Kingdom claims rights to the seabed, subsoil and natural resources<sup>9</sup>.

1 A 'ship' is any kind of vessel used in navigation and such a ship is 'British' if it is registered in the United Kingdom under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt II (ss 8-23) (as amended); or it is a government ship, registered in the United Kingdom in pursuance of an Order in Council under s 308; or it is registered under the law of a relevant British possession (namely, British overseas territories such as Gibraltar, together with the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man); or it is a small ship other than a fishing vessel and is not registered under Pt II (as amended), but is wholly owned by qualified owners, and not registered under the law of a country outside the United Kingdom: see s 1; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 230. Her Majesty's ships and vessels (including vessels of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary service and any ships that are taken up from trade) are also subject to Admiralty jurisdiction (see R v Devon Justices, ex p DPP [1924] 1 KB 503, DC), but offences committed aboard such vessels will more commonly be dealt with under the Naval Discipline Act 1957 (see ARMED FORCES).

The words 'used in navigation' exclude from the definition of 'ship or vessel' craft that are simply used for having fun on the water without the object of going anywhere: R v Goodwin [2005] EWCA Crim 3184 at [33], [2006] 2 All ER 519 at [33], [2005] All ER (D) 111 (Dec) at [33], per Lord Phillips CJ. It follows that a leisure craft (such as a jet ski or 'wet bike') which is not used in navigation cannot be a ship even if it is registered as a United Kingdom ship in accordance with the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt II (as amended). Registration is not conclusive on this matter: R v Goodwin supra at [12].

4 In the context of Admiralty jurisdiction, the high seas have been defined as: 'all oceans, seas, bays, channels, rivers, creeks and waters . . . where great ships could go, with the exception only of such oceans etc as are within the body of some county' (The Mecca [1895] P 95 at 107, CA; R v Carr and Wilson (1882) 10 QBD 76, CCR (ship in port of Rotterdam held to be on high seas); R v Anderson (1868) 11 Cox CC 198, CCR (Garonne river at Bordeaux, 50 miles from the sea); R v Liverpool Justices, ex p Molyneaux [1972] 2 QB 384, [1972] 2 All ER 471, DC (port of Nassau)).

5 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 46(2); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(4); Offences at Sea Act 1799 s 1. See also the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 72 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(2), Sch 3 Pt III). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 1; and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Admiralty jurisdiction over crimes on British ships may also be exercised by courts in British overseas territories or possessions (see the Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act 1849 s 1; and COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 840) but English criminal law is always the law applicable (Oteri v R [1976] 1 WLR 1272, [1977] 1 Lloyd's Rep 105, PC). See also COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 840.

7     See ibid s 281 (jurisdiction in case of offences on board ship); and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105. Section 281 applies to other offences under English law as it applies to offences under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 itself: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 3A (as added); the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 46A (as added); and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105. As to the further application of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 281 to offences committed by British citizens in foreign ports or harbours or aboard foreign ships to which they do not belong, see PARA 1062 post. As to the prospective renaming of the Supreme Court Act 1981 see note 5 supra.

8     A possible exception is an exploration rig fitted with legs that can be jacked up when the rig is moved, as opposed to one that is sunk into place on a permanent basis: see Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v Perks [2001] EWCA Civ 1228, sub nom Perks v Clark [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep 431; considered in R v Goodwin [2005] EWCA Crim 3184, [2006] 2 All ER 519, [2006] 1 WLR 546.

The Criminal Jurisdiction (Offshore Activities) Order 1987, SI 1987/2198, applies to the territorial waters of the United Kingdom and to waters in any area designated by orders made under the Continental Shelf Act 1964 s 1(7): see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1636. See also FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1678.

UPDATE

1057 Offences aboard British or United Kingdom ships etc

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1058. Offences in United Kingdom airspace or aboard British-controlled aircraft.

1058. Offences in United Kingdom airspace or aboard British-controlled aircraft.

The territory of England and Wales extends at common law usque ad coelum et ad inferos (that is, up to the heavens and down to the depths) and English law thus applies without any need for legislation to acts or omissions in aircraft or balloons (or when, for example, skydiving) in the airspace above England and Wales<sup>1</sup>.

Any act or omission taking place on board a British-controlled aircraft while in flight elsewhere than in or over the United Kingdom which, if taking place in, or in a part of, the United Kingdom, would constitute an offence under the law in force in, or in that part of, the United Kingdom constitutes that offence; but this does not apply to any act or omission which is expressly or impliedly authorised by or under that law when taking place outside the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>.

English law does not apply to acts or omissions in airspace above Scotland or Northern Ireland, even when they take place aboard a British controlled aircraft<sup>3</sup>.

Legislation has made no express provision for criminal jurisdiction to extend to the airspace above territorial waters<sup>4</sup>.

1 Cf Blackstone's Commentaries (1766) vol II, p 18: 'Land hath also, in its legal signification, an indefinite extent, upwards as well as downwards . . . 'land' includes not only the face of the earth, but everything under it, or over it'. As to sovereignty over airspace see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 197. Territorial jurisdiction does not extend to outer space: see the Treaty on the Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and other Celestial Bodies (London, Moscow, Washington, 27 January 1967; TS 10 (1968); Cmnd 3519). The exact height at which national airspace ends and outer space begins has never been defined, but it is thought to lie somewhere below the minimum height of orbiting spacecraft or satellites.

2 See the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92(1) (as amended); and AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 621. For the purpose of conferring jurisdiction, any offence under the law in force in, or in a part of, the United Kingdom committed on board an aircraft in flight is deemed to have been committed in any place in the United Kingdom (or, as the case may be, in that part) where the offender may for the time being be: Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92(3). Note however that whether something done on an aircraft in flight can indeed be 'an offence' in the first place depends on s 92(1) (as amended). Section 92(3) merely deals with jurisdiction in the sense of 'venue'. When enacted it enabled magistrates' courts to deal with summary offences committed outside their commission areas. It serves no useful purpose in English law now that magistrates' courts have acquired an unrestricted jurisdiction over summary offences (see PARA 1051 ante). As to offences committed aboard foreign aircraft in flight which then make their next landing in the United Kingdom see s 92(1A) (as added); and AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 621.

3 See the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92(1) (as amended); and the text and note 2 supra.

4 This appears to be an oversight. It is clear that the United Kingdom would be entitled to assert jurisdiction over things done above its territorial waters (see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 198); but the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878 (see PARA 1056 ante) contains no provision dealing with airspace, and refers only to offences committed 'on the open sea'. By the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 106, references in that Act to the United Kingdom include adjacent territorial waters; but s 92(1) (as amended) and s 92(1A) (as added) provide for jurisdiction only over things done on aircraft in flight outside the United Kingdom.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/14. ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1059. Offences committed partly within and partly outside England and Wales.

1059. Offences committed partly within and partly outside England and Wales.

An offence may be committed against the criminal law of England even where certain elements of that offence are committed or occur abroad, at least where the last essential constituent element of the offence takes place (that is, the offence is completed) within England and Wales<sup>1</sup>. Most case law suggests that completion of the offence within this territory is essential for the purposes of jurisdiction<sup>2</sup>, save where legislation makes specific provision to the contrary, as for example it has done in respect of certain offences involving cross-frontier fraud or dishonesty<sup>3</sup>, and computer misuse<sup>4</sup>, but recent authority asserts that it may suffice if any relevant element of an offence is committed there, even where the offence is only completed by something that is done, or by some result which occurs, abroad<sup>5</sup>.

In cases involving cross-frontier incitement<sup>6</sup>, attempt<sup>7</sup> or statutory conspiracy<sup>8</sup>, the general rule is that the conduct in question need not originate within England and Wales or involve any overt acts or consequences there<sup>9</sup>, but the substantive offence incited, attempted or conspired at must ordinarily be an offence which would itself have been punishable under English law<sup>10</sup>. It follows that an attempt in England to commit abroad an offence punishable only under foreign law is not ordinarily a criminal attempt under English law<sup>11</sup>. Various statutory provisions have, however, extended English territorial jurisdiction in respect of conspiracy to defraud<sup>12</sup>, incitement or attempts to commit acts of fraud or dishonesty outside the United Kingdom<sup>13</sup>, conspiracies in England and Wales in which the object is the commission outside the United Kingdom of offences under local law<sup>14</sup>, and incitement in England and Wales in which the object is the commission abroad of a specified act of terrorism<sup>15</sup> or a listed (child) sex offence under foreign law<sup>16</sup>.

Where an offence is committed within England and Wales, a secondary party who counselled or procured the commission of that offence<sup>17</sup> by means of things said or done abroad is guilty of the offence in England and Wales and liable to be punished accordingly<sup>18</sup>.

3 See the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt 1 (ss 1-6); and PARAS 65, 73, 362 ante. A person may be guilty of certain offences ('Group A offences', ie offences under the Theft Act 1968, the Theft Act 1978, the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 and the common law offence of cheating the public revenue) whether or not he was a British citizen or in England and Wales at the material time: see PARA 362 ante.

6 This includes both incitement at common law and statutory offences of incitement or solicitation to commit offences (eg the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 s 4 (see PARA 104 ante)).

7 As to criminal attempt generally see PARA 79 ante.

8 As to statutory conspiracy generally see PARA 67 ante.

9 Somchai Liangsirprasert v US Government [1991] 1 AC 225, [1990] 2 All ER 866, PC; R v Sansom [1991] 2 QB 130, [1991] 2 All ER 145, CA; R v Latif and Shahzad [1996] 1 All ER 353, [1996] 1 WLR 104, HL; R (on the application of Al-Fawwaz) v Governor of Brixton Prison [2001] UKHL 69, [2002] 1 AC 556, sub nom Re Al-Fawwaz [2002] 1 All ER 545. Older cases assumed that some effect of the attempt or conspiracy etc must necessarily be felt within England and Wales before criminal liability can arise (see eg R v Baxter [1972] 1 QB 1, 55 Cr App Rep 214, CA; DPP v Doot [1973] AC 807, 57 Cr App Rep 600, HL; DPP v Stonehouse [1978] AC 55, 65 Cr App Rep 192, HL), but these must now be read in light of the later authorities. As to conspiracy to defraud see note 12 infra.

10 See the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(4); and PARA 79 ante. See also R v Governor of Brixton Prison, ex p Rush [1969] 1 All ER 316, [1969] 1 WLR 165, DC.

11 R v Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p Naghdi [1990] 1 All ER 257, sub nom Re Naghdi [1990] 1 WLR 317. An exception purports to be made by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1A), (1B) (as added), in respect of attempts in England to commit abroad offences contrary to the Computer Misuse Act 1990 (see PARAS 358, 361 ante); but by virtue of ss 4, 5 (see PARA 358 ante) any conduct to which that exception might seem to apply must necessarily amount to an attempt to commit a substantive offence under English law, and would be punishable only under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) (see PARA 79 ante).

12 At common law, a conspiracy to defraud must be directed towards an intended defrauding in England and Wales: Board of Trade v Owen [1957] AC 602, [1957] 1 All ER 411, HL; R v Naini [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 398, CA. In respect of things done on or after 1 June 1999, however, a person may be guilty of conspiracy to defraud, even where the defrauding is intended to occur elsewhere: see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 ss 5(3), 6(1); and PARA 73 ante.

13 As to incitement to commit a Group A offence (see note 3 supra) under the Criminal Justice Act 1993 see ss 4(b), 5(4); and PARA 65 ante. As to attempts abroad to commit a Group A offence in England and Wales see s 3(3); and PARA 79 note 3 ante. An attempt in England and Wales to commit a Group A offence abroad will necessarily be triable as an ordinary criminal attempt under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) (see PARA 79 ante). For this reason, no practical use can be made of s 1A (as added) which envisages conduct in England and Wales that amounts to an attempt to commit abroad something that is not a Group A offence under English law but would be such an offence if committed in England and Wales. As to jurisdiction over statutory conspiracy where the offence conspired at is a Group A offence see s 3(2); and PARA 79 ante. See also PARA 362 ante.

14 See the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A (as added); and PARA 68 ante. For s 1A (as added) to apply, the agreement must be one that would be punishable under s 1(1) but for the fact that the offence in question would not be an offence triable in England and Wales if committed in accordance with the parties' intentions: s 1A(4) (added by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 5(1)). It follows that where the substantive offence in question is itself punishable as an extra-territorial offence under English law, the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A (as added) has no application and any conspiracy charge must be laid under s 1(1). As to evidence of foreign law see s 1A(8)-(10) (as added); and PARA 68 ante.

15 See the Terrorism Act 2000 s 59; and PARA 469 ante.

16 See the Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 2; and PARA 243 ante. This Act no longer contains provisions dealing with conspiracy (s 1 having been repealed by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 9(1), (2), Sch 1 para 9(1), Sch 2 Pt II) and its application to incitement is now limited to cases in which the person incited is not a British citizen or United Kingdom resident (because where the person incited is a British citizen etc, he would, if he acted on the incitement, commit offences under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 72 (see PARA 243 ante)).

17 As to secondary participation in crime see PARA 49 et seq ante.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1060. Extra-territorial jurisdiction generally.

1060. Extra-territorial jurisdiction generally.

Extra-territorial jurisdiction in English criminal law invariably has a statutory basis<sup>1</sup>. Legislation may provide an extra-territorial ambit to specific offences, such as murder or manslaughter<sup>2</sup>, or it may subject specific groups or categories of person (such as those subject to armed forces discipline<sup>3</sup>) to the general corpus of English criminal law when abroad. Where extra-territorial jurisdiction applies to specific offences, it does so in most cases only in respect of things done or omitted by persons who hold some form of British nationality or domicile<sup>4</sup>. In exceptional cases, however, a wider basis of jurisdiction may be specified in accordance with customary international law or specific treaty obligations<sup>5</sup>. This may involve 'universal jurisdiction' over crimes that are recognised internationally as meriting or demanding such treatment<sup>6</sup>, or it may involve, on a reciprocal convention basis, the assertion of jurisdiction over things done by persons in specified countries or things done elsewhere by nationals of specified countries<sup>7</sup>.

The United Kingdom does not ordinarily claim, or recognise claims to, criminal jurisdiction based on 'passive personality' (that is, based on the nationality of the victim of an offence)<sup>8</sup> but it has now adopted that principle in respect of some terrorist offences<sup>9</sup>.

1 See PARA 1054 ante.

2 See PARA 1061 post.

3 See PARA 1062 post; and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 422.

4 See PARA 1061 post; and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 5 et seq. Different provisions creating offences specify various different forms of British nationality. Modern statutes typically restrict any extra-territorial application to British citizens (see eg the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 281; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105) or to United Kingdom nationals or residents (see eg the International Criminal Court Act 2001; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 437 et seq) or to United Kingdom persons (see eg the Biological Weapons Act 1974 s 1A (as added); and WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 469). The term 'United Kingdom person' includes Scottish partnerships and bodies incorporated in the United Kingdom (including registered companies and limited liability partnerships): s 1A(4); and WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 469. References in older statutes imposing criminal jurisdiction over 'British subjects', 'subjects of her Majesty' or 'citizens of the United Kingdom and colonies' for things done in foreign or Commonwealth countries or in Ireland, must now be construed as references to British citizens, British overseas territories citizens, British overseas citizens, and British nationals (overseas): British Nationality Act 1948 s 3(1) (amended by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 314(2), Sch 13 para 22); British Nationality Act 1981 s 51 (amended by the British Nationality (Falkland Islands) Act 1983 s 4(3); and the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 s 1(1)(b)); and see also the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Act 1997 s 2; and the Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order 1986, SI 1986/948.

5 See PARA 1061 post; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARAS 4, 56. There is a very strong presumption against the imposition of extra-territorial criminal liability on persons who do not hold any kind of British nationality: R v Jameson [1896] 2 QB 425; Air India v Wiggins [1980] 2 All ER 593 [1980] 1 WLR 815, HL; but contrast Joyce v DPP [1946] AC 347, 31 Cr App Rep 57, HL; and see PARA 1061 post.

6 Universal jurisdiction is that which may be exercised over extra-territorial offences without regard to the nationality or status of the alleged offender, or to the locus of the offence: see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 227. See also PARA 1061 post.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1061. Extra-territorial jurisdiction over specific offences.

1061. Extra-territorial jurisdiction over specific offences.

Specific offences to which a universal, or near-universal, extra-territorial jurisdiction<sup>1</sup> attaches include: piracy<sup>2</sup>; war crimes amounting to grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions<sup>3</sup>; the infliction of torture by or on behalf of persons acting in an official capacity<sup>4</sup>; the hijacking, endangerment or sabotage of aircraft<sup>5</sup> or ships<sup>6</sup>; acts of violence endangering safety at international aerodromes serving civil aviation<sup>7</sup>; the seizure, endangerment, damage or destruction of ships or fixed maritime platforms such as oil or gas rigs<sup>8</sup>; hostage taking<sup>9</sup>; acts of violence against internationally protected persons<sup>10</sup> or United Nations personnel<sup>11</sup>; and offences involving terrorist bombing and explosives<sup>12</sup>, or terrorist fundraising, money laundering and finance<sup>13</sup>.

Specific extra-territorial offences applicable only on the basis of one or more type of British or United Kingdom nationality or residence<sup>14</sup> include: murder or manslaughter committed on land outside the United Kingdom<sup>15</sup>; bigamy<sup>16</sup>; most offences under official secrets legislation<sup>17</sup>; several offences under armed forces law<sup>18</sup>; offences involving the unlawful possession of explosives or the causing of explosions<sup>19</sup>; sexual offences against children under the age of 16 years<sup>20</sup>; offences of bribery or corruption<sup>21</sup>; enlistment or engagement in wars between or against foreign states that are at peace with the United Kingdom<sup>22</sup>; offences involving the use, development, production, acquisition or transfer of anti-personnel mines<sup>23</sup>; and various offences relating to flora, fauna or mineral resources or the security of war graves or military remains<sup>24</sup>.

Extra-territorial liability for high treason by adhering to the Queen's enemies may be incurred by anyone who at the time owes a duty of allegiance to the Crown<sup>25</sup>.

Acts of genocide, crimes against humanity, and war crimes<sup>26</sup> are punishable in England and Wales, as well as in the International Criminal Court<sup>27</sup>, when committed outside the United Kingdom by United Kingdom nationals or residents or by persons subject to United Kingdom service jurisdiction<sup>28</sup>.

2 See the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 s 26, Sch 5; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1249. This adopts the definition of piracy laid down in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (Montego Bay, 10 December 1982 to 9 December 1984; TS 3 Misc 11 (1983); Cmnd 8941) arts 101-103 (see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1249). Strictly speaking, piracy is not an offence of universal jurisdiction because it can be committed only on the high seas or at some place outside the jurisdiction of any state (art 101(a)). The 'high seas' in this context exclude the territorial or internal waters of any state (including those adjacent to the United Kingdom). See also SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1249.

- 18 See ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 42 et seq. Civilian offences with extra-territorial effect include those under the Army Act 1955 s 191 (pretending to be a deserter: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 42); s 192 (procuring and assisting desertion: see PARA 375 ante); s 193 (obstructing or interfering with regular forces in the execution of their duty: see PARA 376 ante); s 194 (aiding a malingerer with a view to enabling him to avoid military service: see PARA 376 ante); s 195 (unlawfully acquiring or procuring the disposal of army stores: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 48); s 196 (unlawfully dealing in service pay or pension documents etc: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 46); s 197 (unauthorised use of or dealing in military or air force decorations etc: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 47). The Air Force Act 1955 contains corresponding and identically numbered provisions: see PARAS 375-376 ante; and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARAS 42-47. The Naval Discipline Act 1957 contains provisions to broadly similar effect: see ss 96-100; para 374 ante; and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 42 et seq. These provisions apply equally to civilians who are not otherwise subject to military or air force law, and offences are triable in the ordinary courts; but an offence committed in any part of the United Kingdom is not triable outside that part of the United Kingdom: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARAS 40, 60. ### 1062. Extra-territorial jurisdiction over specific groups.

The particular groups or classes who are to be subject to the general corpus of English criminal law, or that part dealing with indictable offences, when abroad comprise Crown servants during employment abroad<sup>1</sup>; persons, including civilians, who are subject to British armed forces discipline<sup>2</sup>; British scientists, observers or Convention officials anywhere in Antarctica<sup>3</sup>; United Kingdom nationals, of whatever status, in the unclaimed sector of Antarctica<sup>4</sup>; British citizens in foreign ports or harbours<sup>5</sup> or aboard foreign ships to which they do not belong<sup>6</sup>; and masters or seamen who are employed, or who were employed within the last three months, aboard a United Kingdom ship<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1802 s 1 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 83(3), Sch 10 Pt I; and extended to crimes which would formerly have been felonies by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(1), (2), Sch 2 para 15(1), Sch 3 Pt III); and the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 31 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(2), Sch 3 Pt III) (restricted to indictable offences committed in foreign countries).

As to the legal status of Antarctica and British Antarctic Territory see COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 855; INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 218. A 'Convention official' means a person designated as an inspector or observer by a member of the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources under the Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (Canberra, 20 May 1980; TS 48 (1982); Cmd 8714), art XXIV: Antarctic Act 1994 ss 2(1), 23(2).

4 See ibid s 21; and ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 993.

5 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 281; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105. A Commonwealth (or Irish) port or harbour is not 'foreign', but acts done on British or United Kingdom ships moored or anchored in such ports or harbours nevertheless fall within English criminal jurisdiction because such ports are deemed to form part of the high seas: R v Liverpool Justices, ex p Molyneux [1972] 2 QB 384, [1972] 2 All ER 471, DC; and see PARA 1057 ante. The wording of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 281 (although supposedly a consolidation of existing law) appears to have changed the scope and extent of that law, in that it may be read as applying to things done by a British citizen in a foreign port or harbour, whether or not he is at the time aboard a United Kingdom ship: see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105.

6 See ibid s 281; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1105. See also R v Kelly [1982] AC 665, 73 Cr App Rep 310, HL; R v Cumberworth (1989) 89 Cr App Rep 187, CA.

7 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 282; R v Dudley and Stephens (1884) 14 QBD 273 at 281, CCR, per Lord Coleridge CJ; and SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1106. It is doubtful whether the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 282 has any application to purely summary offences, because offences falling within its scope are triable as if committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, and Admiralty jurisdiction has never extended to summary offences. As to Admiralty jurisdiction see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 79 et seq.

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1063. Offences committed in, or by nationals of, convention countries.

1063. Offences committed in, or by nationals of, convention countries.

If a person, whether a British citizen or not, does in a convention country<sup>1</sup> any act which, if he had done it in a part of the United Kingdom, would have made him guilty in that part of the United Kingdom of a specified offence<sup>2</sup>, or of an offence of attempting to commit any such offence<sup>3</sup>, he is, in that part of the United Kingdom, guilty of the offence or offences of which the act would have made him guilty if he had done it there<sup>4</sup>.

If a person who is a national of a convention country but not a British citizen, British overseas territories citizen, British overseas citizen, or British national (overseas)<sup>5</sup> does any act outside the United Kingdom and that convention country which makes him in that convention country guilty of an offence and which, if he had been a British citizen, British overseas territories citizen, British overseas citizen, or British national (overseas) would have made him in any part of the United Kingdom guilty of murder, manslaughter, culpable homicide<sup>6</sup>, or certain explosives offences<sup>7</sup>, he is, in any part of the United Kingdom, guilty of the offence or offences of which the act would have made him guilty if he had been such a citizen or national<sup>8</sup>.

These provisions are not confined to terrorist offences or acts connected with terrorism, but the power to bring proceedings under them is restricted<sup>9</sup>.

1 A 'convention country' is a country for the time being designated in an order made by the Secretary of State as a party to the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism (Strasbourg, 27 January 1977; TS 93 (1978); Cmnd 7390); and 'country' includes any territory: Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 8(1). As to the procedure for designating countries: see s 8(4)-(6) (amended by the Extradition Act 2003 s 220, Sch 4). The following orders have been made under the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 8 (as amended): the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1978, SI 1978/1245 (designating Austria, Denmark, Germany and Sweden); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1979, SI 1979/497 (designating the Republic of Cyprus); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1980, SI 1980/357 (designating Norway); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) (No 2) Order 1980, SI 1980/1392 (designating Iceland); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1981, SI 1981/1389 (designating Spain and the Republic of Turkey); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) (No 2) Order 1981, SI 1981/1507 (designating Luxembourg); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1986, SI 1986/271 (designating Belgium, the Netherlands, Portugal and Switzerland); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) (No 2) Order 1986, SI 1986/1137 (designating Italy and Liechtenstein); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1987, SI 1987/2137 (designating France); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1989, SI 1989/2210 (designating Ireland); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1990, SI 1990/1272 (designating Finland and Greece); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 1994, SI 1994/2978 (designating the Czech Republic and Slovakia); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) Order 2003, SI 2003/6 (designating Albania, Bulgaria, Estonia, Georgia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Moldova, Poland, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Slovenia and Ukraine); the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Designation of Countries) (No 2) Order 2003, SI 2003/1863 (designating Serbia and Montenegro and Croatia). See also note 4 infra. The United Kingdom is not itself designated as a convention country and accordingly the Terrorism Act 1978 has no effect as between different parts of the United Kingdom. The Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 extends to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man: see s 7(1).

2 Ibid s 4(1). A specified offence is one mentioned in Sch 1 (see heads (1)-(9) infra): s 4(1)(a) (amended by the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 11(4); and the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 140, Sch 7). The specified offences are:

432 (1) murder (see PARA 89 et seq ante) (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 para 1);

- 433 (2) manslaughter or culpable homicide (see PARA 92 et seq ante) (Sch 1 para 2);
- 434 (3) kidnapping, abduction or plagium (an offence under Scottish law) (see PARA 136 et seq ante) (Sch 1 para 4);
- 435 (4) false imprisonment (see PARA 135 ante) (Sch 1 para 5);
- 436 (5) an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 ss 55, 56 (repealed) (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 para 10);
- 437 (6) an offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2 (abduction of child by person other than parent etc: see PARA 141 ante), or any corresponding provision in force in Northern Ireland (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 para 11B (added by the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 11(4)));
- 438 (7) an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 28 (causing bodily injury by gunpowder: see PARA 125 ante), s 29 (causing gunpowder to explode etc with intent to do grievous bodily harm: see PARA 126 ante), s 30 (placing gunpowder near a building etc with intent to cause bodily injury: see PARA 130 ante) (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 para 12);
- 439 (8) an offence under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 2 (causing explosion likely to endanger life or property: see PARA 127 ante), s 3 (doing any act with intent to cause such an explosion, conspiring to cause such an explosion, or making or possessing explosive with intent to endanger life or property: see PARA 128 ante) (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 para 13);
- 440 (9) an offence under the Firearms Act 1968 s 16 (possession of firearm with intent to injure: see PARA 674 ante) or s 17(1) (use of firearm or imitation firearm to resist arrest: see PARA 676 ante) involving the use or attempted use of a firearm within the meaning of s 17, or equivalent offences under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 2004, SI 2004/702 (Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 Sch 1 paras 14, 15).

3 Ibid s 4(1)(b).

4 Ibid s 4(1). For the purpose of s 4 (as amended) any act done: (1) on board a ship registered in a convention country, being an act which, if the ship had been registered in the United Kingdom, would have constituted an offence within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; (2) on board an aircraft registered in a convention country while the aircraft is in flight elsewhere than in or over that country; or (3) on board a hovercraft registered in a convention country while the hovercraft is in journey elsewhere than in or over that country, is treated as done in that convention country: s 4(7). For the meaning of 'in flight' or, as applied to hovercraft, 'in journey' see the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 92(5); and AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 619 (definitions applied by the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 4(7)).

The Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 4 (as amended) applies to India as it applies to a convention country: see s 5; and the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Application of Provisions) (India) Order 1993, SI 1993/2533.

The Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 4 (as amended) does not apply to the United States of America, although certain other provisions of the Act do apply: see the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 (Application of Provisions) (United States of America) Order, SI 1986/2146.

5 The Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 refers to 'citizens of the United Kingdom and colonies' but this form of nationality no longer exists: see PARA 1060 note 4 ante. As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43; as to British overseas territories citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 44-57; as to the status of British national (overseas) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 63-65; as to British overseas citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 58-62; as to British subjects under the British Nationality Act 1981 see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 66-71; and as to British protected persons within the meaning of s 50(1) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 72-76.

6 Culpable homicide is an offence under the criminal law of Scotland, equivalent to manslaughter.

7 The offences under the Explosives Substances Act 1883 ss 2, 3: see EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 1022-1023. Where such an offence is committed as an act of terrorism or for the purposes of terrorism see also the Terrorism Act 2000 s 62; and PARA 1061 note 12 ante.

8 Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 4(3), Sch 1 paras 1, 2, 13. See note 2 supra.

9 Proceedings for an offence which (disregarding the provisions of the Internationally Protected Persons Act 1978, the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983, the United Nations Personnel Act 1997 and the Terrorism Act 2000) would not be an offence apart from the Suppression of Terrorism Act 1978 s 4 (as amended) may not be instituted in England and Wales, except by or with the consent of the Attorney General: s 4(4) (amended by the Internationally Protected Persons Act 1978 s 5(4)(b); the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983 s 4(1)(b); the United Nations Personnel Act 1997 s 7, Schedule para 3; and the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 91(1), Sch 5 paras 3, 4).

ORIGINAL CRIMINAL JURISDICTION/(2) AMBIT OF ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW/1064. Doctrine of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit in respect of offences committed abroad.

1064. Doctrine of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit in respect of offences committed abroad.

At common law a person who has been tried and convicted or acquitted by a court of competent jurisdiction in another country may not be tried again in England and Wales in respect of the same offence<sup>1</sup>.

By statute the prosecution may now in certain cases seek the re-trial of a person who has already been acquitted of the offence in question<sup>2</sup>, and where appropriate this includes cases involving acquittals by courts outside the United Kingdom<sup>3</sup>.

1 R v Hutchinson (1677) 3 Keb 785; R v Roche (1775) 1 Leach 134; R v Aughet (1918) 118 LT 658, 13 Cr App Rep 101, CCA. As to pleas of autrefois convict and autrefois acquit see PARA 1272 et seq post.

A plea of autrefois convict based on a foreign conviction is not available to the accused unless he has been in real jeopardy because there was a real risk or danger of punishment following the foreign conviction. The mere fact of a foreign conviction is not by itself enough to found a plea of autrefois convict; and where the accused has been convicted abroad in his absence and has taken no part in the foreign proceedings, he may not as a general rule plead autrefois convict if he has not been in reach of the court that tried him: R v Thomas [1985] QB 604, 79 Cr App Rep 200, CA.

Where a member of a visiting force (see PARA 46 ante) has been tried by a competent service court, he is not liable to be tried for the same crime by a United Kingdom court: see the Visiting Forces Act 1952 s 4(1); and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 145. A member of Her Majesty's forces is not liable to be tried by court-martial nor is he liable to summary trial in respect of an offence for which he has been tried by a competent civil court, wherever situated, or where he has had such offence taken into consideration when being sentenced by such court: see the Army Act 1955 s 134(1) (as amended); the Air Force Act 1955 s 134(1) (as amended); the Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 129(2) (as amended); and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 57. Members of Her Majesty's forces are likewise protected against trial for an offence in the civil courts of the United Kingdom after being tried by court-martial for that offence: see the Army Act 1955 s 133(1) (as substituted); the Air Force Act 1955 s 133(1) (as substituted); the Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 129(1) (as amended); and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 460.

2 See the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 10 (ss 74-141); and PARA 1937 et seq post. This power is limited to 'qualifying offences' as listed in Sch 5 Pt 1 (see PARA 1914 post), and the Court of Appeal must be satisfied: (1) that there is new and compelling evidence against the acquitted person in relation to the offence; and (2) that in all the circumstances it is in the interests of justice for the court to order the re-trial: see ss 78, 79; and PARA 1939 post.

3 This applies where a person has been acquitted, in proceedings elsewhere than in the United Kingdom, of an offence under the law of the place where the proceedings were held, if the commission of the offence as alleged would have amounted to or included the commission (in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) of a qualifying offence: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 75(4); and PARA 1937 post. Conduct punishable under the law in force elsewhere than in the United Kingdom is an offence under that law for the purposes of s 75(4), however it is described in that law: see s 75(5); and PARA 1937 post.

1065. The Attorney General and the Solicitor General.

The Queen may not appear in Her own courts to support Her interests<sup>1</sup> in person, but is represented by Her attorney<sup>2</sup>, who bears the title of Her Majesty's Attorney General<sup>3</sup>.

The Attorney General is primarily an officer of the Crown and is in that sense an officer of the public<sup>4</sup>. Although he performs to some extent judicial functions<sup>5</sup> both at common law and by statute, he does not constitute a court in the ordinary sense, so that prohibition will not lie against him<sup>6</sup>. It is the duty of the Attorney General to institute prosecutions for offences which have a tendency to disturb the peace of the state or to endanger the government<sup>7</sup>.

Any function of the Attorney General may now be exercised by the Solicitor General, and anything done by or in relation to the Solicitor General in the exercise of or in connection with a function of the Attorney General has effect as if done by or in relation to the Attorney General<sup>8</sup>. The Solicitor General also represents the Crown where distinct interests require it to be separately represented<sup>9</sup>.

The offices of Attorney General and Solicitor General are conferred by patent and are held during pleasure. Neither the Attorney General nor the Solicitor General may engage in private practice<sup>10</sup>.

1 In R v Gregory (1672) 2 Lev 82, a declaration quod dominus rex venit coram domino rege was allowed after some demur, but characterised by Hale CJ as 'well enough, but unmannerly'.

PROSECUTION AUTHORITIES/(1) LAW OFFICERS/(i) In general/1069A Further provision about Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of the Crown Prosecution Service.

1069A Further provision about Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of the Crown Prosecution Service.

The Chief Inspector of the Crown Prosecution Service may delegate any of his functions, to such extent as he may determine, to another public authority<sup>1</sup>. In these provisions 'public authority' includes any person certain of whose functions are functions of a public nature<sup>2</sup>.

The Chief Inspector must from time to time, or at such times as the Attorney General may specify by order, prepare a document setting out what inspections he proposes to carry out (an 'inspection programme') and a document setting out the manner in which he proposes to carry out his functions of inspecting and reporting (an 'inspection framework')<sup>3</sup>. Before preparing an inspection programme or an inspection framework the Chief Inspector must consult the Attorney General and (1) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons; (2) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary; (3) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Probation for England and Wales; (4) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Court Administration; (5) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education, Children's Services and Skills; (6) the Care Quality Commission; (7) the Audit Commission for Local Government and the National Health Service in England; (8) the Auditor General for Wales; and (9) any other person or body specified by an order made by the Attorney General, and he must send to each of those persons bodies a copy of each programme or framework once it is prepared<sup>4</sup>. The Attorney General may by order specify the form that inspection programmes or inspection frameworks are to take<sup>5</sup>. Nothing in any inspection programme or inspection framework is to be read as preventing the Chief Inspector from making visits, or causing visits to be made, without notice<sup>6</sup>.

If (a) a person or body specified by an order made by the Attorney General is proposing to carry out an inspection that would involve inspecting a specified organisation; and (b) the Chief Inspector considers that the proposed inspection would impose an unreasonable burden on that organisation, or would do so if carried out in a particular manner, the Chief Inspector must give a notice to that person or body not to carry out the proposed inspection, or not to carry it out in that manner<sup>7</sup>. Where such a notice is given, the proposed inspection is not to be carried out, or, as the case may be, is not to be carried out in the manner mentioned in the notice<sup>8</sup>. The Attorney General may by order make provision supplementing that made by this provision, including in particular (i) provision about the form of notices; (ii) provision prescribing the period within which notices are to be given; (iii) provision prescribing circumstances in which notices are, or are not, to be made public; (iv) provision for revising or withdrawing notices; (v) provision for setting aside notices not validly given<sup>9</sup>.

The Chief Inspector must co-operate with (A) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons; (B) Her Majesty's Inspectors of Constabulary; (C) Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation for England and Wales; (D) Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Court Administration; (E) Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education, Children's Services and Skills; (F) the Care Quality Commission; (G) the Audit Commission for Local Government and the National Health Service in England; (H) the Auditor General for Wales; and (I) any other public authority specified by an order made by the Attorney General, where it is appropriate to do so for the efficient and effective discharge of his functions<sup>10</sup>. The Chief Inspector may act jointly with another public authority where it is appropriate to do so for the efficient and effective discharge of his functions<sup>11</sup>. The Chief Inspector, acting jointly with Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Probation for England and Wales and Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Court Administration must prepare a document (a 'joint inspection programme') setting out what inspections he proposes to carry out in the exercise of the above power, and what inspections the specified chief inspectors, or their inspectorates, propose to carry out in the exercise of any corresponding powers conferred on them<sup>12</sup>. A joint inspection programme must be prepared from time to time or at such times as the Secretary of State, the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney General may jointly direct<sup>13</sup>. The Secretary of State, the Lord Chancellor and the Attorney General may by a joint direction specify the form that a joint inspection programme is to take<sup>14</sup>. The Chief Inspector may, if he thinks it appropriate to do so, provide assistance to any other public authority for the purpose of the exercise by that authority of its functions<sup>15</sup>. An inspector may for the purposes of an inspection under the Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate Act 2000 require documents to be produced, inspect, copy or take away any documents produced, require an explanation to be given of any document produced, or require any other information to be provided<sup>16</sup>. A person exercising the power to inspect documents is entitled to have access to, and inspect and check the operation of, any computer and associated apparatus or material that is or has been in use in connection with the documents in question, and may require the person by whom or on whose behalf the computer is or has been used, or any person having charge of, or otherwise concerned with the operation of, the computer, apparatus or material, to afford him such reasonable assistance as he may require<sup>17</sup>.

1 Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate Act 2000 s 2(5), Schedule, PARA 1(1) (s 2(5), Schedule added by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 30; and amended by Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 Sch 9 para 1(2)(o), Sch 18 Pt 9; and SI 2008/912). If the carrying out of an inspection is delegated under the 2000 Act Schedule para 1(1) it is nevertheless to be regarded for the purposes of the 2000 Act as carried out by the Chief Inspector: Schedule para 1(2).

2 Ibid Schedule para 1(3).

3 Ibid Schedule para 2(1). The power to make an order is exercisable by statutory instrument and a statutory instrument containing such an order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Schedule para 8.

5 Ibid Schedule para 2(4).

6 Ibid Schedule para 2(5).

7 Ibid Schedule para 3(1), (2). However, the Attorney General may by order specify cases or circumstances in which a notice need not, or may not, be given under Schedule para 3(6): Schedule para 3(6). In head (a) of the TEXT 'specified organisation' means a person or body specified by an order made by the Attorney General: Schedule para 3(3). A person or body may be specified under Schedule para 3(3) only if it exercises functions in relation to any matter falling within the scope of the duties of the Chief Inspector under the 2000 Act or any other enactment: Schedule para 3(4). A person or body may be specified under Schedule para 3(3) in relation to particular functions that it has; in the case of a person or body so specified, head (a) is to be read as referring to an inspection that would involve inspecting the discharge of any of its functions in relation to which it is specified: Schedule para 3(5).

8 Ibid Schedule para 3(7). The Attorney General, if satisfied that the proposed inspection would not impose an unreasonable burden on the organisation in question, or would not do so if carried out in a particular manner, may give consent to the inspection being carried out, or being carried out in that manner: Schedule para 3(8).

1070. Prospective legislation relating to Her Majesty's Chief Inspector for Justice, Community Safety and Custody.

At the date at which this volume states the law, a government Bill known as the Police and Justice Bill was before Parliament<sup>1</sup>.

The Bill makes provision for a new officer, to be called Her Majesty's Chief Inspector for Justice, Community Safety and Custody<sup>2</sup>, who is to replace Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, Her Majesty's Inspectors of Constabulary, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of the Crown Prosecution Service, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of the National Probation Service for England and Wales, and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Court Administration.

<sup>1</sup> The description of the proposed legislation given in the text is based on the Bill as brought from the House of Commons and introduced in the House of Lords on 11 May 2006.

In addition to the provisions described in the text, the Bill contains provisions relating to police reform (see Part 1) and police powers (see Part 2). Part 3 concerns crime and anti-social behaviour and includes provision for local authority scrutiny of crime and disorder matters, as well as containing provisions relating to parenting contracts and parenting orders, and injunctions. The Bill also contains miscellaneous provisions relating to bail offences, computer misuse, forfeiture of indecent photographs of children, the Independent Police Complaints Commission, and extradition: see Part 5. There are supplemental provisions in Part 6.

PROSECUTION AUTHORITIES/(1) LAW OFFICERS/(ii) Consents to Prosecutions/1071. Consents by the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecutions.

(ii) Consents to Prosecutions

1071. Consents by the Attorney General and the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecutions.

Any person may institute any criminal proceedings<sup>1</sup> or conduct any criminal proceedings to which the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take over the conduct of proceedings does not apply<sup>2</sup>; but there are statutory provisions which specifically require that certain criminal proceedings may be undertaken only by order of a judge<sup>3</sup> or by, or by the direction of, or with the consent of, the Attorney General<sup>4</sup>, the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>5</sup> or some other official person or body<sup>6</sup>.

Any enactment<sup>7</sup> which prohibits the institution or carrying on of proceedings for any offence except: (1) with the consent, however expressed, of a law officer of the Crown or the Director of Public Prosecutions; or (2) where the proceedings are instituted or carried on by or on behalf of a law officer of the Crown or the Director of Public Prosecutions, and so applies whether or not there are exceptions to the prohibition, and in particular whether or not the consent is an alternative to the consent of any other authority or person<sup>8</sup>:

1639 (a) does not prevent the arrest without warrant, or the issue or execution of a warrant for the arrest, of a person for any offence, or the remand in custody or on bail of a person charged with any offence<sup>9</sup>; and

1640 (b) is subject to any enactment concerning the apprehension or detention of children or young persons<sup>10</sup>.

Where any enactment, whenever passed: (i) prevents any step from being taken without the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions or without his consent or the consent of another; or (ii) requires any step to be taken by or in relation to the Director, any consent given by or, as the case may be, step taken by or in relation to, a Crown prosecutor is to be treated, for the purposes of that enactment, as given by or, as the case may be, taken by or in relation to the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>11</sup>.

1 For these purposes, binding over proceedings are to be taken as criminal proceedings: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(4). 'Binding over proceedings' means any proceedings instituted, whether by way of complaint under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 115 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 152) or otherwise, with a view to obtaining from a magistrates' court an order requiring a person to enter into a recognisance to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(1).

2 Ibid s 6(1). Such a person does not, however, have a right of access to police statements, reports and photographs held by the Crown Prosecution Service: R v DPP, ex p Hallas (1988) 87 Cr App Rep 340, DC. It is not an abuse of process to bring a private prosecution against a defendant after he has been given an informal or simple caution by the police: Hayter v L [1998] 1 WLR 854, DC. Where criminal proceedings are so instituted, the Director of Public Prosecutions may nevertheless take over their conduct at any stage: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 6(2). In appropriate cases the Director of Public Prosecutions may take over proceedings in order to abort them by offering no evidence: see R v DPP, ex p Duckenfield, R v South Yorkshire Police Authority, ex p Chief Constable of the South Yorkshire Police [1999] 2 All ER 873, [2000] 1 WLR 55, DC (it would be unlawful for the Director of Public Prosecutions to apply the same test for discontinuing a prosecution as he applies for determining whether to commence a prosecution; otherwise the right of private prosecution would be undermined because the Director would be able to stop a private prosecution merely because he would not have initiated or continued it); and see also Turner v DPP (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 70; Raymond v A-G [1982] QB 839, 75 Cr App Rep 34, CA (both decided under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1979 s 4 (repealed)). The tests applicable to whether a Crown prosecutor should pursue a prosecution (ie whether there is sufficient evidence and whether a prosecution would be in the public interest) do not apply to a private prosecution: see R (on the application of Charlson) v Guildford Magistrates Court [2006] All ER (D) 41 (Sep). As to discontinuance of proceedings in magistrates' courts see PARA 1159 post. As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 ante; as to the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take over the conduct of proceedings see PARA 1080 post; and as to the Crown Prosecution Service see PARA 1079 et seq post.

The effect of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 6(1) is to preclude a person from bringing a private prosecution in cases covered by s 3(2)(a), (c) and (d) (see PARA 1080 heads (1), (3), (4) post) but not in the residuary category of s 3(2)(b) (see PARA 1080 head (2) post); in respect of that category there is nothing to preclude a private prosecution: R v Bow Street Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p South Coast Shipping Co Ltd [1993] QB 645, [1993] 1 All ER 219, DC (decided before the addition of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(aa), (ba) (see PARA 1080 post)). Where the Director of Public Prosecutions could have instituted proceedings against a person under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(b) where it appeared to him to be appropriate that he do so having regard to the importance and difficulty of the case but he has decided not to bring proceedings, any other person may institute a private prosecution in respect of the same matter: R v Bow Street Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p South Coast Shipping Co Ltd supra.

However, the Director may take over proceedings instituted by a private prosecutor which he might otherwise have instituted himself and having done so he may then discontinue them under Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 23 (see PARA 1159 post) or, if it is too late to discontinue, he may offer no evidence or the Attorney General can enter a nolle prosequi: R v Bow Street Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p South Coast Shipping Co Ltd supra. As to the Attorney General see PARA 1065 ante.

3 See eg the Law of Libel Amendment Act 1888 s 8; and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 293.

4 See eg the Public Order Act 1986 s 27(1); and PARA 562 ante. Where the Director of Public Prosecutions decides not to prosecute an offence, an application for judicial review of the decision will succeed only if it can be shown that the decision was reached because of an unlawful policy, or if there was a failure to act in accordance with the policy set out in the Code for Crown Prosecutors, or if the decision was perverse: R v DPP, ex p C [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 136, 159 JP 227, DC. See also R v DPP, ex p Jones [2000] Crim LR 858, DC; R v DPP, ex p Manning [2001] QB 330, [2000] All ER (D) 674, DC; R (on the application of Joseph) v DPP [2001] Crim LR 489, DC.

To consent to a prosecution is not amenable to judicial review in the absence of dishonesty, mala fides or an exceptional circumstance: R v DPP, ex p Kebilene [2000] 2 AC 326, [2000] 4 All ER 801, HL. In the absence of compelling reasons to the contrary, the Director of Public Prosecutions is expected to give reasons for a decision not to prosecute where his refusal concerns a death in custody in respect of which a jury at a coroner's inquest has returned a verdict of unlawful killing implicating a clearly identifiable, but unnamed individual, whose whereabouts are known: R v DPP, ex p Manning supra.

5 See eg the Suicide Act 1961 s 2(4) (as amended); and PARA 106 ante. As to the exercise of the functions of the Director of Public Prosecutions by Crown prosecutors see PARA 1081 post.

6 See eg the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 145(1), (6) (as amended) (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1196), explained in R v Keyes, R v Edjedewe, R v Chapman [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 181, CA. The consent need not be in writing, although as a matter of practice it is doubtless desirable for there to be a signed written consent: R v Jackson [1997] Crim LR 293, CA.

7 For these purposes, 'enactment' includes any provision having effect under or by virtue of any Act, whenever passed: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 25(3).

8 Ibid s 25(1). Where the defendant has been arrested and charged, proceedings are 'instituted' for these purposes when the defendant first comes to court to answer the charge: R v Elliott (1984) 81 Cr App Rep 115, CA; R v Whale, R v Lockton [1991] Crim LR 692, CA; R v Bull (1993) 99 Cr App Rep 193, CA. Where the defendant has not been arrested, proceedings are 'instituted' when a summons is issued following the laying of an information: Price v Humphries [1958] 2 QB 353, [1958] 2 All ER 725, DC (case decided before the process of laying an information and issue of a summons was replaced in the case of a public prosecutor by the process of issuing a written charge (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 29; and PARA 915 ante)). At the time of the decisions in R v Elliott supra, R v Whale, R v Lockton supra and R v Bull supra, the time when the defendant first came before the court to answer the charge was when he was arraigned for the purposes of committal proceedings: see R v Bull supra at 207 per Cresswell J.

9 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 25(2)(a). As to powers of arrest see PARA 910 et seq ante; and as to remand in custody or on bail see PARA 1144 et seq post.

10 Ibid s 25(2)(b). As to the detention of children or young persons see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1232 et seq.

11 Ibid s 1(7). As to proof of consents to prosecutions see PARA 1469 post. Section 1(7) does not apply to the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Pt 10 (ss 75-97) (re-trial for serious offences), other than s 85(2)(a) (see PARA 1943 post): s 92(1).

- 1645 (2) to take over the conduct of any criminal proceedings instituted by an immigration officer<sup>7</sup> acting in his capacity as such an officer<sup>8</sup>;
- 1646 (3) to institute and have the conduct of criminal proceedings<sup>9</sup> in any case where it appears to him that the importance or difficulty of the case makes it appropriate that proceedings should be instituted by him, or it is otherwise appropriate for proceedings to be instituted by him<sup>10</sup>;
- 1647 (4) to institute and have the conduct of any criminal proceedings in any case where the proceedings relate to the subject-matter of a report on an investigation into the conduct of a person serving with the police<sup>11</sup>, a copy of which has been sent to him<sup>12</sup>;
- 1648 (5) to take over the conduct of all binding over proceedings instituted on behalf of a police force, whether by a member of that force or by any other person<sup>13</sup>;
- 1649 (6) to take over the conduct of all proceedings begun by summons issued under the Obscene Publications Act 1959<sup>14</sup>;
- 1650 (7) to give, to such extent as he considers appropriate, advice to police forces on all matters relating to criminal offences<sup>15</sup>;
- 1651 (8) to have the conduct of any extradition proceedings<sup>16</sup>;
- 1652 (9) to give, to such extent as he considers appropriate, and to such persons as he considers appropriate, advice on any matters relating to extradition proceedings or proposed extradition proceedings<sup>17</sup>;
- 1653 (10) to give, to such extent as he considers appropriate, advice to immigration officers on matters relating to criminal offences<sup>18</sup>;
- 1654 (11) to appear for the prosecution, when directed by the court<sup>19</sup> to do so, on any appeal under the Administration of Justice Act 1960<sup>20</sup>, the Criminal Appeal Act 1968<sup>21</sup> or the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980<sup>22</sup>;
- 1655 (12) to have the conduct of applications for anti-social behaviour orders made on conviction<sup>23</sup> and for banning orders made on conviction<sup>24</sup>;
- 1656 (13) where it appears to him appropriate to do so, to have the conduct of applications<sup>25</sup> for the variation or discharge of anti-social behaviour orders made after conviction in criminal proceedings<sup>26</sup>;
- 1657 (14) where it appears to him appropriate to do so to appear on any such application<sup>27</sup> made by a person subject to such an order<sup>28</sup> for the variation or discharge of the order<sup>29</sup>; and
- 1658 (15) to discharge such other functions as may from time to time be assigned to him by the Attorney General<sup>30</sup>.

The Director of Public Prosecutions may also institute and conduct criminal proceedings in England and Wales relating to criminal investigations<sup>31</sup> by the Serious Organised Crime Agency ('SOCA')<sup>32</sup> relating to a non-designated offence,<sup>33</sup> and must take over the conduct of criminal proceedings instituted<sup>34</sup> by SOCA in England and Wales in respect of such an offence<sup>35</sup>. The Director of Public Prosecutions must provide advice in relation to such criminal investigations or criminal proceedings that arise out of such an investigation<sup>36</sup>. The Director of Public Prosecutions acting jointly with the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions may also give directions to SOCA to determine which cases to refer to the appropriate prosecutor<sup>37</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 ante. This duty is subject to any provisions contained in the Criminal Justice Act 1987: see the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 15, Sch 2 para 13). See further note 30 infra.

2 For these purposes, references to the conduct of any proceedings include references to the proceedings being discontinued and to the taking of any steps (including the bringing of appeals and making of representations in respect of applications for bail) which may be taken in relation to them: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(3).

3 'Specified proceedings' means proceedings which fall within any category for the time being specified by order made by the Attorney General for the purposes of ibid s 3 (as amended): s 3(3). The power to make such orders is exercisable by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 3(4).

The following proceedings have been specified for these purposes: (1) fixed penalty offences within the meaning of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 51(1) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1093); (2) the offence under the Vehicle Excise and Registration Act 1994 s 29(1) (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 777); (3) the offences under the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 17(2), 18(3), 24(3), 26(1), (2), 29, 31(1), 42(b), 47(1), 87(2), 143, 164(6), (9), 165(3), (6), 168, 172(3) (see ROAD TRAFFIC); (4) all offences under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 other than those under ss 35A(2) (as added), 43(5), (12), 47(3), 52(1), 108(3), 115(1), (2), 116(1), 129(3) (see ROAD TRAFFIC), or those mentioned in head (1) supra; (5) the offences arising by contravention of the Royal and Other Open Spaces Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1639, reg 3(9)(a) (involving a pedal cycle), and regs 3(9)(b), 4(27), (28), (30) (see OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 565): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 (Specified Proceedings) Order 1999, SI 1999/904, art 3(1), Schedule.

Where a summons has been issued in respect of any such offence, proceedings for that offence cease to be specified when the summons is served on the defendant unless the documents described in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 12(3)(b) (pleading guilty by post etc: see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 705) are served upon the defendant with the summons: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 (Specified Proceedings) Order 1999, SI 1999/904, art 3(2). Proceedings for an offence cease to be specified if at any time a magistrates' court begins to receive evidence in those proceedings; and, for these purposes, nothing read out before the court under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 12(7) (defendant's submission with a view to mitigation: see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 706) is to be regarded as evidence: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 (Specified Proceedings) Order 1999, SI 1999/904, art 3(3).

4 For these purposes, proceedings in relation to an offence are instituted:

- 441 (1) where a justice of the peace issues a summons under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (see PARA 912 ante), when the information for the offence is laid before him (Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(2)(a));
- 442 (2) where a justice of the peace issues a warrant for the arrest of any person under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 1 (see PARA 912 ante), when the information for the offence is laid before him (Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(2)(b));
- 443 (3) where a person is charged with the offence after being taken into custody without a warrant, when he is informed of the particulars of the charge (s 15(2)(c));
- 444 (4) where a bill of indictment is preferred under the Administration of Justice (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1933 s 2 in a case falling within s 2(2)(b) (see PARA 1206 head (4) post), when the bill of indictment is preferred before the court (Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(2)(d)), and, where the application of these provisions would result in there being more than one time for the institution of the proceedings, they are to be taken to have been instituted at the earliest of those times: s 15(2). As from a day to be appointed, it is also provided that proceedings in relation to an offence are instituted, where a public prosecutor issues a written charge and requisition for the offence, when the written charge and requisition are issued: s 15(2)(ba) (prospectively added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 para 10). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to whether proceedings resulting from the investigations of an individual or of a body can be described as 'instituted on behalf of a police force' for these purposes see R v Ealing Justices, ex p Dixon [1990] 2 QB 91, [1989] 2 All ER 1050, DC; R v Stafford Justices, ex p Customs and Excise Comrs [1991] 2 QB 339, [1991] 2 All ER 201, DC; R (on the application of Hunt) v Criminal Cases Review Commission [2001] QB 1108, [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 76, DC.

5 'Police force' means any police force maintained by a police authority under the Police Act 1996 and any other body of constables for the time being specified by order made by the Secretary of State for the purposes of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3 (as amended): s 3(3) (amended by the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 7 para 39; the Police Act 1997 s 134(1), Sch 9 para 48; and the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 59, 174, Sch 4 para 47, Sch 17 Pt 2). As to the making of orders see note 3 supra. The following bodies of constables have been specified for these purposes: the British Transport Police Force; the City of London Police; the Dover Harbour Board Police; the Falmouth Docks Police; the Felixstowe Dock and Railway Company Police; the Manchester Dock Police Force; the Mersey Tunnel law enforcement officers; the Metropolitan Police Force; the Milford Docks Police; the Ministry of Defence Police; the Port of Bristol Police; the Port of Liverpool Police; the Port of London Authority Police; the Royal Parks Constabulary (England); the Tees and Hartlepool Port Authority Harbour Police; the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 (Specified Police Forces) Order 1985, SI 1985/1956, art 2, Schedule.

16 Ibid s 3(2)(ea) (added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (2)). The Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(ea) (as added) does not require the Director to have the conduct of any extradition proceedings in respect of a person if he has received a request not to do so and: (1) in a case where the proceedings are under the Extradition Act 2003 Pt 1 (ss 1-68) (as amended), the request is made by the authority which issued the Pt 1 warrant in respect of the person; (2) in a case where the proceedings are under Pt 2 (ss 69-141), the request is made on behalf of the territory to which the person's extradition has been requested: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2A) (added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (3)). See EXTRADITION.

17 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(eb) (added by the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (2)). 'Extradition proceedings' means proceedings under the Extradition Act 2003 (see EXTRADITION): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(1) (amended by the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (6)).

18 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(2)(ec) (added by the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc) Act 2004 s 7).

19 'The court' means: (1) in the case of an appeal to or from the criminal division of the Court of Appeal, that division; (2) in the case of an appeal from a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division, the Divisional Court; and (3) in the case of an appeal against an order of a magistrates' court, the Crown Court: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 3(3).

PROSECUTION AUTHORITIES/(2) THE CROWN PROSECUTION SERVICE/1081. Crown prosecutors.

1081. Crown prosecutors.

The Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> may designate any member of the Crown Prosecution Service who has a general qualification<sup>2</sup>, and any person so designated is known as a Crown prosecutor<sup>3</sup>. The Director must divide England and Wales into areas and, for each of those areas, designate a Crown prosecutor and any person so designated is known as a Chief Crown Prosecutor<sup>4</sup>.

Without prejudice to any functions which may have been assigned to him in his capacity as a member of the Service, every Crown prosecutor has all the powers of the Director as to the institution and conduct of proceedings<sup>5</sup> but must exercise those powers under the direction of the Director<sup>6</sup>.

The Director may designate members of the staff of the Crown Prosecution Service who are not Crown prosecutors<sup>7</sup>. Subject to such exceptions, if any, as may be specified in the designation, a person so designated has such of the following as may be so specified: (1) the powers and rights of audience of a Crown prosecutor in relation to: (a) applications for, or relating to, bail in criminal proceedings<sup>8</sup>; (b) the conduct of criminal proceedings in magistrates' courts other than trials<sup>9</sup>; (2) the powers of a Crown prosecutor in relation to the conduct of criminal proceedings not falling within head (1)(b) above<sup>10</sup>. Any such powers are to be exercised subject to instructions given to the designated person by the Director; and any such instructions may be given so as to apply generally<sup>11</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 ante.

2 The meaning of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 71, which provides that a 'general qualification' means a right of audience in relation to any class of proceedings in the Supreme Court, or all proceedings in a county or magistrates' court (see s 71(3)(c); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 530). As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court is renamed the Senior Courts and s 71(3)(c) is amended accordingly: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 para 4 (not yet in force); and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 1(3) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 71(2), Sch 10 para 61(1)).

4 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 1(4). The Director of Public Prosecutions may, from time to time, vary the division of England and Wales so made: s 1(5).

5 For the meaning of references to the conduct of proceedings see PARA 1080 note 2 ante.

6 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 1(6).

7 Ibid s 7A(1) (s 7A added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 114; and substituted by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 53).

8 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 7A(2)(a)(i) (as added and substituted: see note 7 supra). 'Bail in criminal proceedings' has the same meaning as in the Bail Act 1976 s 1 (see PARA 1166 post), except that for these purposes 'offence' in that definition does not include an offence to which the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 7A(6) (as added and substituted) applies: s 7A(5)(a) (as so added and substituted). 'Criminal proceedings' does not include proceedings for an offence to which s 7A(6) (as added and substituted) applies: s 7A(5)(b) (as so added and substituted). A trial begins with the opening of the prosecution case after the entry of a plea of not guilty and ends with the conviction or acquittal of the accused: s 7A(5)(c) (as so added and substituted).

Section 7A (as added and substituted) applies to an offence if it is triable only on indictment or is an offence for which the defendant has been sent for trial: s 7A(6) (s 7A as so added and substituted; and s 7A(6) substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 57(1), (2)). At the date at which this volume states the law, the substitution made by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 had been brought into force in relation to cases sent for trial under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51 or s 51A(3)(d) (as added) (see PARAS 1132-1133 post) (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Commencement No 9) Order 2005, SI 2005/1267, art 2(1), (2)(a), Schedule para 1(1)(m)), but no day had been appointed for it to come into effect for remaining purposes. Until such a day is appointed, the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 7A(6) (as added and substituted) applies for those purposes to an offence if it is triable only on indictment, or is an offence: (1) for which the defendant has elected to be tried on indictment; (2) on, which a magistrates' court has decided is more suitable to be so tried; or (3) in respect of which a notice of transfer has been given under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 4 (see PARA 1105 post) or the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 53 (see PARA 1105 post): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 7A(6) (s 7A as so added and substituted; and s 7A(6) amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 331, Sch 36 paras 49, 50).

Details of the following for any year, namely: (a) the criteria applied by the Director in determining whether to designate persons under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 7A (as added and substituted); (b) the training undergone by persons so designated; and (c) any general instructions given by the Director under s 7A(4) (as added and substituted) (see the text and note 11 infra), must be set out in the Director's report under s 9 (see PARA 1073 ante) for that year: s 7A(7) (s 7A as so added and substituted).

9 Ibid s 7A(2)(a)(ii) (as added and substituted: see note 7 supra).

10 Ibid s 7A(2)(b) (as added and substituted: see note 7 supra).

11 Ibid s 7A(3), (4) (as added and substituted: see note 7 supra).

1082. Conduct of prosecutions on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service.

The Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> may at any time appoint a person who is not a Crown prosecutor<sup>2</sup> but who has a general qualification<sup>3</sup> to institute<sup>4</sup> or take over the conduct of such criminal proceedings<sup>5</sup> or extradition proceedings as the Director may assign to him<sup>6</sup>. Any person conducting proceedings so assigned to him has all the powers of a Crown prosecutor but must exercise those powers subject to any instructions given to him by a Crown prosecutor<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 ante.

2 As to Crown prosecutors see PARA 1081 ante.

3 As to the meaning of 'general qualification' see PARA 1081 note 1 ante.

4 As to when proceedings are instituted see PARA 1080 note 4 ante.

5 For these purposes, binding over proceedings and proceedings begun by summons issued under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 s 3 (as amended) (see PARA 752 ante) are to be taken to be criminal proceedings: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(4), (5). ### 1083. Guidelines for Crown prosecutors.

The Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> must issue a Code for Crown Prosecutors<sup>2</sup> giving guidance on general principles to be applied by them:

- 1659 (1) in determining, in any case: (a) whether proceedings for an offence should be instituted or, where proceedings have been instituted<sup>3</sup>, whether they should be discontinued; or (b) what charges should be preferred<sup>4</sup>; and 1660 (2) in considering, in any case, representation to be made by them to any magistrates' court about the mode of trial suitable for that case<sup>5</sup>.

The Director may from time to time make alterations in the Code<sup>6</sup>. The provisions of the Code must be set out in the Director's report<sup>7</sup> for the year in which the Code is issued and any alteration in the Code must be set out in his report for the year in which the alteration is made<sup>8</sup>.

In addition to the Code, the Crown Prosecution Service and the police have worked together to produce charging standards for various criminal offences, which are intended to ensure greater fairness to individual defendants, and to reduce the need to amend or substitute charges during the course of the proceedings.

The Attorney General may, with the approval of the Treasury, by regulations<sup>1</sup> make such provision as he considers appropriate in relation to:

- 1661 (1) the fees of any legal representative briefed to appear on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service in any criminal proceedings or extradition proceedings<sup>2</sup>; and
- 1662 (2) the costs and expenses of witnesses attending<sup>3</sup> to give evidence at the instance of the Service and of any other person who in the opinion of the Service necessarily attends for the purpose of the case otherwise than to give evidence<sup>4</sup>.

Such regulations may, in particular, prescribe scales or rates of fees, costs or expenses, and specify conditions for the payment of fees, costs or expenses<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to regulations made under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 see PARA 1077 note 2 ante.

2 Ibid s 14(1)(a) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(3), Sch 18 para 52; and the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (5)). 'Legal representative' means an authorised advocate or authorised litigator, as defined by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 119(1) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 498); Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(1) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(3), Sch 18 para 52). 'Extradition proceedings' means proceedings under the Extradition Act 2003 (see EXTRADITION): Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(1) (amended by the Extradition Act 2003 s 190(1), (6)).

3 'Attending' means attending at the court or elsewhere: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1B) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)(b)).

4 Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1)(b) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)). The power conferred on the Attorney General by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 14(1)(b) (as amended) only relates to the costs and expenses of an interpreter if the interpreter is required because of the lack of English of a person attending to give evidence at the instance of the Service: s 14(1A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 166(1)(b)). ### 1085. Delivery of recognisances etc to the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Where the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> or any Crown prosecutor<sup>2</sup> gives notice to any justice of the peace that he has instituted<sup>3</sup>, or is conducting, any criminal proceedings<sup>4</sup>, the justice must:

- 1663 (1) at the prescribed<sup>5</sup> time and in the prescribed manner<sup>6</sup>; or
- 1664 (2) in a particular case, at the time and in the manner directed by the Attorney General<sup>7</sup>, send him every recognisance, information, certificate, deposition, document and thing connected with those proceedings which the justice is required by law to deliver to the appropriate officer of the Crown Court<sup>8</sup>.

The Director or, as the case may be, Crown prosecutor must cause anything which is so sent to him to be delivered to the appropriate officer of the Crown Court, and is under the same obligation (on the same payment) to deliver to an applicant copies of anything so sent as that officer<sup>9</sup>.

It is the duty of the designated officer for every magistrates' court to send to the Director a copy of the information and of any depositions and other documents relating to any case in which<sup>10</sup>:

- 1665 (a) a prosecution for an offence before the magistrates' court is withdrawn or is not proceeded with within a reasonable time<sup>11</sup>;
- 1666 (b) the Director does not have the conduct of the proceedings<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1667 (c) there is some ground for suspecting that there is no satisfactory reason for the withdrawal or failure to proceed<sup>13</sup>.

2 As to Crown prosecutors see PARA 1081 ante.

3 As to when proceedings are instituted see PARA 1080 note 4 ante.

4 For these purposes, binding over proceedings are to be taken to be criminal proceedings: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(4). For the meaning of 'binding over proceedings' see PARA 1071 note 1 ante.

5 The Attorney General may make regulations for the purpose of supplementing the provisions of ibid s 7; and for these purposes 'prescribed' means prescribed by the regulations: s 7(2). ### 1086. Investigatory powers of the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions.

The Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> and the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions<sup>2</sup> have powers<sup>3</sup> in relation to the giving of disclosure notices<sup>4</sup> in connection with the investigation of specified<sup>5</sup> offences<sup>6</sup> or in connection with a terrorist investigation<sup>7</sup>.

The Director of Public Prosecutions may, to such extent as he may determine, delegate the exercise of these powers to a Crown prosecutor<sup>8</sup>. The Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions may, to such extent as he may determine, delegate the exercise of these powers to a Revenue and Customs Prosecutor<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 ante.

2 As to the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions see PARA 1068 ante.

3 The powers are conferred by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 60-70).

The same powers are also conferred on the Lord Advocate, and may be delegated to a procurator fiscal: see s 60(1)(c), (4).

4 As to disclosure notices see PARA 1087 post.

5 The specified offences to which the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 ss 60-70 apply are:

445 (1) any offence listed in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Sch 2 (lifestyle offences, England and Wales: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 393) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(a));

446 (2) any offence listed in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Sch 4 (lifestyle offences, Scotland) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(b));

447 (3) any offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-18 (offences relating to fund-raising, money laundering etc: see PARA 390 et seq ante) Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(c));

448 (4) any offence under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 170 (fraudulent evasion of duty: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1178) or the Value Added Tax Act 1994 s 72 (offences relating to VAT: see VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 316 et seq) which is a qualifying offence (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(d));

449 (5) any offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 17 (false accounting: see PARA 316 ante) or any offence at common law of cheating in relation to the public revenue (see PARA 322 ante) which is a qualifying offence (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(e));

450 (6) any offence under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 (see PARA 79 ante), or in Scotland at common law, of attempting to commit any offence in head (3) supra or any offence in head (4) or head (5) supra which is a qualifying offence (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(f));

451 (7) any offence under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1 (see PARA 67 ante), or in Scotland at common law, of conspiracy to commit any offence in head (3) supra or any offence in head (4) or head (5) supra which is a qualifying offence (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(g)); and

- 452 (8) in England and Wales, any common law offence of bribery (see PARAS 527-528 ante), any offence under the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act 1889 s 1 (corruption in office: see PARA 529 ante), and the first two offences under the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1 (bribes obtained by or given to agents: see PARA 321 ante) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1)(h) (added by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 (Amendment of Section 61(1)) Order 2006, SI 2006/1629)).

For the purposes of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(1) (as amended), an offence in head (4) or head (5) supra is a qualifying offence if the investigating authority (see PARA 1087 note 1 post) certifies that in his opinion: (a) in the case of an offence in head (4) supra or an offence of cheating the public revenue, the offence involved or would have involved a loss, or potential loss, to the public revenue of an amount not less than £5,000; (b) in the case of an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 17, the offence involved or would have involved a loss or gain, or potential loss or gain, of an amount not less than £5,000: Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 61(2). A document purporting to be a certificate under s 61(2) is to be received in evidence and treated as such a certificate unless the contrary is proved: s 61(3).

The Secretary of State has power by order:

- 453 (i) to amend s 61(1) (as amended), in its application to England and Wales, so as to remove an offence from it or add an offence to it (s 61(4)(a));
- 454 (ii) to amend s 61(2), in its application to England and Wales, so as to take account of any amendment made by virtue of head (i), or vary the sums for the time being specified in heads (a) and (b) supra (s 61(4)(b)).

As to the amending order that has been made see head (8) supra. As to the making of orders under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 see PARA 821 note 2 ante.

6 Ibid s 60(1)(a), (b).

7 Ibid s 60(1) (s 60(1) amended, and s 60(7) added, by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 33(1), (2)). 'Terrorist investigation' means an investigation of the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 60(7)(a) (as so added)), any act or omission which appears to have been for the purposes of terrorism and which consists in or involves the commission, preparation or instigation of an offence (s 60(7)(b) (as so added)) or the commission, preparation or instigation of an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 or under the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20) (see PARA 383 et seq ante) other than an offence under s 1 or s 2 (encouragement of terrorism and dissemination of terrorist publications: see PARAS 448-450 ante) (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 60(7)(c) (as so added)). For these purposes, 'act of terrorism' includes anything constituting an action taken for the purposes of terrorism, within the meaning of the Terrorism Act 2000 (see s 1(5); and PARA 383 ante): Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 70(1) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 33(4)).

8 Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 60(2). As to the meaning of 'Crown prosecutor' see PARA 1081 ante.

1087. Disclosure notices.

If it appears to the investigating authority<sup>1</sup>:

- 1668 (1) that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a specified offence<sup>2</sup> has been committed<sup>3</sup>;
- 1669 (2) that any person has information, whether or not contained in a document<sup>4</sup>, which relates to a matter relevant to the investigation of that offence<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1670 (3) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that information which may be provided by that person in compliance with a disclosure notice is likely to be of substantial value, whether or not by itself, to that investigation<sup>6</sup>, he may give<sup>7</sup>, or authorise an appropriate person<sup>8</sup> to give, a disclosure notice<sup>9</sup> to that person<sup>10</sup>.

If it appears to the investigating authority:

- 1671 (a) that any person has information (whether or not contained in a document) which relates to a matter relevant to a terrorist investigation<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1672 (b) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that information which may be provided by that person in compliance with a disclosure notice is likely to be of substantial value (whether or not by itself) to that investigation<sup>12</sup>, he may give, or authorise an appropriate person to give, a disclosure notice to that person<sup>13</sup>.

Where a disclosure notice has been so given<sup>14</sup>, an authorised person<sup>15</sup> may take copies of or extracts from any documents produced in compliance with the notice<sup>16</sup>, and require the person producing them to provide an explanation of any of them<sup>17</sup>. Documents so produced may be retained for so long as the investigating authority considers that it is necessary to retain them, rather than copies of them, in connection with the investigation for the purposes of which the disclosure notice was given<sup>18</sup>. If the investigating authority has reasonable grounds for believing that any such documents may have to be produced for the purposes of any legal proceedings, and that they might otherwise be unavailable for those purposes, they may be retained until the proceedings are concluded<sup>19</sup>. If a person who is required by a disclosure notice to produce<sup>20</sup> any documents does not produce the documents in compliance with the notice, an authorised person may require that person to state, to the best of his knowledge and belief, where they are<sup>21</sup>.

A person commits an offence if, without reasonable excuse, he fails to comply with any requirement imposed on him under<sup>22</sup> the above provisions<sup>23</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>24</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale<sup>25</sup> or to both<sup>26</sup>.

A person commits an offence if, in purported compliance with any requirement imposed on him under the above provisions<sup>27</sup> he makes a statement which is false or misleading, and he either knows that it is false or misleading or is reckless as to whether it is false or misleading<sup>28</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>29</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>30</sup> or to both<sup>31</sup>.

A person may not be required<sup>32</sup>:

- 1673 (i) to answer any privileged question<sup>33</sup>;
- 1674 (ii) to provide any privileged information<sup>34</sup>; or
- 1675 (iii) to produce any privileged document<sup>35</sup>, except that a lawyer may be required to provide the name and address of a client of his<sup>36</sup>. In addition, a person may not be required<sup>37</sup> to produce any excluded material<sup>38</sup>.

A person may not be required<sup>39</sup> to disclose any information or produce any document in respect of which he owes an obligation of confidence by virtue of carrying on any banking business, unless the person to whom the obligation of confidence is owed consents to the disclosure or production, or the requirement is made by, or in accordance with a specific authorisation given by, the investigating authority<sup>40</sup>.

A statement made by a person<sup>41</sup> in response to a requirement ('the relevant statement') may not be used in evidence against him in any criminal proceedings unless: (A) the person is being prosecuted for a particular offence<sup>42</sup>; or (B) the person is being prosecuted for some other offence and the person, when giving evidence in the proceedings, makes a statement inconsistent with the relevant statement, and in the proceedings evidence relating to the relevant statement is adduced, or a question about it is asked, by or on behalf of the person<sup>43</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'the investigating authority' means the Director of Public Prosecutions or the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions (or the Lord Advocate): Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 60(5). However, in circumstances where the powers of any of those persons are exercisable by any other person (ie by virtue of s 60(2), (3) or (4): see PARA 1086 ante) references to 'the investigating authority' accordingly include any such other person: s 60(6).

2 Ie an offence to which ibid ss 60-70 apply: see PARA 1086 note 5 ante.

3 Ibid s 62(1)(a).

4 For the purposes of ibid ss 60-70, 'document' includes information stored otherwise than in legible form: s 70(1).

5 Ibid s 62(1)(b).

6 Ibid s 62(1)(c).

7 A disclosure notice may be given to a person by delivering it to him, leaving it at his proper address, or sending it by post to him at that address: ibid s 69(1), (2). The notice may be given:

455 (1) in the case of a body corporate, to the secretary or clerk of that body (s 69(3)(a));

456 (2) in the case of a partnership, to a partner or a person having the control or management of the partnership business (s 69(3)(b));

457 (3) in the case of an unincorporated association (other than a partnership), to an officer of the association (s 69(3)(c)).

For the purposes of s 69 and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 7 (service of documents by post) in its application to s 69, the proper address of a person is his usual or last-known address (whether residential or otherwise), except that:

458 (a) in the case of a body corporate or its secretary or clerk, it is the address of the registered office of that body or its principal office in the United Kingdom (Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 69(4)(a));

459 (b) in the case of a partnership, a partner or a person having the control or management of the partnership business, it is that of the principal office of the partnership in the United Kingdom (s 69(4)(b)); and

460 (c) in the case of an unincorporated association (other than a partnership) or an officer of the association, it is that of the principal office of the association in the United Kingdom (s 69(4)(c)).

8 For the purposes of ibid ss 60-70, 'appropriate person' means a constable, a member of the staff of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency who is for the time being designated under s 43 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 470), or an officer of Revenue and Customs: s 62(2). As to officers of Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

9 For the purposes of ibid ss 60-70, 'disclosure notice' means a notice in writing requiring the person to whom it is given to do all or any of the following things in accordance with the specified requirements, namely: (1) answer questions with respect to any matter relevant to the investigation; (2) provide information with respect to any such matter as is specified in the notice; (3) produce such documents, or documents of such descriptions, relevant to the investigation as are specified in the notice: s 62(3). 'The specified requirements' means such requirements specified in the disclosure notice as relate to the time at or by which, the place at which, or the manner in which, the person to whom the notice is given is to do any of the things mentioned in heads (1)-(3) supra; and those requirements may include a requirement to do any of those things at once: s 62(4). A disclosure notice must be signed or counter-signed by the investigating authority: s 62(5).

10 Ibid s 62(1). Section 62 has effect subject to s 64 (see the text and notes 33-40 infra): s 62(6).

11 Ibid s 62(1A)(a) (s 62(1A) added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 33(1), (3)). For the meaning of 'terrorist investigation' see PARA 1086 note 7 ante.

12 Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 62(1A)(b) (as added: see note 11 supra).

13 Ibid s 62(1A) (as added: see note 11 supra).

14 Ie under ibid s 62 (as amended): s 63(1). Section 63 has effect subject to s 64 (see the text and notes 33-40 infra): s 63(7).

15 Ie any appropriate person who either is the person by whom the notice was given, or is authorised by the investigating authority for the purposes of ibid s 63: s 63(6).

16 Ibid s 63(2)(a).

17 Ibid s 63(2)(b).

18 Ibid s 63(3).

19 Ibid s 63(4).

20 In relation to information recorded otherwise than in legible form, any reference in ibid ss 60-70 to the production of documents is a reference to the production of a copy of the information in legible form: s 70(2).

21 Ibid s 63(5).

22 Ie under ibid s 62 (as amended) or s 63.

23 Ibid s 67(1).

1088. Power to enter and seize documents.

A justice of the peace may issue a warrant if, on an information on oath laid by the investigating authority<sup>1</sup>, he is satisfied that any of the conditions mentioned in heads (1) to (3) below is met in relation to any documents of a description specified in the information<sup>2</sup>, and that the documents are on premises so specified<sup>3</sup>. The conditions are:

- 1676 (1) that a person has been required by a disclosure notice to produce the documents but has not done so<sup>4</sup>;
- 1677 (2) that it is not practicable to give a disclosure notice requiring their production<sup>5</sup>;
- 1678 (3) that giving such a notice might seriously prejudice the investigation of an offence to which the relevant provisions apply<sup>6</sup>.

Such a warrant is a warrant authorising an appropriate person named in it:

- 1679 (a) to enter and search the premises, using such force as is reasonably necessary<sup>7</sup>;
- 1680 (b) to take possession of any documents appearing to be documents of a description specified in the information, or to take any other steps which appear to be necessary for preserving, or preventing interference with, any such documents<sup>8</sup>;
- 1681 (c) in the case of any such documents consisting of information recorded otherwise than in legible form, to take possession of any computer disk or other electronic storage device which appears to contain the information in question, or to take any other steps which appear to be necessary for preserving, or preventing interference with, that information<sup>9</sup>;
- 1682 (d) to take copies of or extracts from any documents or information falling within head (b) or head (c) above<sup>10</sup>;
- 1683 (e) to require any person on the premises to provide an explanation of any such documents or information or to state where any such documents or information may be found<sup>11</sup>;
- 1684 (f) to require any such person to give the appropriate person such assistance as he may reasonably require for the taking of copies or extracts as mentioned in head (d) above<sup>12</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he wilfully obstructs any person in the exercise of any rights conferred by such a warrant<sup>13</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>14</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale<sup>15</sup> or to both<sup>16</sup>.

A warrant must, if so required, be produced for inspection by the owner or occupier of the premises or anyone acting on his behalf: s 66(5). If the premises are unoccupied or the occupier is temporarily absent, a person entering the premises under the authority of a warrant must leave the premises as effectively secured against trespassers as he found them: s 66(6).

Where possession of any document or device is taken under s 66, then: (1) the document may be retained for so long as the investigating authority considers that it is necessary to retain it (rather than a copy of it) in connection with the investigation for the purposes of which the warrant was sought; or (2) the device may be retained for so long as he considers that it is necessary to retain it in connection with that investigation: s 66(7).

If the investigating authority has reasonable grounds for believing that any such document or device may have to be produced for the purposes of any legal proceedings, and that it might otherwise be unavailable for those purposes, it may be retained until the proceedings are concluded: s 66(8). Nothing in s 66 authorises a person to take possession of, or make copies of or take extracts from, any document or information which, by virtue of s 64 (see PARA 1087 ante), could not be required to be produced or disclosed under s 62 (as amended) or s 63 (see PARA 1087 ante): s 66(9).

(3) THE SERIOUS FRAUD OFFICE

1089. Functions of the Director of the Serious Fraud Office.

A Serious Fraud Office must be constituted for England and Wales and Northern Ireland<sup>1</sup>. The Director of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>2</sup> must appoint such staff for the Serious Fraud Office as, with the approval of the Treasury as to numbers, remuneration and other terms and conditions of service, he considers necessary for the discharge of his functions<sup>3</sup>.

The Director may investigate any suspected offence which appears to him on reasonable grounds to involve serious or complex fraud<sup>4</sup>; and he must discharge such other functions in relation to fraud as may from time to time be assigned to him by the Attorney General<sup>5</sup>. If he thinks fit, the Director may conduct any such investigation in conjunction either with the police or with any other person who is, in the opinion of the Director, a proper person to be concerned in it<sup>6</sup>.

The Director may: (1) institute and have the conduct of any criminal proceedings<sup>7</sup> which appear to him to relate to such fraud<sup>8</sup>; and (2) take over the conduct of any such proceedings at any stage<sup>9</sup>. The Director may designate for these purposes any member of the Serious Fraud Office who is a barrister in England and Wales or Northern Ireland, a solicitor of the Supreme Court or a solicitor of the Supreme Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland<sup>10</sup>; and any member so designated has, without prejudice to any functions which may have been assigned to him in his capacity as a member of the Serious Fraud Office, all the powers of the Director as to the institution and conduct of proceedings but must exercise those powers under the direction of the Director<sup>11</sup>.

PROSECUTION AUTHORITIES/(3) THE SERIOUS FRAUD OFFICE/1090. Investigative powers of the Director of the Serious Fraud Office.

1090. Investigative powers of the Director of the Serious Fraud Office.

The Director of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>1</sup> may by notice in writing:

- 1685 (1) require the person whose affairs are to be investigated ('the person under investigation') or any other person whom he has reason to believe has relevant information to answer questions or otherwise furnish information with respect to any matter relevant to the investigation at a specified place and either at a specified time or forthwith<sup>2</sup>;
- 1686 (2) require the person under investigation or any other person to produce at such place as may be specified in the notice and either forthwith, or at such time as may be so specified, any specified documents<sup>3</sup> which appear to the Director to relate to any matter relevant to the investigation or any documents of a specified description which appear to him so to relate; and: (a) if such documents are produced the Director may take copies or extracts from them, and require the person producing them to provide an explanation of any of them; (b) if any such documents are not produced, the Director may require the person who was required to produce them to state, to the best of his knowledge and belief, where they are<sup>4</sup>.

The above powers of the Director are exercisable for the purposes of an investigation into any suspected offence which appears to him on reasonable grounds to involve serious or complex fraud<sup>5</sup>, or, on a request made by an authority entitled to make such a request<sup>6</sup>, in any case in which it appears to him that there is good reason to do so for the purpose of investigating the affairs, or any aspect of the affairs, of any person<sup>7</sup>.

A person must not be required to disclose any information or produce any document which he would be required to refuse to disclose or produce on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court, except that a lawyer may be required to furnish the name and address of his client<sup>8</sup>. A person must not be required to disclose information or produce a document in respect of which he owes an obligation of confidence by virtue of carrying on any banking business unless: (i) the person to whom the obligation of confidence is owed consents to the disclosure or production; or (ii) the Director has authorised the making of the requirement or, if it is impracticable for him to act personally, a member of the Serious Fraud Office designated by him for these purposes has done so<sup>9</sup>.

A statement made by a person in response to a requirement imposed under the above provisions may only be used in evidence against him: (A) on a prosecution for an offence of making a false or misleading statement<sup>10</sup>; or (B) on a prosecution for some other offence where in giving evidence he makes a statement inconsistent with it<sup>11</sup>. However, the statement may not be used against the person by virtue of head (B) above unless evidence relating to it is adduced, or a question relating to it is asked, by or on behalf of that person in the proceedings arising out of the prosecution<sup>12</sup>.

Any evidence obtained by the Director for use by an overseas authority must be given to the overseas authority which requested it or given to the Secretary of State for forwarding to that overseas authority<sup>13</sup>. Where any evidence obtained by the Director for use by an overseas authority consists of a document the original or a copy must be forwarded, and where it consists of any other article the article itself or a description, photograph or other representation of it must be forwarded, as may be necessary in order to comply with the request of the overseas authority<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to the Director of the Serious Fraud Office see PARA 1067 ante.

2 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 paras 112, 113(1)). As to enforcement procedures see PARA 1091 post.

3 For these purposes, 'documents' includes information recorded in any form and, in relation to information recorded otherwise than in legible form, references to its production include references to producing a copy of the information in legible form: Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(18). As to concealment etc of documents see PARA 1093 post.

4 Ibid s 2(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 Sch 15 paras 112, 113(2)). The power to require production of documents remains exercisable even after the person under investigation has been charged: R v Director of Serious Fraud Office, ex p Saunders [1988] Crim LR 837, DC (obiter). As to the Director's obligation to provide an interviewee with advance information of the subject matter of the interview see R v Serious Fraud Office, ex p Maxwell (Kevin) (1992) Times, 9 October, DC (there is no obligation of disclosure in respect of the investigative process instigated by the Director). The investigative powers of the Director do not cease after the person under investigation has been charged: R v Director of the Serious Fraud Office, ex p Smith [1993] AC 1, 95 Cr App Rep 191, HL. The Director may re-interview witnesses even after the delivery of a case statement by the defence: R v Nadir, R v Turner [1993] 4 All ER 513, 98 Cr App Rep 163, CA. A court has no power to require liquidators of an insolvent company not to comply with a notice by the Serious Fraud Office requesting transcripts of an examination conducted under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 236 (see company and partnership insolvency vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 679); it is for the judge at the criminal trial to determine whether such a transcript should be admitted at that trial: Re Arrows Ltd (No 4), Hamilton v Naviede [1995] 2 AC 75, [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 95, HL. As to the relationship between the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(3) (as amended) and the restriction on the collateral use of disclosed documents under CrimPR 31.22 see Marlwood Commercial Inc v Kozeny [2004] EWCA Civ 798, [2004] 3 All ER 648, [2005] 1 WLR 104 (in the absence of other factors the court's discretion should be exercised in favour of compliance with a notice under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(3) (as amended)). As to non-compliance with a requirement under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2 (as amended) see PARA 1092 post.

5 Ie under ibid s 1: see PARA 1089 ante.

6 The authorities entitled to request the Director to exercise his powers under ibid s 2 (as amended) are:

461 (1) the Attorney General of the Isle of Man, Jersey or Guernsey, acting under legislation corresponding to the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 1 and having effect in the Island whose Attorney General makes the request (s 2(1A)(a) (s 2(1A) added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(c)); and 462 (2) the Secretary of State acting under the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 15(2) (see PARA 906 ante), in response to a request received by him from a person mentioned in s 13(2) (an 'overseas authority') (see PARA 904 ante) (Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(1A)(b) (s 2(1A) as so added; and s 2(1A)(b) substituted by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 91(1), Sch 5 paras 11, 12)).

'Evidence' (in relation to head (2) supra and the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(8A), (8C) (as added) (see the text and notes 13, 14 infra)) includes documents and other articles: s 2(18) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(d); and amended by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 Sch 5 paras 11, 12(e), Sch 6). A letter of request under head (2) supra is confidential and no part of it may be disclosed without the requesting authority's consent; thus where such a request is referred to the Director and the Director exercises the power under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(1A) (as added) to issue a notice, the recipient of the notice is not entitled to disclosure of the request: R (on the application of Evans) v Director of Serious Fraud Office [2002] EWHC 2304 (Admin), [2003] 1 WLR 299. Justice can usually be met if, at the time the request for disclosure was made, information as to the nature of the criminal investigation is given by the Director: R (on the application of Evans) v Director of Serious Fraud Office supra. Where such a request is referred to the Director, the Director can use the full powers under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2 (as amended), and the power to obtain 'information' is not restricted by the use of the word 'evidence' in the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990 s 4(2A) (repealed: see now the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 15; and PARA 906 ante): R (on the application of Evans) v Director of Serious Fraud Office supra.

The Director must not exercise his powers on a request from the Secretary of State acting in response to a request received from an overseas authority within the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(1A)(b) (as added and substituted) (see head (2) supra) unless it appears to the Director on reasonable grounds that the offence in respect of which he has been requested to obtain evidence involves serious or complex fraud: Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(1B) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(c)).

7 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 143; and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(a)).

8 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(9).

9 Ibid s 2(10).

10 Ie under ibid s 2(14): see PARA 1092 post.

11 Ibid s 2(8).

12 Ibid s 2(8AA) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 59, Sch 3 para 20).

13 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(8A) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(b); and amended by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 Sch 5 paras 11, 12(b)). The references in the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(8A)-(8C) (as added and amended) to evidence obtained by the Director include references to evidence obtained by him by virtue of the exercise by a constable or by an appropriate person, in the course of a search authorised by a warrant issued under s 2(4) (see PARA 1091 post), of powers conferred by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 50 (see PARA 890 ante): Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(8D) (added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 70, Sch 2 Pt 2 para 23; and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 para 13). For these purposes, 'appropriate person' means a member of the Serious Fraud Office or some person who is not such a member but whom the Director of the Serious Fraud Office has authorised to accompany the constable: Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(7) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 1 para 12).

14 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(8C) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 164(2)(b); and amended by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 Sch 5 paras 11, 12(d)).

1091. Enforcement procedures.

Where, on information on oath laid by a member of the Serious Fraud Office, a justice of the peace is satisfied, in relation to any documents<sup>1</sup>, that there are reasonable grounds for believing:

- 1687 (1) that: (a) a person has failed to comply with an obligation<sup>2</sup> to produce them;
(b) it is not practicable to serve a notice<sup>3</sup> in relation to them; or (c) the service of such a notice in relation to them might seriously prejudice the investigation; and 1688 (2) that they are on premises specified in the information, he may issue a warrant<sup>4</sup> authorising any constable to enter, using such force as is reasonably necessary for the purpose, and search the premises, and to take possession of any documents appearing to be documents of the description specified in the information or to take in relation to any documents so appearing any other steps which may appear to be necessary for preserving them and preventing interference with them<sup>5</sup>. Unless it is not practicable in the circumstances, a constable executing such a warrant must be accompanied by an appropriate person<sup>6</sup>.

Without prejudice to the power of the Director to assign his functions to members of the Serious Fraud Office<sup>7</sup>, the Director may authorise any competent investigator (other than a constable) who is not such a member to exercise on his behalf all or any of his investigative powers<sup>8</sup>; but no such authority may be granted except for the purpose of investigating the affairs, or any aspect of the affairs, of a person specified in the authority<sup>9</sup>. However, no person is bound to comply with any requirement imposed by a person exercising powers by virtue of any authority so granted unless he has, if required to do so, produced evidence of his authority<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'documents' see PARA 1090 note 3 ante.

2 Ie an obligation under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2 (as amended): see PARA 1090 ante.

3 Ie under ibid s 2(3) (as amended): see PARA 1090 ante.

4 Ibid s 2(4). The grant and execution of a warrant to search and seize is a serious infringement of the liberty of the subject and it is always necessary to consider whether some lesser measure, such as a notice under s 2(3) (as amended) (see PARA 1090 ante), would suffice. If it would not, consideration should be given to obtaining the documents from an alternative untainted source, but where that will involve many inquiries of many institutions which may not be willing or able to produce the information required, the need to assist the investigating authority may well render such resort impractical. If an application is to be made for a warrant, the applicant must give full assistance to the district judge, including drawing to his attention anything that militates against the issue of a warrant. When the Director is seeking a warrant pursuant to a request for mutual legal assistance the warrant need not reflect precisely the wording of the letter of request. When there is an ongoing investigation into the affairs of a company which appears to have been at the centre of a fraud, the warrant must be drafted with sufficient precision to enable both those who executed it and those whose property was affected by it to know whether any individual document or class of documents fell within it. It is desirable to give a district judge from whom a warrant is sought time to pre-read the material relied upon. It should be noted if at the hearing the applicant supplemented the material already provided. The decision of the district judge, which should be briefly reasoned, should also be noted. See R (on the application of Energy Financing Team Ltd) v Bow Street Magistrates' Court [2005] 1 EWHC 1626 (Admin), [2005] 4 All ER 285, [2006] 1 WLR 1316, DC.

5 Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(5). Where an appropriate person accompanies a constable, he may exercise these powers but only in the company, and under the supervision, of the constable: s 2(6A) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 12, Sch 1 para 11).

1092. Failure to comply with the requirements of the Director of the Serious Fraud Office; making false or misleading statements.

Any person who, without reasonable excuse<sup>1</sup>, fails to comply with a requirement imposed on him by the Director of the Serious Fraud Office in connection with his investigative powers<sup>2</sup> is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale<sup>4</sup> or to both<sup>5</sup>.

A person who, in purported compliance with any such requirement: (1) makes a statement which he knows to be false or misleading in a material particular; or (2) recklessly makes a statement which is false or misleading in a material particular, is guilty of an offence<sup>6</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>8</sup> or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 The fact that a person required to answer questions in the course of an inquiry by the Serious Fraud Office is the spouse of the person charged is not in itself a reasonable excuse for failing to answer questions: R v Director of Serious Fraud Office, ex p Johnson [1993] COD 58.

A reasonable excuse does not arise for these purposes by reason only of the fact that the defendant has been charged: R v Metropolitan Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p Serious Fraud Office (1994) Independent, 24 June, DC.

2 See under the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2 (as amended): see PARA 1090 ante.

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

1093. Concealment etc of documents.

Where any person: (1) knows or suspects that an investigation by the police or the Serious Fraud Office<sup>1</sup> into serious fraud or complex fraud is being or is likely to be carried out; and (2) falsifies, conceals, destroys or otherwise disposes of, or causes or permits the falsification, concealment, destruction or disposal of, documents<sup>2</sup> which he knows or suspects are or would be relevant to such an investigation, he is guilty of an offence unless he proves that he had no intention of concealing the facts disclosed by the documents from persons carrying out such an investigation<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>5</sup> or to both<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the Serious Fraud Office see PARA 1089 et seq ante.

2 For these purposes, 'document' includes information recorded in any form: see the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 2(18).

PROSECUTION AUTHORITIES/(3) THE SERIOUS FRAUD OFFICE/1094. Disclosure of information.

1094. Disclosure of information.

Where any information to which an obligation<sup>1</sup> of confidentiality applies has been disclosed by Her Majesty's Commissioners for Revenue and Customs to any member of the Serious Fraud Office for the purposes of any prosecution of an offence relating to a former Inland Revenue matter<sup>2</sup>, that information may be disclosed by any member of the Serious Fraud Office:

- 1689 (1) for the purposes of any prosecution of which the Serious Fraud Office has the conduct;
- 1690 (2) to the Revenue and Customs Prosecution Office<sup>3</sup> for the purposes of any prosecution for an offence relating to a former Inland Revenue matter; and
- 1691 (3) to the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland for the purposes of any prosecution of an offence relating to a former Inland Revenue matter, but not otherwise<sup>4</sup>.

Where the Serious Fraud Office has the conduct of any prosecution of an offence which does not relate to inland revenue, the court may not prevent the prosecution from relying on any evidence under the statutory discretion to exclude unfair evidence<sup>5</sup> by reason only of the fact that the information concerned was disclosed by the Commissioners for the purposes of any prosecution of an offence relating to a former Inland Revenue matter<sup>6</sup>.

Where any information is subject to an obligation of secrecy imposed by or under any enactment other than an enactment contained in the Taxes Management Act 1970, the obligation does not have effect to prohibit the disclosure of that information to any person in his capacity as a member of the Serious Fraud Office; but any information so disclosed may only be disclosed by a member of the Serious Fraud Office for the purposes of any prosecution in England and Wales, Northern Ireland or elsewhere and may only be disclosed by such a member if he is designated by the Director for such purposes<sup>7</sup>.

Without prejudice to his power to enter into agreements apart from this provision, the Director may enter into a written agreement for the supply of information to or by him, subject, in either case, to an obligation not to disclose the information concerned otherwise than for a specified purpose<sup>8</sup>.

Subject to specified provisions<sup>9</sup> and to any provision of an agreement for the supply of information which restricts the disclosure of the information supplied, information obtained by any person in his capacity as a member of the Serious Fraud Office may be disclosed by any member of the Serious Fraud Office designated by the Director for these purposes:

- 1692 (a) to any government department or Northern Ireland department or other authority or body discharging its functions on behalf of the Crown (including the Crown in right of Her Majesty's government in Northern Ireland)<sup>10</sup>;
- 1693 (b) to any competent authority<sup>11</sup>;
- 1694 (c) for the purposes of any criminal investigation or criminal proceedings, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere<sup>12</sup>; and 1695 (d) for the purposes of assisting any public or other authority for the time being designated for these purposes by an order<sup>13</sup> made by the Secretary of State to discharge any functions which are specified in the order<sup>14</sup>.

470 (7) any body having supervisory, regulatory or disciplinary functions in relation to any profession or any area of commercial activity (s 3(6)(l) (amended by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 ss 80(b), 91(2), Sch 6));

471 (8) any person or body having, under the law of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom, functions corresponding to any of the functions of any person mentioned in any of heads (1)-(7) supra (Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 3(6)(m));

472 (9) any person or body having, under the Treaty on European Union (Maastricht, 7 February 1992; TS 12 (1994); Cm 2485), or any other treaty to which the United Kingdom is a party, the function of receiving information of the kind in question (Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 3(6)(n) (s 3(6)(n), (o) added by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 80(b)); and 473 (10) any person or body having, under the law of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom, the function of receiving information relating to the proceeds of crime (Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 3(6)(o) (as so added)).

12 Ibid s 3(5)(c) (substituted by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 80(a)).

13 Such an order may impose conditions subject to which, and otherwise restrict the circumstances in which, information may be so disclosed: Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 3(7).

14 Ibid s 3(5)(d). The Serious Fraud Office has no general power to disclose to the liquidator of a company information obtained under statutory powers of search and seizure when investigating a fraud involving that company: Morris v Director of the Serious Fraud Office [1993] Ch 372, [1993] 1 All ER 788. The power of disclosure must be exercised reasonably, and in good faith; otherwise it can be impugned under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 8 (right to private life) on the basis that it is not made in accordance with the law for the purposes of art 8(2): R (on the application of Kent Pharmaceuticals Ltd v Director of Serious Fraud Office [2004] EWCA Civ 1494, [2005] 1 All ER 449. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. The Serious Fraud Office should normally give the owner of the documents sufficient advance notice of a proposed disclosure to enable him to raise any objection. Where it is not appropriate or practicable to give notice either at all or in time to enable the owner to have an opportunity to respond, the designated member of the Serious Fraud Office, having disclosed the documents, must then consider whether the owner should be told what has happened. The starting point is that the owner is entitled to be kept informed rather than the reverse: R (on the application of Kent Pharmaceuticals Ltd) v Director of Serious Fraud Office supra.

1097. Functions of the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions.

The Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions<sup>1</sup> and such staff as he may appoint<sup>2</sup> are together referred to as the Revenue and Customs Prosecution Office<sup>3</sup>.

The Director institutes<sup>4</sup> and conducts criminal proceedings in England and Wales relating to criminal investigations<sup>5</sup> by the Revenue and Customs<sup>6</sup>, and provides advice in relation to such criminal investigations or criminal proceedings<sup>7</sup>. The Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions also institutes and conducts criminal proceedings in England and Wales relating to criminal investigations<sup>8</sup> by the Serious Organised Crime Agency<sup>9</sup> of designated offences<sup>10</sup> and provides advice in relation to such criminal investigations or criminal proceedings that arise out of such investigations<sup>11</sup>. The Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions acting jointly with the Director of Public Prosecutions may also give directions to the Serious Organised Crime Agency for enabling it to determine which cases to refer to the appropriate prosecutor<sup>12</sup>.

Subject to specified exceptions<sup>13</sup>, it is an offence for the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office to disclose information held by it in connection with any of its functions, which relates to a person whose identity is specified in the disclosure or can be deduced from it<sup>14</sup>. A person found guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>15</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>16</sup> or to both<sup>17</sup>.

1 As to the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions see PARA 1068 ante.

2 As to the appointment of staff see the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 34(2); and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1192; INCOME TAXATION.

3 See s 34(3); and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1192; INCOME TAXATION.

4 As to the institution of proceedings see the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 15(2); and PARA 1080 ante (applied by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 35(5)(a)). See CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1193; INCOME TAXATION.

5 For these purposes, 'criminal investigation' means any process: (1) for considering whether an offence has been committed; (2) for discovering by whom an offence has been committed; or (3) as a result of which an offence is alleged to have been committed: ibid s 35(5)(b).

6 For these purposes, 'Revenue and Customs' is a reference to: (1) the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs; (2) an officer of Revenue and Customs; and (3) a person acting on behalf of the Commissioners or an officer of Revenue and Customs: see ibid s 35(3). See PARA 354 note 2 ante; and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1193; INCOME TAXATION.

7 See ibid s 35; and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1193; INCOME TAXATION. Functions may also be assigned to the Director by the Attorney General by order: see s 35(4); and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1193; INCOME TAXATION.

8 For these purposes, 'criminal investigation' means any process: (1) for considering whether an offence has been committed; (2) for discovering by whom an offence has been committed; or (3) as a result of which an offence is alleged to have been committed: ibid s 38(7)(a).

9 The Serious Organised Crime Agency ('SOCA') is established under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 1: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 430 et seq.

10 For these purposes, an offence is a 'designated offence' if criminal proceedings instituted by the Serious Organised Crime Agency in respect of the offence fall (or, as the case may be, would fall) to be referred to the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions by virtue of directions under the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 39(1) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 468): s 38(7)(b).

11 See ibid s 38; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 467.

12 See ibid s 39; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 468.

13 The Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 40(2) provides circumstances under which s 40(1) does not apply: see s 40(2); and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1195; INCOME TAXATION. See also ss 40(5), 41(4); and CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1195; INCOME TAXATION.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(1) INTRODUCTION/1098. Jurisdiction of justices.

16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS

(1) INTRODUCTION

1098. Jurisdiction of justices.

A magistrates' court<sup>1</sup> has jurisdiction to try any summary offence<sup>2</sup>. A magistrates' court has jurisdiction under the provisions relating to sending for trial<sup>3</sup> in respect of any offence committed by a person who appears or is brought before the court<sup>4</sup>. Subject to provisions relating to the allocation of trial<sup>5</sup>, and to any other enactment relating to the mode of trial of offences triable either way<sup>6</sup>, a magistrates' court has jurisdiction to try summarily any offence which is triable either way<sup>7</sup>. Where the defendant is under 18<sup>8</sup>, a magistrates' court has jurisdiction<sup>9</sup> to try summarily an indictable offence<sup>10</sup>.

The Criminal Procedure Rules relating to active case management apply to each case in a magistrates' court<sup>11</sup>.

1 For these purposes, the expression 'magistrates' court' means any justice or justices of the peace acting under any enactment or by virtue of his or their commission or under the common law: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 148(1). Except where the contrary is expressed, anything authorised or required by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 to be done by, to or before the magistrates' court by, to or before which any other thing was done, or is to be done, may be done by, to or before any magistrates' court acting in the same local justice area as that court: s 148(2) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 248). As to the powers of a magistrates' court for any area which may be exercised by a single justice of the peace for that area see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 49 (as amended); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 540. The reference in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 148(2) (as amended) to the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 includes a reference to the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996: s 76. As to magistrates' courts generally see MAGISTRATES.

2 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(1) (s 2 substituted by the Courts Act 2003 s 44). See MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 524. For the meaning of 'summary offence' see PARA 1102 post. As to the jurisdiction of magistrates generally see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 501 et seq.

3 See PARAS 1132-1140 post.

4 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(2) (as substituted (see note 2 supra); and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 51(1), (2)). See MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 523-524.

5 See PARAS 1106-1118 post.

6 For the meaning of 'offence triable either way' see PARA 1102 post.

7 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 2(3) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). See MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 524.

8 Where a person who appears or is brought before a youth court charged with an offence subsequently attains the age of 18, the youth court (the 'remitting court') may at any time before the start of the trial remit the person for trial to a magistrates' court other than a youth court (the 'other court'): Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 47(1) (amended by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(4), Sch 12 Pt I). For the meaning of 'start of the trial' see the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 22(11B) (as added); and PARA 1152 note 2 post: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 47(1). Where a person is so remitted he has no right of appeal against the remission and the remitting court must adjourn proceedings in relation to the offence: see s 47(2). The other court may deal with the case in any way in which it would have power to deal with it if all proceedings relating to the offence which took place before the remitting court had taken place before the other court: see s

47(4). Enactments relating to remand or the granting of bail in criminal proceedings (including the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 128 (as amended) (see PARA 1145 post)) have effect in relation to the remitting court's power or duty to remand the person on the adjournment as if any reference to the court to or before which the person remanded is to be brought or appear after remand were a reference to the other court: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 47(3).

As to the power of magistrates' courts to deal with defendants under the age of 18 see PARAS 1116-1118 post. See also PARA 1123 note 1 post. As to criminal proceedings against or involving children and young persons generally see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1232 et seq.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(1) INTRODUCTION/1099. Jurisdiction of District Judges (Magistrates' Courts).

1099. Jurisdiction of District Judges (Magistrates' Courts).

Nothing in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 requiring a magistrates' court to be composed of two or more justices, or limiting the powers of a magistrates' court composed of a single justice, applies to any District Judge (Magistrates' Courts)<sup>1</sup>.

A District Judge (Magistrates' Courts)<sup>2</sup> has power to do any act, and to exercise alone any jurisdiction, which can be done or exercised by two justices, apart from granting or transferring a licence<sup>3</sup>. Any statutory provision ancillary to the jurisdiction exercisable by two justices of the peace applies also to the jurisdiction of a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts), unless the provision relates to granting or transferring a licence<sup>4</sup>.

1 Courts Act 2003 s 26(1). Section 26 does not apply to the hearing or determination of domestic proceedings within the meaning of the Magistrates' Court Act 1980 s 65 (as amended) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 739) : Courts Act 2003 s 26(4).

As to District Judges (Magistrates' Courts) see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 572 et seq.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(1) INTRODUCTION/1100. Appearance by a legal representative.

1100. Appearance by a legal representative.

The prosecutor<sup>1</sup> must appear before a magistrates' court either himself or by a legal representative<sup>2</sup>. If he does not attend, and no legal representative attends on his behalf to support the charge, it will be dismissed, unless non-attendance is due to a mistake, when a fresh summons should be issued<sup>3</sup>. The proceedings do not abate by the death of the justice who issued the summons or warrant<sup>4</sup> or of the person who instituted criminal proceedings<sup>5</sup>. Any person may, it seems, take up the prosecution on the death of that person. The majority of prosecutions are instituted by the Crown Prosecution Service; but, where a private prosecutor is present and ready to proceed, he ought to have the conduct of the proceedings, except where the Director of Public Prosecutions takes over the prosecution<sup>6</sup>. The justices have an inherent right to regulate the procedure in their court in the interests of justice and a fair and expeditious hearing. There is nothing to prevent them, in the exercise of their discretion, permitting a person other than the informant, prosecutor or his legal representative to examine the witnesses<sup>7</sup>.

The defendant may be represented in a magistrates' court by a legal representative<sup>8</sup>, and an adjournment for the attendance of a legal representative may be, and indeed ought to be, granted where the application is made in good faith<sup>9</sup>. The defendant is entitled in an appropriate case to legal representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service<sup>10</sup>. Even in criminal proceedings, if the defendant is not legally represented, any person, whether a professional person or not, may attend as a friend of the defendant, may take notes, and unobtrusively make suggestions and give advice to the defendant, so long as he does not seek to take part in the proceedings as an advocate<sup>11</sup>.

8 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 122(1) (as amended: see note 2 supra). Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the right to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require: Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(3)(c). The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. A defendant is entitled to be represented by a legal representative of his own choosing if reasonably practicable; although this is not an absolute right, his choice should be respected: Goddard v Italy (1984) 6 EHRR 457, ECtHR. The overriding consideration is the requirements of justice, for both the prosecution and defence, in the circumstances of the case: R v D'Oliveira [1997] Crim LR 600, CA. See R v Al-Zubeidi [1999] Crim LR 906, CA. See also PARA 1237 post. An unrepresented defendant cannot rely on the disadvantages of not being legally represented to support an argument that the conviction was unsafe because of an inequality of arms: Van Geyseghen v Belgium (2001) 32 EHRR 554, ECtHR; R v Walton [2001] 8 Archbold News 2, CA.

An absent party who is legally represented is deemed not to be absent: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 122(2). However, appearance of a party by a legal representative does not satisfy any provision of any enactment or any recognisance expressly requiring his presence: s 122(3) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(3), Sch 18 para 25(1), (3)).

9 There is no absolute right to such an adjournment: R v Cambridgeshire Justices (1880) 44 JP 168; R v Biggins (1862) 5 LT 605.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(1) INTRODUCTION/1101. Early administrative hearing.

1101. Early administrative hearing.

Where a person ('the defendant') has been charged with an offence at a police station, the magistrates' court before whom he appears or is brought for the first time in relation to the charge may consist of a single justice<sup>1</sup>. At such a hearing conducted by a single justice the defendant must be asked whether he wishes to be granted a right to representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service and, if he does, the justice must decide whether or not to grant him such a right<sup>2</sup>.

At such a hearing the single justice: (1) may exercise, subject to the above provision, such of his powers as a single justice as he thinks fit; and (2) on adjourning the hearing, may remand the defendant in custody or on bail<sup>3</sup>.

These provisions apply in relation to a justices' clerk as they apply in relation to a single justice; but nothing in head (2) above authorises such a clerk to remand the defendant in custody or, without the consent of the prosecutor and the defendant, to remand the defendant on bail on conditions other than those (if any) previously imposed<sup>4</sup>.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(2) PROCEDURAL CLASSIFICATION OF OFFENCES/1102. Procedural classification of offences.

(2) PROCEDURAL CLASSIFICATION OF OFFENCES

1102. Procedural classification of offences.

As regards mode of trial there are three classes of offences: (1) offences triable only on indictment, which cannot be tried summarily in a magistrates' court<sup>1</sup>; (2) summary offences<sup>2</sup>, the trial of which may not take place on indictment in the Crown Court<sup>3</sup>; and (3) offences triable either way<sup>4</sup>.

1 These offences are commonly described as 'indictable-only offences'. Statutes often refer to 'indictable offences'. 'Indictable offence' means an offence which, if committed by an adult, is triable on indictment, whether it is exclusively so triable or triable either way (see note 4 infra); and 'indictable', in its application to offences, is to be construed accordingly: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

2 'Summary offence' means an offence which, if committed by an adult, is triable only summarily: and 'summary', in its application to offences, is to be construed accordingly: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

3 As to summary trial see PARA 1104 post.

4 'Offence triable either way' means an offence, other than an offence triable on indictment only by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 Pt V (ss 37-70) (as amended), which, if committed by an adult, is triable either on indictment or summarily: Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 para 59). See PARA 1103 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(2) PROCEDURAL CLASSIFICATION OF OFFENCES/1103. Offences triable either way.

1103. Offences triable either way.

Without prejudice to any other enactment by virtue of which any offence is triable either way, the following offences are triable either way<sup>1</sup>:

- 1696 (1) offences at common law of public nuisance<sup>2</sup>;
- 1697 (2) an offence at common law of outraging public decency<sup>3</sup>;
- 1698 (3) appearing to be the keeper of a bawdy house etc<sup>4</sup>;

(3) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE SUMMARILY ONLY

1104. In general.

On summary trial of an information charging a summary offence the court must, if the defendant appears, state to him the substance of the information and ask him whether he pleads guilty or not guilty<sup>1</sup>. After hearing the evidence and the parties, the court must convict the defendant or dismiss the information<sup>2</sup>. If the defendant pleads guilty, the court may convict him without hearing evidence<sup>3</sup>.

(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY

(i) Introduction

1105. Introduction.

The Criminal Justice Act 2003 has introduced many amendments to the legislation relating to the procedure for offences that are triable either way, not all of which are yet in force. The provisions described in this paragraph apply until a day to be appointed.

The Magistrates' Court Act 1980<sup>1</sup> provides that where an adult appears or is brought before a magistrates' court charged with an either-way offence, the court must explain to him that he may indicate whether (if the offence were to proceed to trial) he would plead guilty; and explain that if he indicates that he would plead guilty:

- 1720 (1) the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from the beginning the summary trial of the offence, and the court had asked whether he pleaded guilty or not guilty<sup>2</sup>; and
- 1721 (2) he may be committed for sentence to Crown Court if the court is of the opinion that certain grounds exist<sup>3</sup>.

If the defendant indicates that he would plead guilty the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from the beginning the summary trial of the offence and the defendant had pleaded guilty<sup>4</sup>. If the defendant indicates that he would plead not guilty or fails to indicate how he would plead, the court must decide, in the light of any representations by the prosecutor or the defendant, whether the offence appears to be more suitable for summary trial or for trial on indictment<sup>5</sup>. The court must consider: (a) the nature of the case; (b) whether the circumstances make the offence one of a serious character; (c) whether the punishment which a magistrates' court could inflict would be adequate; and (d) any other relevant circumstances<sup>6</sup>. If having considered these issues the magistrates' court decides that trial on indictment is more suitable, it will commence to hold committal proceedings in respect of the offence in order to determine whether to commit the defendant to the Crown Court for trial<sup>7</sup>. It will so commit him if there is sufficient evidence to put the defendant on trial or if the court acts under a power to commit without consideration of the evidence<sup>8</sup>. However, if the court decides that summary trial is more suitable it must explain to the defendant that the offence appears more suitable for summary trial and that he can either consent to summary trial, or if he wishes, be tried on indictment, and that if he is tried summarily and convicted he may be committed to the Crown Court for sentence if the court is of the opinion that certain grounds exist<sup>9</sup>. If the defendant consents to summary trial the magistrates' court will proceed to it; if he does not so consent, committal proceedings will be held as they would if the court had decided that trial on indictment was more suitable<sup>10</sup>.

Special provisions apply in all respects where the case is one of serious or complex fraud and in certain cases involving children. In serious or complex fraud cases a notice may be given by a designated authority<sup>11</sup> in respect of an indictable offence where the authority is satisfied that there is sufficient evidence for the person charged to be put on trial and that a case of fraud of such seriousness or complexity is revealed making it appropriate that the management of the case should be, without delay, taken over by the Crown Court<sup>12</sup>. In the case of certain offences involving children<sup>13</sup>, the Director of Public Prosecutions may give notice that he is of the opinion that the evidence is sufficient for the person to be put on trial for the offence; that a child under the relevant specified age will be called as a witness at the trial; and that for the purpose of avoiding prejudice to the welfare of the child the case should be taken over and proceeded with without delay by the Crown Court<sup>14</sup>. If a notice of transfer is served on a magistrates' court under either of these sets of provisions the effect is that the magistrates' court must forthwith send the defendant to the Crown Court for trial; they cannot allocate the case for summary trial if the offence is an either way offence.

A magistrates' court before which a person under 18 appears or is brought charged with an offence which, in the case of an adult, is triable only on indictment or triable either way must deal with it summarily unless: (i) the charge is one of homicide or of a specified firearms offence in respect of which the defendant, if convicted, would be subject to a minimum sentence provision; (ii) the offence is so grave that under specific statutory powers he, if found guilty, may be sentenced to be detained for a long period; (iii) he is charged jointly with an adult and the court considers it necessary in the interest of justice to commit the case for trial. If a case falls within heads (i) to (iii) above, the defendant cannot be tried summarily and the court must commit the defendant for trial subject to the normal rules relating to committal proceedings<sup>15</sup>.

The Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000<sup>16</sup> provides that where on the summary trial of an offence triable either way a person aged 18 or over is convicted of an offence and the court is of the opinion that the offence or combination of offences was so serious that greater punishment should be inflicted for the offence than the court has power to impose, or in the case of a violent or sexual offence that a custodial sentence for a term longer than the court has power to impose is necessary to protect the public from serious harm to him, the court may commit<sup>17</sup> the offender in custody or on bail to the Crown Court for sentence<sup>18</sup>. In addition, where: (A) a person aged 18 or over appears or is brought before a magistrates' court ('the court') on an information charging him with an offence triable either way ('the offence'); (B) he or his representative indicates that he would plead guilty if the offence were to proceed to trial; and (C) proceeding as if he had been asked to plead and he had pleaded guilty, the court convicts him of the offence<sup>19</sup>, then if the court has committed the offender to the Crown Court for trial for one or more related offences, that is to say, one or more offences which, in its opinion, are related to the offence, it may commit him in custody or on bail to the Crown Court to be dealt with in respect of the offence<sup>20</sup>. Where an offender is committed by a magistrates' court for sentence<sup>21</sup> the Crown Court must inquire into the circumstances of the case and may deal with the offender in any way in which it could deal with him if he had just been convicted of the offence on indictment before the court<sup>22</sup>.

1 As from a day to be appointed the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 Pt 1 amends the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 and introduces new procedural provisions for offences triable on indictment or summarily. NOTE 14--See further Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch 6 para 19(a).

NOTE 15--1980 Act s 24(1B) amended: Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 Sch 1 para 1, Sch 5.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(ii) Order of Consideration/1106. Order of consideration for either-way offences.

(ii) Order of Consideration

1106. Order of consideration for either-way offences.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> where an adult<sup>2</sup> appears or is brought before a magistrates' court charged with an either-way offence<sup>3</sup> (the 'relevant offence'), the court must proceed in the following manner<sup>4</sup>.

If a notice has been given in respect of the relevant offence under specified provisions<sup>5</sup> relating to cases of serious or complex fraud or to certain cases involving children, the court must deal with the offence as provided in specified provisions<sup>6</sup> relating to sending cases to the Crown Court for trial<sup>7</sup>.

Otherwise the following provisions apply:

1722 (1) if the adult (or another adult with whom the adult is charged jointly with the relevant offence) is or has been sent<sup>8</sup> to the Crown Court for trial for an offence triable only on indictment (other than one in respect of which such a notice<sup>9</sup> has been given) or such a notice is given:

69

110. (a) the court must first consider the relevant offence under a number of specified provisions<sup>10</sup> and, where applicable, deal with it under one of them<sup>11</sup>;

111. (b) if the adult is not sent to the Crown Court for trial for the relevant offence by virtue of head (a) above, the court must then proceed to deal with the relevant offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>12</sup> relating to indication of intended plea ('plea before venue') and, if necessary, allocation of trial<sup>13</sup>;

70

1723 (2) in all other cases:

71

112. (a) the court must first consider the relevant offence under specified provisions<sup>14</sup> relating to indication of intended plea ('plea before venue') and, if necessary, allocation of trial<sup>15</sup>;

113. (b) if, by virtue of head (2)(a) above, the court would be required<sup>16</sup> to proceed as if the proceedings constituted a summary trial and the defendant pleaded guilty, it must proceed as so required (and, accordingly, may not consider the offence under the provisions<sup>17</sup> relating to sending to the Crown Court for trial)<sup>18</sup>;

114. (c) if head (2)(b) above does not apply: (i) the court must consider the relevant offence under specified provisions<sup>19</sup> relating to sending for trial and, where applicable, deal with it under the relevant provision<sup>20</sup>; (ii) if the adult is not sent to the Crown Court for trial for the relevant offence by virtue of head (i) above, the court must then proceed<sup>21</sup> to deal with the relevant offence as follows: (A) if summary trial appears more suitable to the magistrates' court it must ask the defendant whether he consents to summary trial and proceed to such trial if he so consents, or proceed in accordance with the sending for trial provisions if he does not; (B) if trial on indictment appears more suitable it must proceed in accordance with the specified sending for trial provisions<sup>22</sup>.

1 The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 50A is added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 paras 15, 17 as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See PARA 1131 post.

2 'Adult' means a person aged 18 or over, and references to an adult include a corporation: Crime and Disorder Act s 51E(a) (s 51E added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 3 paras 15, 18). At the date at which this volume states the law the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51E (as added) has effect only in relation to cases sent for trial under s 51A(3)(d) (as added) (see PARA 1133 post): Criminal Justice Act 2003 (Commencement No 8 and Transitional and Saving Provisions) Order 2005, SI 2005/950, art 2, Sch 1 para 29. For the purposes of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998, the age of a person is deemed to be that which it appears to the court to be after considering any available evidence: s 117(3). A person reaches a particular age at the commencement of the relevant anniversary of the birth: Family Law Reform Act 1969 s 9. As to proceedings against corporations see PARA 1161 post.

3 For these purposes, 'either-way offence' means an offence triable either way: Crime and Disorder Act s 51E(b) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'offence triable either way' see PARA 1102 note 4 ante.

21 Ie as contemplated by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 20(8), (9) (prospectively substituted) (see PARA 1112 post) or s 21 (prospectively substituted) (see PARA 1113 post).

22 Crime and Disorder Act 1998 50A(3)(b)(iii)(b) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra). Section 50A(3) (prospectively added) (see the text and notes 8-21 supra) is subject to any requirement to proceed as mentioned in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(2) or 22(6)(a) (certain offences where value involved is small: see PARA 1114 post): Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 50A(4) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra).

Nothing in s 50A (prospectively added) (see the text and notes 1-21 supra) prevents the court from committing the adult to the Crown Court for sentence pursuant to any enactment, if he is convicted of the relevant offence: s 50A(5) (prospectively added: see note 1 supra).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. ### (iii) Indication of Intended Plea

1107. Initial procedure: defendant to indicate intention as to plea.

Where a person who has attained the age of 18<sup>1</sup> years appears or is brought before a magistrates' court on an information<sup>2</sup> charging him with an offence triable either way<sup>3</sup>, the court must cause the charge to be written down, if this has not already been done, and to be read to the defendant<sup>4</sup>. The court must then explain to the defendant in ordinary language that he may indicate whether (if the offence were to proceed to trial) he would plead guilty or not guilty, and that if he indicates that he would plead guilty:

1724 (1) the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from the beginning the summary trial of the information and, having been asked, he had pleaded guilty<sup>5</sup>;

1725 (2) he may be committed to the Crown Court for the sentence<sup>6</sup> if the court is of a specified<sup>7</sup> opinion<sup>8</sup>.

The court must then ask the defendant whether (if the offence were to proceed to trial) he would plead guilty or not guilty<sup>9</sup>. If the defendant indicates that he would plead guilty the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from the beginning the summary trial of the information and as if, having been asked, the defendant had pleaded guilty<sup>10</sup>.

If the defendant indicates that he would plead not guilty the provisions<sup>11</sup> relating to the initial procedure for allocation of trial proceedings apply<sup>12</sup>. If the defendant in fact fails to indicate a plea he is to be taken<sup>13</sup> to indicate that he would plead not guilty<sup>14</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed the above provisions do not apply where, in respect of the offence, the court receives a notice under provisions<sup>15</sup> relating to serious or complex fraud cases or to certain other cases involving children; instead the court must proceed in relation to the offence under the provisions<sup>16</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>17</sup>.

1 Where the age of any person at any time is material for the purposes of any provision of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 regulating the powers of a magistrates' court, his age at the material time is deemed to be or to have been that which appears to the court after considering any available evidence to be or to have been his age at that time: s 150(4). A person attains a particular age at the commencement of the relevant anniversary of the date of his birth: Family Law Reform Act 1969 s 9.

2 As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 ante.

4 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17A(1), (3) (s 17A added by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 49(1), (2)). Everything that the court is required to do under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17A (as added) must be done with the defendant present in court: s 17A(2) (as so added).

As from a day to be appointed the functions of a magistrates' court under ss 17A-17D (s 17A as added, amended, prospectively amended; ss 17B, 17C as added; s 17D prospectively added) may be discharged by a single justice: s 17E(1) (s 17E prospectively added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 paras 1, 3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See PARA 1105 ante. The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17E(1) (prospectively added) is not to be taken as authorising the summary trial of an information (otherwise than in accordance with s 17A(6) (as added) (see the text and note 10 infra) or s 17B(2)(c) (as added) (see PARA 1108 head (c) post), or the imposition of a sentence, by a magistrates' court composed of fewer than two justices: s 17E(2) (as so prospectively added).

As from a day to be appointed head (2) in the text is substituted so that under these provisions a defendant may be committed to the Crown Court under s 3 (prospectively substituted) (see PARA 1123 post) or s 3A (prospectively added) (see PARA 1124 post) if the court is of such opinion as is mentioned in s 3(2) (prospectively substituted) or s 3A(2) (prospectively added) unless the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17D(2) (prospectively added) (see the text and note 10 infra) were to apply: s 17A(4)(b) (prospectively substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 3 paras 1, 2(1), (2)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See PARA 1105 note 1 ante. For the approved form of words to be used see R v Southampton Magistrates' Court, ex p Sansome [1999] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 112, DC. Although the procedure under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17A (as added and amended) should take place as soon as possible, the defendant is entitled to receive relevant information from the prosecution that will affect his plea and the allocation of trial proceedings (if any); and if a request for advanced disclosure under the Magistrates' Courts (Advance Information) Rules 1985, SI 1985/601 (as amended) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 588) has not been complied with, the court must adjourn the case unless satisfied that his failure to disclose does not prejudice the defendant: R v Calderdale Magistrates Court, ex p Donahue and Cutler [2001] Crim LR 141, DC.

9 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17A(5) (as added: see note 4 supra). Subject to s 17A(6) (as added) (see the text and note 10 infra), the following are not for any purpose to be taken to constitute the taking of a plea: (1) asking the defendant under s 17A (as added and amended) whether if the offence were to proceed to trial he would plead guilty or not guilty; (2) an indication by the defendant under s 17A (as added and amended) of how he would plead: s 17A(9) (as so added).

10 Ibid s 17A(6) (as added: see note 4 supra). As from a day to be appointed if: (1) the offence is a scheduled offence; (2) the court proceeds in relation to the offence in accordance with s 17A(6) (as added) or 17B(2)(c) (as added) (see PARA 1108 post); and (3) the court convicts the defendant of the offence, the court must consider whether, having regard to any representations made by him or by the prosecutor, the value involved appears to the court to exceed the relevant sum as specified for the purposes of s 22 (as amended) (see PARA 299 ante): s 17D(1) (s 17D prospectively added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 3 paras 1, 3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See PARA 1105 note 1 ante. As to the value involved see PARA 1114 post. For the meaning of 'scheduled offence' see PARA 1114 note 2 post.

As from a day to be appointed if it appears to the court clear that the value involved does not exceed the relevant sum, or it appears to the court for any reason not clear whether the value involved does or does not exceed the relevant sum: (a) subject to the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17D(4) (prospectively added) the court does not have power to impose on the defendant in respect of the offence a sentence in excess of the limits mentioned in s 33(1)(a) (as amended; prospectively amended) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 661); (b) the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 3 (prospectively substituted) and s 4 (prospectively amended) (see PARAS 1123, 1127 post) do not apply as regards that offence: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17D(2) (as so prospectively added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As from a day to be appointed the provisions of s 22(9)-(12) (as amended) (see PARA 1114 post) apply for the purposes of s 17D (as prospectively added) as they apply for the purposes of s 22 (as amended): see s 17D(3) (as so prospectively added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As from a day to be appointed head (a) supra does not apply to an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12A (as added and amended) (aggravated vehicle-taking: see PARA 299 ante): Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17D(4) (as so prospectively added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

14 Ibid s 17A(8) (as added: see note 4 supra). A magistrates' court proceeding under s 17A (as added and amended) or s 17B (as added) (see PARA 1108 post) may adjourn the proceedings at any time, and on doing so on any occasion when the defendant is present may remand the defendant, and must remand him if:

494 (1) on the occasion on which he first appeared, or was brought, before the court to answer to the information he was in custody or, having been released on bail, surrendered to the custody of the court; or

495 (2) he has been remanded at any time in the course of proceedings on the information, and where the court remands the defendant, the time fixed for the resumption of proceedings is to be that at which he is required to appear or be brought before the court in pursuance of the remand or would be required to be brought before the court but for s 128(3A) (as added and amended; prospectively amended) (see PARA 1144 post): s 17C (added by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 49(2)).

1107 Initial procedure: defendant to indicate intention as to plea

NOTE 8--2003 Act Sch 3 para 2(2) amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 13 para 2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iii) Indication of Intended Plea/1108. Intention as to plea: absence of defendant.

1108. Intention as to plea: absence of defendant.

Where:

- 1726 (1) a person who has attained the age of 18 years<sup>1</sup> appears or is brought before a magistrates' court on an information<sup>2</sup> charging him with an offence triable either way<sup>3</sup>;
- 1727 (2) the defendant is represented by a legal representative<sup>4</sup>;
- 1728 (3) the court considers that by reason of the defendant's disorderly conduct before the court it is not practicable for specified proceedings<sup>5</sup> relating to an indication as to plea to be conducted in his presence<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1729 (4) the court considers that it should proceed in the absence of the defendant<sup>7</sup>, then the procedure is as follows:

- 1730 (a) the court must cause the charge to be written down, if this has not already been done, and to be read to the representative<sup>8</sup>;
- 1731 (b) the court must ask the representative whether (if the offence were to proceed to trial) the defendant would plead guilty or not guilty<sup>9</sup>;
- 1732 (c) if the representative indicates that the defendant would plead guilty the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from the beginning the summary trial of the information and as if, having been asked, the defendant pleaded guilty under it<sup>10</sup>;
- 1733 (d) if the representative indicates that the defendant would plead not guilty, the provisions<sup>11</sup> relating to the initial procedure for allocation of trial proceedings apply<sup>12</sup>.

If the representative in fact fails to indicate how the defendant would plead, he is to be taken<sup>13</sup> to indicate that the defendant would plead not guilty<sup>14</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed the above provisions do not apply where, in respect of the offence, the court receives a notice under provisions<sup>15</sup> relating to serious or complex fraud cases or to certain cases involving children; instead the court must proceed in relation to the offence under the provisions<sup>16</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>17</sup>.

HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1109. In general.

(iv) Allocation of Trial

1109. In general.

Where a person who has attained the age of 18<sup>1</sup> appears or is brought before a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup> on an information<sup>3</sup> charging him with an offence triable either way<sup>4</sup>, and he indicates<sup>5</sup>, or his representative indicates<sup>6</sup>, that if the offence were to proceed to trial he would plead not guilty, the following procedure<sup>7</sup> applies<sup>8</sup>; and<sup>9</sup> everything that the court is required to do<sup>10</sup> must be done before any evidence is called and with the defendant present<sup>11</sup> in court<sup>12</sup>.

The court may proceed in the absence of the defendant in accordance with such of the statutory provisions<sup>13</sup> as are applicable in the circumstances if the court considers that, by reason of his disorderly conduct before the court, it is not practicable for the proceedings to be conducted in his presence<sup>14</sup>.

A magistrates' court<sup>15</sup> may adjourn the proceedings at any time, and on doing so on any occasion when the defendant is present may remand the defendant, and must remand him if:

- 1734 (1) on the occasion on which he first appeared, or was brought, before the court to answer to the information he was in custody or, having been released on bail, surrendered to the custody of the court<sup>16</sup>; or
- 1735 (2) he has been remanded at any time in the course of proceedings on the information<sup>17</sup>, and, where the court remands the defendant, the time fixed for the resumption of the proceedings must be that at which he is required to appear or be brought before the court in pursuance of the remand or would be required to be so brought<sup>18</sup> before the court<sup>19</sup>.

1 As to the procedure in respect of persons who have not attained the age of 18 see PARA 1116 post. As to age see PARA 1107 note 1 ante. The appropriate date at which to determine whether a defendant has attained the age of 18, thus entitling him to elect to be tried by a jury, is the date of his appearance before the court on the occasion when the court makes its decision as to the mode of trial: R v Islington North Juvenile Court, ex p Daley [1983] 1 AC 347, 75 Cr App Rep 280, HL. The fact that the defendant reaches 18 after the allocation of trial decision has been made but before the commencement of the trial does not confer the right to elect trial by jury: R v Nottingham Justices, ex p Taylor [1992] QB 557, 93 Cr App Rep 365, DC.

2 As from a day to be appointed the functions of a magistrates' court under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 19-23 (as amended; prospectively amended) (see PARA 1111 et seq post) may be discharged by a single justice; but this provision is not to be taken to authorise the summary trial of an information otherwise than in accordance with s 20(7) (prospectively substituted) (see PARA 1112 post), or the imposition of a sentence, by a magistrates' court composed of fewer than two justices: s 18(5) (prospectively substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 paras 1, 4). ### 1109 In general

NOTE 9--1980 Act s 11(1) amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 54(2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1110. Supply of advance information.

1110. Supply of advance information.

As soon as practicable after a person has been charged with an offence in proceedings for an offence triable either way<sup>1</sup> or a summons or requisition<sup>2</sup> has been served on a person in connection with such an offence, the prosecutor must provide him with a notice in writing explaining the effect of his right to request advance information<sup>3</sup> and setting out the address at which such a request may be made<sup>4</sup>.

If, in any such proceedings, either before the magistrates' court considers whether the offence appears to be more suitable for summary trial<sup>5</sup> or trial on indictment<sup>6</sup> or, where the defendant has not attained the age of 18 years<sup>7</sup> when he appears or is brought before a magistrates' court, before he is asked whether he pleads guilty or not guilty, the defendant or a person representing the defendant requests the prosecutor to furnish him with advance information, the prosecutor must furnish him as soon as practicable with either:

- 1736 (1) a copy of those parts of every written statement<sup>8</sup> which contain information as to the facts and matters of which the prosecutor proposes to adduce evidence in the proceedings<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1737 (2) a summary of the facts and matters of which the prosecutor proposes to adduce evidence in the proceedings<sup>10</sup>.

However, if the prosecutor is of the opinion that the disclosure of any particular fact or matter in compliance with any such requirements might lead to any person on whose evidence he proposes to rely in the proceedings being intimidated, to an attempt to intimidate him being made or otherwise to the course of justice being interfered with, he is not obliged to comply with such requirements in relation to that fact or matter<sup>11</sup>. Where the prosecutor considers that he is not obliged to comply with the above requirements in relation to any particular fact or matter, he must give notice in writing to the person who made the request to the effect that certain advance information is being withheld<sup>12</sup>.

If the court is satisfied that, a request for advance information having been so made to the prosecutor by or on behalf of the defendant, a requirement imposed on the prosecutor has not been complied with, the court must adjourn the proceedings pending compliance with the requirement unless the court is satisfied that the conduct of the case for the defendant will not be substantially prejudiced by non-compliance with the requirement<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to offences triable either way see PARA 1103 ante.

6 See PARAS 1111, 1113 post.

8 For these purposes, 'written statement' means a statement made by a person on whose evidence the prosecutor proposes to rely in the proceedings and, where such a person has made more than one written statement one of which contains information as to all the facts and matters in relation to which the prosecutor proposes to rely on the evidence of that person, only that statement is a written statement for these purposes: see CrimPR 21.3(2). The provision of advance information by the prosecution by way of witness statements in the magistrates' court is equivalent to the service of witness statements in the Crown Court, with the result that at that stage the prosecution's discretion as to which witnesses to call is fettered and it ought normally to call any witness whose evidence is capable of belief: R v Haringey Justices, ex p DPP [1996] QB 351, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 119, DC.

13 CrimPR 21.6(1). Where, in such circumstances, the court decides not to adjourn the proceedings, a record of that decision and of the reasons why the court was satisfied that the conduct of the case for the defendant would not be substantially prejudiced by non-compliance with the requirement must be entered in the register kept under CrimPR 6.1 (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 628, 661-662, 726, 761, 765): CrimPR 21.6(2). ## UPDATE

1110-1111 Supply of advance information, Decision as to allocation

CrimPR Pt 21 now Criminal Procedure Rules 2010, SI 2010/60 ('CrimPR'), Pt 21. The following rules apply unless the court otherwise directs, under CrimPR 21.1(2), that, for a specified period, CrimPR Pt 21 will not apply to any case in that court; or to any specified category of case.

CrimPR Pt 21 applies in a magistrates' court, where the offence is one that can be tried in a magistrates' court: CrimPR 21.1(1). The prosecutor must provide initial details of the prosecution case by serving those details on the court officer; and making those details available to the defendant, at, or before, the beginning of the day of the first hearing: CrimPR 21.2. Initial details of the prosecution case must include (1) a summary of the evidence on which that case will be based; or (2) any statement, document or extract setting out facts or other matters on which that case will be based; or (3) any combination of such a summary, statement, document or extract; and (4) the defendant's previous convictions: CrimPR 21.3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1111. Decision as to allocation.

1111. Decision as to allocation.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> the court must decide whether the offence appears to it more suitable for summary trial or for trial on indictment<sup>2</sup>. Before making such a decision, the court must:

- 1738 (1) give the prosecution an opportunity to inform the court of the defendant's previous convictions (if any)<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1739 (2) give the prosecution and the defendant an opportunity to make representations as to whether summary trial or trial on indictment would be more suitable<sup>4</sup>.

In making such a decision, the court must consider:

- 1740 (a) whether the sentence which a magistrates' court would have power to impose for the offence would be adequate<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1741 (b) any representations made<sup>6</sup> by the prosecution or the defendant<sup>7</sup>, and must have regard to any allocation guidelines (or revised allocation guidelines) issued<sup>8</sup> as definitive guidelines by the Sentencing Guidelines Council<sup>9</sup>.

If, in respect of the offence, the court receives a notice under specified provisions<sup>10</sup> relating to serious or complex fraud cases or to certain cases involving children, the above provisions<sup>11</sup> and other specified provisions<sup>12</sup> do not apply, and the court must proceed in relation to the offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>13</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>14</sup>.

1 The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 19 (as amended) is substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 paras 1, 5 as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to preceding legislation concerning offences triable on indictment or summarily see PARA 1105 ante.

2 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 19(1) (prospectively substituted: see note 1 supra). Where a defendant is brought before a magistrates' court in respect of proceedings for an offence triable either way, the court must, before it considers whether the offence appears to be more suitable for summary trial or trial on indictment, satisfy itself that the defendant is aware of the requirements which may be imposed on the prosecutor under CrimPR 21.3: CrimPR 21.1, 21.5(1). Where the defendant has not attained the age of 18 years when he appears or is brought before a magistrates' court in such proceedings, the court must, before the defendant is asked whether he pleads guilty or not guilty, satisfy itself that the defendant is aware of the requirements which may be imposed on the prosecutor under CrimPR 21.3 (see PARA 1110 notes 5-10 ante): CrimPR 21.5(2). As to offences triable either way see PARA 1103 ante.

3 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 19(2)(a) (prospectively substituted: see note 1 supra). In s 19 (prospectively substituted) any reference to a previous conviction is a reference to:

498 (1) a previous conviction by a court in the United Kingdom (s 19(5)(a) (as so prospectively substituted)); or 499 (2) a previous finding of guilt in: (a) any proceedings under the Army Act 1955, the Air Force Act 1955 or the Naval Discipline Act 1957 (whether before a court-martial or any other court or person authorised under any of those Acts to award a punishment in respect of any offence: see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARAS 151 et seq, 191 et seq, 206 et seq); or (b) any proceedings before a standing civilian court (see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 520) (Magistrates Courts Act 1980 s 19(5)(b) (as so prospectively substituted)).

UPDATE

1110-1111 Supply of advance information, Decision as to allocation

CrimPR Pt 21 now Criminal Procedure Rules 2010, SI 2010/60 ('CrimPR'), Pt 21. The following rules apply unless the court otherwise directs, under CrimPR 21.1(2), that, for a specified period, CrimPR Pt 21 will not apply to any case in that court; or to any specified category of case.

CrimPR Pt 21 applies in a magistrates' court, where the offence is one that can be tried in a magistrates' court: CrimPR 21.1(1). The prosecutor must provide initial details of the prosecution case by serving those details on the court officer; and making those details available to the defendant, at, or before, the beginning of the day of the first hearing: CrimPR 21.2. Initial details of the prosecution case must include (1) a summary of the evidence on which that case will be based; or (2) any statement, document or extract setting out facts or other matters on which that case will be based; or (3) any combination of such a summary, statement, document or extract; and (4) the defendant's previous convictions: CrimPR 21.3.

1111 Decision as to allocation

NOTE 3--Magistrates Courts Act 1980 s 19(5)(b) (s 19 as prospectively substituted: see NOTE 1) further substituted: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 88.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1112. Procedure where summary trial appears more suitable.

1112. Procedure where summary trial appears more suitable.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> if the court decides<sup>2</sup> that the offence appears more suitable for summary trial, the following provisions apply<sup>3</sup>.

The court must explain to the defendant in ordinary language:

- 1742 (1) that it appears to the court more suitable for him to be tried summarily for the offence<sup>4</sup>;
- 1743 (2) that he can either consent to be so tried or, if he wishes, be tried by a jury<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1744 (3) in the case of a specified offence<sup>6</sup>, that, if he is tried summarily and is convicted by the court, he may be committed for sentence<sup>7</sup> to the Crown Court if the committing court is of opinion that the criteria for the imposition of a sentence under specified provisions relating to dangerous adult offenders would be met<sup>8</sup>.

The defendant may then request an indication ('an indication of sentence') of whether a custodial sentence<sup>9</sup> or non-custodial sentence would be more likely to be imposed if he were to be tried summarily for the offence and to plead guilty<sup>10</sup>. If the defendant requests an indication of sentence, the court may, but need not, give such an indication<sup>11</sup>. If the defendant requests and the court gives an indication of sentence, the court must ask the defendant whether he wishes, on the basis of the indication, to reconsider the indication of plea which was given<sup>12</sup>, or is taken<sup>13</sup> to have been given<sup>14</sup>. If the defendant indicates that he wishes to reconsider the indication of plea, the court must ask the defendant whether (if the offence were to proceed to trial) he would plead guilty or not guilty<sup>15</sup>.

If the defendant indicates that he would plead guilty, the court must proceed as if the proceedings constituted from that time the summary trial of the information<sup>16</sup> and as if, having been asked, the defendant had pleaded guilty<sup>17</sup>.

Where:

- 1745 (a) the court does not give an indication of sentence (whether because the defendant does not request one or because the court does not agree to give one)<sup>18</sup>;
- 1746 (b) the defendant either:
73
  - 115. (i) does not indicate<sup>19</sup> that he wishes<sup>20</sup>; or
  - 116. (ii) indicates that he does not wish<sup>21</sup>,
- 74
  - 1747 to reconsider the indication<sup>22</sup> of plea<sup>23</sup>; or
  - 1748 (c) the defendant does not indicate<sup>24</sup> that he would plead guilty<sup>25</sup>, the court must ask the defendant whether he consents to be tried summarily or wishes to be tried on indictment<sup>26</sup> and:

- 1749 (A) if he consents to be tried summarily, must proceed to the summary trial of the information<sup>27</sup>; and
- 1750 (B) if he does not so consent, must proceed in relation to the offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>28</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>29</sup>.

Where the case is dealt with summarily<sup>30</sup> no court (whether a magistrates' court or not) may impose a custodial sentence for the offence unless such a sentence was indicated in the indication of sentence, where one has been given<sup>31</sup>. Except as so provided an indication of sentence is not binding on any court (whether a magistrates' court or not); and no sentence may be challenged or be the subject of appeal in any court on the ground that it is not consistent with an indication of sentence<sup>32</sup>.

1 The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 20 (as amended) is substituted, and s 20A is added, by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 Pt 1 paras 1, 6 as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3). ## UPDATE

1112 Procedure where summary trial appears more suitable

NOTE 1--2003 Act Sch 3 para 6 amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 13 para 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1113. Procedure where trial on indictment appears more suitable.

1113. Procedure where trial on indictment appears more suitable.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup> if the court decides<sup>2</sup> that the offence appears to it more suitable for trial on indictment, the court must tell the defendant that the court has decided that it is more suitable for him to be tried on indictment, and must proceed in relation to the offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>3</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>4</sup>.

1 The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 21 is substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 paras 1, 7 as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to preceding legislation concerning offences triable on indictment or summarily see PARA 1105 ante.

2 le as required by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 19 (prospectively substituted): see PARA 1111 ante.

3 le the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51(1) (as substituted): see PARA 1132 post.

4 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 21 (prospectively substituted: see note 1 supra).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1114. Certain offences triable either way to be tried summarily if value involved is small.

1114. Certain offences triable either way to be tried summarily if value involved is small.

If the offence charged by the information<sup>1</sup> is a scheduled offence<sup>2</sup>, the court must, before proceeding to consider which mode of trial appears more suitable<sup>3</sup>, consider whether, having regard to any representations made by the prosecutor or the defendant, the value involved<sup>4</sup> appears to the court to exceed the relevant sum<sup>5</sup>.

If it appears to the court clear that, for the offence charged, the value involved does not exceed the relevant sum, the court must proceed as if the offence were triable only summarily<sup>6</sup>.

If it appears to the court clear that, for the offence charged, the value involved exceeds the relevant sum, the court must thereupon proceed to consider which mode of trial appears more suitable in the ordinary way<sup>7</sup> without further regard to the above provisions<sup>8</sup>.

If, however, it appears to the court for any reason not clear whether, for the offence charged, the value involved does or does not exceed the relevant sum, the following provisions apply<sup>9</sup>. The court must cause the charge to be written down, if this has not already been done, and read to the defendant, and must explain to him in ordinary language:

- 1751 (1) that he can, if he wishes, consent to be tried summarily for the offence and that, if he consents to be so tried, he will definitely be tried in that way<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1752 (2) that, if he is tried summarily and is convicted by the court, his liability to imprisonment or a fine will be limited<sup>11</sup> in accordance with the statutory provisions<sup>12</sup>.

After so explaining to the defendant, the court must ask him whether he consents to be tried summarily and:

- 1753 (a) if he so consents, must proceed<sup>13</sup> as if the offence were triable only summarily<sup>14</sup>;
- 1754 (b) if he does not so consent, must proceed<sup>15</sup> to consider which mode of trial appears more suitable<sup>16</sup>.

Where a person is convicted by a magistrates' court of a scheduled offence, it is not open to him to appeal to the Crown Court against the conviction on the ground that the convicting court's decision as to the value involved was mistaken<sup>17</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 ante. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

<sup>2</sup> For these purposes, 'scheduled offence' means an offence mentioned in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(1), Sch 2 column 1 (as amended). The offences so mentioned are:

500 (1) offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 (destroying or damaging property: see PARA 334 ante), excluding any offence committed by destroying or damaging property by fire (Magistrates' Court Act 1980 Sch 2 column 1 para 1);

- 501 (2) the following offences: (a) aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of any offence mentioned in head (1) above; (b) attempting to commit any offence so mentioned; (c) inciting another to commit any offence so mentioned (Sch 2 column 1 para 2); and
- 502 (3) offences under the Theft Act 1968 s 12A (as added and amended) (aggravated vehicle-taking: see PARA 299 ante) where no allegation is made under s 12A(1)(b) (as added) other than of damage, whether to the vehicle or other property or both (Magistrates' Court Act 1980 Sch 2 column 1 para 3 (added by the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 2(1))).

The provisions of head (1) supra are to be treated as applying only to offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1), ie as not applying to offences under s 1(2), (3) (offences of criminal damage with intent or recklessness as to endangering life or of arson): R v Burt (1996) 161 JP 77, CA. For these purposes, 'the material time' means the time of the alleged offence: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(10).

3 ie in accordance with ibid s 19 (prospectively substituted): see PARAS 1105, 1111 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'the value involved', in relation to any scheduled offence, means the value indicated in ibid Sch 2 column 2, measured as indicated in Sch 2 column 3 (as added): see s 22(10). The value involved is calculated as follows:

- 503 (1) in the case of offences under note 2 head (1) supra:
25. (a) as regards property alleged to have been destroyed, its value, measured by what the property would probably have cost to buy in the open market at the material time;
- 26
26. (b) as regards property alleged to have been damaged, the value of the alleged damage, measured by: (i) where immediately after the material time the damage was capable of repair: (A) what would probably then have been the market price for the repair of the damage; or (B) what the property alleged to have been damaged would have cost to buy in the open market at the material time, whichever is the less; or (ii) if immediately after the material time the damage was beyond repair, what the said property would probably have cost to buy in the open market at the material time;
- 27
- 504 (2) in the case of offences under note 2 head (2) supra, the value indicated in head (1) supra for the offence alleged to have been aided, abetted, counselled or procured, or attempted or incited, measured by the corresponding provision in head (1) supra;
- 505 (3) in the case of offences under note 2 head (3) supra, the total value of the damage alleged to have been caused, measured by:
27. (a) in the case of damage to any property other than the vehicle involved in the offence, as for the corresponding entry in head (1) supra, substituting a reference to the time of the accident concerned for any reference to the material time;
- 28
28. (b) in the case of damage to the vehicle involved in the offence: (i) if immediately after the vehicle was recovered the damage was capable of repair, what would probably then have been the market price for the repair of the damage, or what the vehicle would probably have cost to buy in the open market immediately before it was unlawfully taken, whichever is the less; or (ii) if immediately after the vehicle was recovered the damage was beyond repair, what the vehicle would probably have cost to buy in the open market immediately before it was unlawfully taken.
- 29

The Theft Act 1968 s 12A(8) (as added) (determination of when a vehicle is recovered: see PARA 299 ante) applies for the purposes of the determination of the value involved in respect of offences under head (3) of note 2 supra as it applies for the purposes of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sch 2 para 3 (as added): s 22(12) (added by the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 2(2)). The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sch 2 (as amended) is concerned only with actual values, as described above, and not with any consequential damage: R v Colchester Magistrates' Court, ex p Abbott [2001] EWHC Admin 136, 165 JP 386, DC.

Where the defendant is charged on the same occasion with two or more scheduled offences and it appears to the court that they constitute or form part of a series of two or more offences of the same or a similar character, or the offence charged consists in incitement to commit two or more scheduled offences, the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22 (as amended) has effect as if any reference in it to the value involved were a reference to the aggregate of the values involved: s 22(11) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 38(3)). Whether or not offences form part of a series depends on there being a sufficient separation in time between them; this is very much a matter of degree. Where offences are committed at different places and involve different types of property they may be too remote to form a series: R v Braden (1987) 152 JP 92, DC. Offences which occur simultaneously cannot form part of a series: Re Prescott (1979) 70 Cr App Rep 244, CA.

5 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(3), Sch 11). For these purposes, 'the relevant sum' is £5,000: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(1) (as so amended).

If, where s 22(1) (as amended) applies, the offence charged is one with which the defendant is charged jointly with a person who has not attained the age of 18, the reference in s 22(1) (as amended) to any representations made by the defendant is to be read as including any representations made by the person under 18: s 22(9) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 68, Sch 8 para 6).

6 See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(2). In such a case ss 19-21 (s 19 as amended, prospectively substituted; s 20 as amended, prospectively substituted; s 20A prospectively added; s 21 prospectively substituted) (see PARAS 1105, 1111-1113 ante) do not apply: see s 22(2). The fact that in such a case the offence has to be proceeded with 'as if' it was triable summarily does not mean that it is a summary offence. On the contrary, like any other offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1) (see PARA 334 ante) it is an either-way offence (and therefore an indictable offence) for purposes other than trial, such as the offence of attempt (see PARA 79 ante) (R v Bristol Magistrates' Court, ex p E [1998] 3 All ER 798, [1999] 1 WLR 390, DC), or the alternative verdict provisions of the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3) (see PARA 82 ante) (R v Fennell [2000] 1 WLR 2011, 164 JP 386, CA).

The court is not required to hear evidence as to the value of the property in issue unless it wishes to do so: R v Canterbury and St Augustine's Justices, ex p Klisiak [1982] QB 398, 72 Cr App Rep 250, DC. Where a defendant has caused damage of more than £5,000 in value, which can be itemised into various sums, the prosecution is entitled to charge only sums of damage up to £5,000 in value and thereby ensure that the defendant is tried summarily for criminal damage: R v Canterbury and St Augustine's Justices, ex p Klisiak supra.

Where the prosecution is unable to prove the total amount of damage done by an individual defendant, as where a number of other people have also damaged the property in question, but it can prove the minimum amount of the damage done by that defendant (being an amount less than £5,000) then, unless there is material before the magistrates which gives them any real doubts as to the accuracy of the calculation, the prosecution is entitled to prove only that minimum, and thereby ensure that the accused is tried summarily: R v Salisbury Magistrates' Court, ex p Mastin (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 248, DC.

If the magistrates' court does not categorise the offence as one where the value of the damage was less than £5,000, it is to be dealt with as an offence triable either way in the normal way and is not subject on summary conviction to the maximum sentence laid down by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 33(1) (as amended) (see note 11 infra): R v Alden [2002] EWCA Crim 421, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 74.

10 Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(5)(a).

11 In limited as provided in ibid s 33 (as amended). Where, in pursuance of s 22(2) (see the text and note 6 supra), a magistrates' court proceeds to the summary trial of an information, then, if the defendant is summarily convicted of the offence: (1) the court may not impose on him in respect of that offence imprisonment for more than three months or a fine greater than level 4 on the standard scale; and (2) the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 3 (prospectively substituted) (see PARAS 1105 ante, 1123 post) does not apply as regards that offence: s 33(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 17(3), Sch 4 Pt II; and the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 2(3)(a)). See PARA 1105 note 1 ante. As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to 51 weeks: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 32 para 27 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As from a day to be appointed head (2) supra is repealed: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 304, 332, Sch 3 paras 1, 13, Sch 37 Pt 4 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. The limitation set out in head (1) supra does not apply to an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12A (as added) (see PARA 299 ante): Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 33(3) (added by the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 2(3)(b)). For these purposes, 'fine' includes a pecuniary penalty but does not include a pecuniary forfeiture or pecuniary compensation: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 33(2). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

12 Ibid s 22(5).

13 In accordance with ibid s 22(2), as if s 22(2) applied: see the text and note 6 supra.

14 Ibid s 22(6)(a).

15 le in accordance with ibid s 22(3), as if s 22(3) applied: see the text and notes 7-8 supra.

16 Ibid s 22(6)(b).

17 Ibid s 22(8).

UPDATE

1114 Certain offences triable either way to be tried summarily if value involved is small

NOTE 11--2003 Act Sch 3 para 13 omitted: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 13 para 6, Sch 28 Pt 4.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/16. HEARING, PLEA AND ALLOCATION OF PROCEEDINGS/(4) PROCEDURE FOR OFFENCES TRIABLE EITHER WAY/(iv) Allocation of Trial/1115. Power of court, with consent of legally represented defendant, to proceed in his absence.

1115. Power of court, with consent of legally represented defendant, to proceed in his absence.

Where:

- 1755 (1) the defendant is represented by a legal representative who in his absence signifies to the court the defendant's consent to the proceedings for determining how he is to be tried for the offence being conducted in his absence<sup>1</sup>; and
- 1756 (2) the court is satisfied that there is good reason for proceeding in the absence of the defendant<sup>2</sup>, the following provisions apply<sup>3</sup>.

The court may proceed<sup>4</sup> in the absence of the defendant in accordance with such specified provisions<sup>5</sup> as are applicable in the circumstances<sup>6</sup>.

If, in a case where the offence is a scheduled offence<sup>7</sup>, it appears to the court<sup>8</sup> for any reason not clear whether, for the offence charged, the value involved does or does not exceed the relevant sum<sup>9</sup>, the statutory provisions<sup>10</sup> requiring the court to cause the charge to be written down and read to the defendant, to explain the defendant's rights and to ask him whether he consents to be tried summarily do not apply and the court:

- 1757 (a) if the defendant's consent to be tried summarily has been or is signified by the person representing him, must proceed<sup>11</sup> as if the offence were triable only summarily<sup>12</sup>; or
- 1758 (b) if that consent has not been and is not so signified, must proceed<sup>13</sup> by considering which mode of trial appears more suitable<sup>14</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed if the court decides<sup>15</sup> that the offence appears to it to be more suitable for summary trial, then:

- 1759 (i) if the defendant's consent to be tried summarily has been or is signified by the person representing him, the procedure<sup>16</sup> where summary trial appears more suitable does not apply, and the court must proceed to the summary trial of the information<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1760 (ii) if that consent has not been and is not so signified, the procedure where summary trial appears more suitable does not apply and the court must proceed in relation to the offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>18</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>19</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed if the court decides<sup>20</sup> that the offence appears to it more suitable for trial on indictment, the court must proceed in relation to the offence in accordance with specified provisions<sup>21</sup> relating to sending for trial<sup>22</sup>.
